
Flipped up pickup

A pickup truck driven by Wilbur Smitherman of Jemison plunged over an embankment on state Hwy. 145 near Wilsonville early Friday afternoon. Medics with Harpersville Ambulance were able to get the injured man out through the rear window of the vehicle. He was taken to University Hospital.

Lower speed limits prove to save lives

The 55 mile-an-hour speed limit is continuing to save lives as well as gasoline, according to members of the Governor's Traffic Safety Coordinating Committee.

Fatalities are down from last year, although the number of vehicle accidents on Alabama's highways so far this year is above the total for the same time last year.

Traffic fatalities are down from 342 last year through June 21 to 299 this year, while total accidents are up, 10,645 to 11,689.

"We save 9,000 to 10,000 lives a year in this country because of the lower speed limit," said Capt. John Henderson, commander of the Alabama Department of Public Safety's Safety Education Unit. "And in the first full year after the 55 mile-an-hour speed limit was in effect, traffic fatalities dropped 20 per cent."

Although all drivers are not following the speed limit, the average speed is lower, Henderson added.

J.C. Draper, director of the Alabama Traffic Safety Center at Montevallo, site of the committee meeting, said traveling at 65 rather than 55 mph increases the chance of serious injury in an accident 40 per cent.

Henderson also said that he had proved to himself that driving the lower speed saves gasoline. On a trip from Montgomery to Dothan, he drove a car at speeds of between 60 and 65 with the air conditioner off. After topping the car's gas tank, he turned around and drove back to Montgomery at 55 with the air conditioner on.

He saved three to four miles per gallon at the lower speed, he said, on the trip back to Montgomery.

"There's no question about it," he said. "A car will run more efficiently at 50 or 55 than 60 or 65."

And at $43.50 for the minimum traffic violation fine, driving within the speed limit is a good way to avoid higher travel costs in more than one way, the traffic safety official added.

City of Montevallo plans for open house

City, county, state and national officials are expected to be on hand Sunday when an open house is held in the Montevallo City Hall and at the newly relocated library.

Although extensive renovation work was done at city hall nearly a year ago, the open house was delayed due to the delivery of equipment office furniture and inadequate parking.

The Montevallo Public Library reopened June 4 in renovated quarters behind city hall.

During their tour of city hall, visitors will be able to see not only the Council Chamber, but also the Police monitoring equipment, the offices of Mayor Ralph Sears and City Clerk Don Hughes, the machine that prints water, gas, and sewage bills monthly, and the other side of the drive-in windown.

In the Library, City Librarian Mayme Yarbrough will greet the guests and direct them to the refreshments, where the following will serve punch and cookies: Mrs. Marcia Sears, Mrs. J. A. Brown, Mrs. Delilah Holsomback, Mrs. Barbara Milstead, Mrs. Teresa Nichols, Mrs. Patti Hughes, Mrs. Caroline Scott, and Mrs. Bennie Fancher.

Mrs. Sears and Mrs. Scott are previous Chairmen of the Montevallo Library Board, and Mrs. Scott now serves on the Shelby County Library Board; Mrs. Fancher is a former member of the local library board. Mrs. Janet Noland and Mrs. Anne Milford will keep the guest book which was salvaged from the Depot fire.

Most of the tables and chairs in the library were used in the old library; they were saved from destruction in the Depot fire of December 30, 1978 by the Montevallo Fire Department and other volunteers.

Ruth Robertson, Mark Baker, and Monique VanLandingham will distribute membership cards for the Friends of the Library to those adults who contribute $1.00 and those children who contribute $.50. Membership in the Friends group now numbers 127.

Hosts for the July 8 Open House include Mayor Ralph Sears and City Councilmen J. A. Brown, Johnny Holsomback, David Nichols, Herbie Milstead, and Grady Parker; the Montevallo Library Board composed of Dr. Elizabeth Rodgers (Chairman), Dr. Lucille Griffith, Mrs. Mary Alice Ballentine, Mrs. Anne Hamilton, and Mr. Larry Acton.

Also on hand to welcome guests will be the Friends of the Library led by Mrs. Todd Jeter, President, Dr. Sidney Vance, Vice-President, Mrs. Jean Walker, Recording Secretary, Mrs. Mary P. Smith, Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Judy Morgan, Treasurer, and Mrs. Lavon Acton, Publicity Chairman.

County's gas pipeline system provides vital national link

by David Moore

Waiting in line at gas pumps has greatly increased public interest in the petroleum industry. Once taken so much for granted, people now want to know more facts about those precious gallons for which they pay so much.

Most crude oil, of course. comes from the Mideast, offshore rigs and northwest oil fields. Towering refineries in Texas, Louisiana and elsewhere convert the crude into gas, diesel and heating fuels.

But how do these fuels get from the refineries to the Powderly gas terminal in Birmingham where tank trucks pick it up and deliver it to stations in Shelby County?

The answer is pipelines.

The two pipeline companies serving this area are Colonial and Plantation, both based in Atlanta, and both operating as common carriers for the oil corporations. Colonial has offices and booster stations in Pelham, and Plantation has an operation in Helena.

The two companies are consistently among the top ten taxpayers in Shelby County.

Colonial operates a 4,866 mile pipeline system which pumps fuel from Houston to New York and serves a 13-state area. In 1978 Colonial delivered an average of 1,640,000 barrels a day (42 gallons per barrel).

Plantation's system is similar though not quite so extensive. Both systems are computer automated.

Plantation has a dual branch line (10 and 8 inch diameters) which delivers fuel from its Helena booster station and tank farm to the Powderly terminal. Plantation also delivers shipments to Powderly for Colonial Pipeline. The Plantation tank farm in Helena holds a total of more than 600,000 barrels.

Station operator James Brown of Alabaster says 3.15 million gallons of gas and fuel are pumped daily to the Powderly terminal.

Brown explains that even with the gas shortage they are pumping more fuel than ever. The only effect of the shortage is that deliveries have not increased as expected.

Industry spokesmen point out that transporting gas by pipeline is 2.5 times cheaper than shipping it by coastal freighter.

Colonial's chief inspector Gene Tucker sums up the pipeline system by saying, "We transport the product through the pipeline to the dealer and he distributes it."

Tucker adds, "We're a mobile society and until someone comes up with an alternative fuel, we're going to have to depend on gas and oil."

Laying pipeline

Tractor mounted booms are used to lower welded sections of Colonial Pipeline's Pelham/Powderly pipeline into the ground. Over rocky terrain, such as this on Shades Mountain, the pipe sections are laid to rest on polyurethane pads.

Top underwriter named

Twenty-seven members of the Shelby County Association of Life Underwriters were on hand at a luncheon last week to honor this year's recipient of the 'Life Underwriter of the Year'.

The winner of this year's award was not known until the association's president, Terry Hosmer, read the inscription on the award plaque and presented it to Neil Bailey.

In his acceptance remarks Bailey urged all members of the association to be alert to civic responsibilities. He also related an incident in which insurance for personnel of one of the county's governing bodies was placed with an out-of-county firm rather than with a company located in the county. Bailey urged members of the association to alert government leaders to the fact that members of the organization are anxious to do business with all levels of county government.

In other business, members of the association elected new officers for the 1979-80 year.

Julius Barrett was elected president. Other new officers include: Neil Bailey, first vice president; W. P. "Jim" Blackerby, second vice president; Melvin J. "Jack" Dean, secretary-treasurer; J. R. Hollon, national committeeman; and members of the board of directors Terry Hosmer, Fred Miller, John Pegusky, Olga Martin, Wayne Liveoak and Aaron Sharer.

H. L. Hill, the association's state president, served as principal speaker for the occasion. Hill congratulated the Shelby County association for being one of the fastest growing organizations in Alabama. He also congratulated Bailey for his service that led to Bailey's receiving the 'Life Underwriter of the Year' award and for Bailey's involvement in civic affairs.

Hill singled out Bill Morris for praise for his influence and efforts in legislative matters.

Hill echoed Bailey's statement asking association members to keep a watchful eye on all levels of government and to speak out when unfavorable laws are being discussed.

Presiding at the meeting, held at an Alabaster restaurant, was this year's county president, Terry Hosmer.

School meal prices will go up next year

After approving an increase in the price of school meals, the Shelby County Board of Education Wednesday agreed to use part of the money to purchase a delivery truck for the lunchroom program.

The plan proposed by Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles also included hiring an extra person to work on the truck which will be used for pickup and delivery of food supplies.

Explaining the need for additional funds in the lunchroom program, Knowles said that most systems were in something of a bind financially, especially the smaller ones.

A five cent increase in the price of lunches for high school students will bring the cost to 70 cents. The same increase was approved for elementary school students so the price of their noon meal will be 65 cents.

However, Knowles said he was stronly in favor of bringing the cost of meals for middle school students in line with the price charged at high schools. And the board went along with his recommendation that meal costs for sixth, seventh, and eighth grade students be increased by 10 cents.

A five cent increase in the price of breakfast for all ages will bring the cost to 40 cents.

Another reason for the move, Knowles pointed out, was to keep federal support from decreasing, he noted that the price charged a paying student was supposed to equal the price the system was reimbursed for a non-paying student.

Even with the increase, the superintendent told the Board, "You'll still be a little low." However, Knowles expressed confidence, that with the increase in prices, the lunchroom program would make it through the year.

In order to make the program more efficient, the new superintendent recommended taking 3 cents from the money charged for meals to buy an enclosed vehicle and pay the salary of the additional worker.

A 1 cent charge-back to the lunchroom was approved last year, so the action taken by the Board Wednesday will take another penny from lunch and a penny from each breakfast served.

Three auto dealers had been asked to bid on the delivery truck, but Strickland Chevrolet in Columbiana was the only dealership to respond. The Board accepted their price of $13,677. It was noted that the figure was $5,000 less than the central staff had expected would be the price for a ton and a half truck.

When questioned about how the additional worker would spend his time when the truck wasn't being used, Knowles told the Board that he would be doing preventative type maintenance in the lunchroom program. "There's work there to be done," he assured the panel.

One of the reasons Knowles gave for hiring an extra person was to keep students from being called upon to unload commodities. He also mentioned that maintenance workers were sometimes sidetracked from their duties to help in the lunchroom program.

The salary for the new employee will be $8,064, the same figure that is being paid to the man now working for the lunchroom program.

Good Morning

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

Moments I'd Like To Live Over: The day coach Barcley called out the names of those who'd make the baseball trip to Dadeville, and the way I felt when he called my name.... A day on the tennis court next to Harry Gordon's house with Wesley Duran and a dozen other guys who played up there.... The day I carried my Newala Basketball team to Fourmile to play Shag Stone's boys.... Or that day later on when we won the county championship....

One more Thursday with Jim Merrell, visiting shut-ins up and down Main and then the hospital later on and, still later on, the nursing home.... The day Malcomb Gardner lifted Bernice Lester's pole out of her lake with a snake on her hook and dangled it in front of Ed Benson who was already in the boat, two seconds before he danced a good two minutes three feet in the air....

The first time I heard Josephine on a summer night up Narrows Inn's way, with the place neck deep in pretty girls and laughter and big talk.... Just any one of a thousand bird hunts my dog, Dan, and I enjoyed with guys like Jim Merrell and Herman Strong and Garvin Baker and Nobie Payne and Gus Sutton.... A summer day 60 years ago and that letter Mr. Charlie Niven handed me through the window, after she had gone home and written like she promised she would....

A trip to Choctaw county with Leon Kelly where we'd hunt birds with Harvey and eat Florine's biscuits for dinner.... The first point any fall, with the dogs stretched out, and your heart pounding....

A baseball game in Wilsonville with Amos Daniel holding my golden grain and everybody from here to yonder out there hollering.... Another trip to Sterrett where we'd try to beat the Johnson Twins and Mollie and Ag Brasher and Garvis Goodwin.... Breakfast one morning with some of Granny's home-made sausage and domminecker eggs and, later on, some Marsha Neeley pear preserves and hot biscuits....

The morning Granny told me I could go outside, up to the lot above the barn, to see my chickens, after two weeks and four days inside with the flu.... A trip in a model-T to Walksie creek with real chub minnows from Tinney Branch.... Listening to Jadie Middleton Longshore play the violin.... A trip to Browning Mill Pond over the mountain and past Ben King's place and down the long dusty trail through his pasture....

Swimming in the wash-hole in Longshore's pasture after a midsummer gulley-washer, when we'd get in under the culvert on the railroad and float all the way to the little wash-hole half a mile away.... The day Pennie got my report card, the only one she had got in months, with a D in deportment, almost four months after we'd put the goat on the stage....

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

I envy people who have super sharp memories. But I'd settle for just a plain, ordinary, everyday, run-of-the-mill memory.

What I think may have happened is that my memory bank developed a crack in it, which undoubtedly, must be widening with the years.

Where I really come close to getting into hot water is in trying to put names and faces together. And it's really bad when someone acts as though they've known me for years and I draw a complete blank.

Somehow, I've always been able to ad lib my way out of these sticky situations, but I'm afraid the day will come when I'm going to fall flat on my face.

At a gathering the other day I had a close call. "Hi, Bert," exclaimed the total stranger who was approaching me. I hoped there was another person named Bert standing right behind me. but no one else seemed to be nearby.

"And how is your little granddaughter?" she asked, adding "I'll never forget the time you brought her to my house!"

"Oh, yes" I laughed nervously, "what a visit that was!" Just then, another guest at the affair joined the conversation and saved the day for me.

It's a whole lot easier to play the identity guessing game when both parties admit they can't remember who the other person is.

While wandering down the aisles of a supermarket recently, I had an interesting encounter with someone who also must have difficulty with their memory.

As a young woman passed me with her cart, she suddenly stopped and announced she thought she knew me from someplace. Well, I drew a total blank again, but this time I didn't have to be embarrassed. I tried to help her figure out who I was, or rather where she had known me.

For some reason, neither of us thought to give our names. I suggested that I might have taken her picture for the newspaper, but she ruled that out.

Then I asked her if she had ever exercised and she looked a little startled. "Well, I thought you might have been in an exercise class I used to teach," I explained.

As people pushed past and reached across us to get items off the shelves, we continued to search our memories for clues.

She was finally able to identify me and when she told me her name, I remembered her right away. We had both been regulars at horse shows at one time but she hadn't fooled with horses in years, she told me.

Still feeling smug about the incident, and beginning to think that my memory might not be any more deficient than anyone elses', an unknown individual asked me if I remembered when we had met.

I didn't recall ever having met him, but I bluffed my way through by saying, "No, I don't remember exactly." When he told me it had been 20 years ago, I didn't feel quite so bad.

Why couldn't I have a memory like that?

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

Some Who Did Not Write the Bible

When one studies the Bible, he is impressed with the contrasts between what the Bible teaches and what is many times taught in religion today. Thus, the Bible was not written by certain people who disagree with Biblical principals and truths.

First, atheists did not write the Bible, for Genesis 1:1 states "In the Beginning God created the heaven and the earth." And again, the Psalmist says, "The fool has said in his heart there is no God." (Psalm 14:1)

Second, modernists did not write the Bible, for Isaiah says, "A virgin shall conceive and bring forth a Son and shall call him Immanuel." (Isaiah 7:14) Mary had never known a man when Christ was conceived and when He was born. (Matthew 1:18-25)

Third, persons who teach that infants are inherently, totally depraved from birth did not write the Bible, for Jesus says, "Except ye turn, and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the Kingdom of heaven." (Matthew 18:3) Inasmuch as God is the Father of spirits, (Hebrews 12) the spirits placed in little children must be pure and holy, else God is of the same nature of depravity since we are His offspring. (Acts 17)

Fourth, those who deny that Christ is the Son of God did not write the Bible, for Christ's miracles proved that He was and is the Son of God. (John 20:30, 31) He was proven to be the Son of God by the resurrection from the dead. (Romans 1:4) We are to confess that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. (Acts 8:37)

Those who wrote God's word were inspired of God (II Timothy 3:16, 17) That many religionists of today did not write the Bible is abundantly clear. (To be continued!)

BRING THE OUTDOORS INDOORS

One way to add brightness, happiness and beauty to your home is to bring the outdoors indoors. You can do it with furnishings, color and accessories. Actually, this is one of the fastest growing trends in decorating today.

You can do it by using real things from outdoors--such as flowers; or by using pictures, wall plaques, etc., that depict scenes of nature; or by bringing the best of nature's colors into your home on any number of furnishings.

As to color, you can borrow nature's color ideas for the effects you want; that is, if you want a bright, cheery atmosphere consider some sunny yellows. If you want a relaxing atmosphere, try peaceful blues or greens that nature uses in lakes or meadows, etc.

In addition to making the best use of colors on your furnishings, don't forget flowers or plants--real or artificial. They can do so much. Flowers can be beautiful in every room and in so many places--on a coffee table; in front of a mirror; in corners; on top of a chest; on a shelf under a table or in a bookcase.

Foreign farmers

New Zealanders give recipe

While thirteen New Zealand farmers last week toured the Shelby County dairy farm owned by Doug Kent, their wives took time out to swap some recipes with Mrs. Kent.

One of the favorite desserts in New Zealand, they said, is Pavlova. The meringue dessert, it was reported, was named for the Russian ballerina who introduced the confection to the country.

For any Reporter readers who want to try their hand at making the delicious sounding confection, here is the recipe:

Whip together in a bowl, until stiff

2 egg whites
1½ cups sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. vinegar
1 tsp. cornstarch
6 tbs. boiling water

Pour the batter into two 6-8 inch round cake pans lined with waxed paper and bake one half hour at 300 degrees. Bake another half hour at 250 degrees and then turn the oven off and leave inside till cool.

It's good topped with whipped cream, the New Zealand women related, along with some kiwi fruit.

Artwork for walls

First grade teachers at Thompson Elementary School have been busy making out lesson plans and drawing characters to put up on the walls for students to enjoy. Shown with their handiwork are: Kathy Carden, Judy Trotter, Donna Lovelady and Katie Wright.

Farm League favorites

Sonia Kidd was the overall queen for the Vincent Farm League. Her escort during the presentation ceremony Friday was Cory Kidd. Amy Ruty Lynn was selected queen for the Red's team and she was escorted by Timothy Lynn. The Met's queen, Angie Brown, was escorted by Michale Champion.

Little League queens

Amy Wood was crowned Little League queen in Vincent. She was escorted during the event on Friday by Jamie Wood. Other teams in the league were represented by Mindy Milam, Red Sox, escort Shane Carter; Christi Champion, Braves, escort Jerry More; Jean Marie Raley, Yankees, escort Jerry Raley.

Teachers launch plan

Routine chores that teachers have to perform often rob students of instructional time. In order to remedy that situation, first grade teachers at Thompson Elementary School are employing a technique this fall called team teaching.

Although the new method will mean larger classes, two teachers will be in the classroom. One of the teachers, it was pointed out, will be devoting herself to the students unoccuppied.

The four teachers who will be using the new method say they will evaluate what they've done in May and if it hasn't been successful, they will go back to the standardized way of teaching.

Although they emphasized they new way of handling classes at Thompson is experimental, they expect it to be successful.

Katie Wright, a TES teacher who used the technique during summer school, related that it worked very well.

Learning centers will be used more in the new way of doing things, teachers say, and there will be more individualized instruction. They note it will also employ teachers' abilities to the best advantage.

"Students will benefit," the four say, "By each of us doing our own thing." It was mentioned that one of the group has artistic talent, another is musical and a third member of the team is good with phonics.

It's estimated that each of the two first grade sections will have between 56 and 60 students. While some of the group are occupied with reading lessons, it was pointed out that other students might be doing art work at one of the learning centers in another part of the room.

There will also be floor space for stories, songs and other kinds of activities.

"I think this will stimulate our pupils and us," remarked one of the teachers.

Harbert wins award

John M. Harbert, III, president of Harbert Corporation, has been awarded the Holly Mitchell Award, the highest honor in recognition for his efforts in Landscape Architecture in Alabama.

The award was sponsored by the American Society of Landscape Architects and State Chapter Vice-President, Jay Starbuck, III, along with several local landscape architects, presented the award to Mr. Harbert at the Harbert Corporation Headquarters in Riverchase.

According to Starbuck, the award was given to Harbert for his efforts in producing the Riverchase community.

Riverchase was a joint venture of 3,000 acres in a planned community founded on the basis of sound environmental planning. Harbert Corporation engages on-staff architects to offer daily input to make the community reach that goal.

Over the state sales amounted to $6,797,515. Nationwide, total sales for the month were $618 million. Year-to-date nationwide sales total $3,206,000,000.

Eggers, Glenn and Allmand

First time since WWII

Foxhole war buddies reunite

by Lisa Sims

They had gathered around a table at the drug store for their morning coffee.

Talking about everything from how to get rid of yellow-jacket nests to the root of the nation's gasoline shortage, the three of them had not been together since World War II.

One called "Tex," was a rather hefty fellow wearing a suede cowboy hat. By birth his name is Cecil Allmand and he hails from Abilene, Texas.

Seated next to Tex was a much smaller man who peeked timidly out from under the brim of his Dodgers cap. He was referred to as "Ole Eggers," real name --William Eggers from Grassy Creeks, North Carolina.

And at the far side of the table, Columbiana native W. R. Glenn sat grinning that big watermelon grin that Columbiana folks recognize him for.

"Yeah, 1945 was the last year we saw each other--when the war ended."

The three men were all in the 94th Infantry Division: Allmand was Platoon Sergeant, Glenn, Assistant Sergeant, and Eggers was Platoon Runner.

"First time I ever saw a Russian soldier was that day in September when we marched through Prague, Czechoslovakia at the end of the war," Glenn remembered.

Glenn was only 19 years old; Eggers was 26; and Tex was 25 when Uncle Sam beckoned the threesome into the global war.

"These two accused me of being a kid all the way through that war," Glenn said.

"You might say we raised him," Tex beamed.

They had been apart for 24 years when Tex wrote to division headquarters and got an unofficial list of addresses.

So far, he's been able to contact only Eggers and Glenn. The three plan plan to make their reunions annual.

One other member of the group who was very close to them was a man they call "Frenchie," who was from Los Angeles

"Frenchie died in 1974, so we lost him," Tex said regretfully.

"We were real close. You are forced to get close when you stay in the same foxhole and eat together and drink out of the same cup," Glenn explained.

"Sometimes we stayed in the same foxhole for as long as three weeks," Eggers agreed.

"And something that really brings people together is staying scared all the time."

"Yeah, see we were a front line division--that meant we were right up there where the combat was--the really bad stuff."

Tex remembered one of the bloodiest battles.

"It was when we crossed the Rhine River at Dusseldorf, Germany. When we started we had around 40 soldiers...three days later there were nine of us left."

"Sometimes I remember when our division commander figured it all up," Eggers added. "When the war was over our company had a two hundred percent replacement. Our group was made up of some 190 men and before the war ended, more than 400 had been in it."

"But we grew to love one another just like brothers," Glenn said.

The veterans talked about what it was like to get back to the states after the fighting.

"When I came home I was lost, I sure missed the ole boys, man I missed 'em," Tex said shaking his head.

"Somehow it was hard for the civilians to understand us. They didn't see that what we'd been through made us a united group like a family," Eggers added.

Glenn summed up the reunion of the WWII buddies when he tearfully muttered, "It's just like being away from a brother for a long time...like there's someone missing in the family and you finally find them."

Summertime is picnic time and hard-cooked eggs are a great portable picnic food. Because they're pre-packaged, they're easy to transport and neat to eat, says the Alabama Poultry & Egg Association.

The regular monthly singing at Mt. Era Methodist Church on Highway 26 will be held on July 8 at 1:30 p.m. Sing Spirations Quartet will be the special singers. Robert Moore is chairman.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronny Joiner are the proud parents of a baby girl, Crystal Michelle Joiner. Crystal was born on June 5, weighing 7 lbs. 6½ oz. She's now at home with her parents and brothers, Adam and Glen.

Columbiana summer school aids math and spelling skills

by Lisa Sims

Columbiana Elementary closed out its summer school Friday with fun activities that tested the children on what they had learned.

The summer school, designed to help students in reading and math, enrolled a total of 72 students.

According to the principal, Mrs. Ann Head, "the Title I Summer School has benefited those students who were having difficulty in reading and in math by having close contact with teachers in small classrooms and more individual instruction."

To close the summer's session, teachers planned a revolving course at the outside track beside the school.

Each of four activities were led by a teacher while another teacher kept the children moving from station to station.

The first station, led by Peg Hill, helped the children learn to read numbers and follow directions. This activity included beanbag tosses and footraces.

The next station, directed by Mrs. Vivian Mooney, gave the children the opportunity to show off their spelling skills. When the teacher called out a word, they had to form the word out of lettercards.

Music was the topic of the third session, led by Mrs. Mary Curtis. Children sang favorite songs that they had learned during the past five weeks.

Mrs. Sarah Hughes led the fourth station, a treasure hunt. Children had to read clues to find the treasure which was buried in a sandpile.

But the hardest job of all was left up to Pam Baker. She had to keep the event coordinated and direct children from one activity to the next.

Teachers said they were pleased with the progress the students had made in their reading and math skills.

Ribbon winner

Teacher Peg Hill pins a blue ribbon on one of her students at Columbiana Elementary's end-of-summer-school activity day. The summer school was conducted to help students in reading and math.

Grand opening

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Davis cut the ribbon Thursday morning which marks the opening of Charles Culotta's Piggly Wiggly store in Columbiana. The new supermarkets is the first of four stores to go in the Davis Plaza which is located at Hwy. 70 and 25.

Columbiana Rec Rap

by Susan Harris

Our afternoon field day competition has begun and several people are close in points. The events completed are the ping-pong blow, the building block towers, 50 yard dash and the tennis ball bounce. This week we will finish up with the frisbee throw and the obstacle course. The top winner will receive a trophy and ribbon.

The "Slide" and the "freeze" are the most popular disco dances for the Monday, Wednesday and Friday group along with other fun activities. Kickball and pin-the-tail on the donkey were enjoyed by all on Monday. Memo board and painting were done in crafts. On Friday, everyone played table games until it was time to dismiss for the weekend.

The preschoolers fingerpainted and made colorful designs besides a talent show, games and dances. Their talent show consisted of singers and dancers. At this age, disco dancing is not so popular so we swayed and clapped to our favorite tunes.

Donald Duck and the road runner made an appearance last week in the "Color Cartoon Festival." This week we enjoyed the "Little Rascals" in "Bed Time Worries."

The turn out was not as well as expected for the softball game on June 25th. Those who played certainly had a good time.

I hope everyone had a nice 4th and also hope you didn't miss the hayride and watermelon cut at the 'Rec'.

CARD OF THANKS

Card of Thanks

We wish to acknowledge with deepest appreciation all the expressions of sympathy, the floral tributes, the food and support that was extended to us during the death of our husband and father, Alfred Butler.

We want also to thank the Alabaster Fire Department's Medics and Rescue Squad for their aid and kindness; also a special thanks to Dr. Norman and the emergency room staff at Shelby Memorial Hospital and our family doctor, Dr. Abernathy.

Mrs. Ruth Butler
Mrs. Jim Thompson

In Memory

In memory of my husband, J.W. Blankenship and his sister who passed away 3 years ago the first of July. God take this message to them for me, tell them how much I miss them but what it meant to lose them no one will ever know but God took them home it was his will. I sit and cry for them but God knows best and now they have no more pain. I am all alone now but memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.

But one of these days I will be with you all. What a happy joy that will be. I love you all so much.

Wife, Thelmo Blankenship

Chase enlivens dull newsday

by Lisa Sims

It was a quiet morning in the Reporter's Pelham office.

No news--anywhere.

It's pretty distressing to be a journalist with nothing to write about, especially when you're new at the job and trying to impress your editor.

I'd been groaning all morning about never having a story. It seemed like everyone had a story but me.....

Then it flew past the window of the office--News!

Actually it looked like a modern-day Huck Finn with two six-packs of beer under both arms, and he was running--so fast that he dropped a bottle and it crashed to the sidewalk.

Thinking this was my big chance to make front page, I decided to go after him and find out what was up.

As I rounded the corner of the building, I spied his two eyes under his curly top at the same time he peeked around the wall at me. Instantly he left his six-packs and headed for the wooded area behind the building.

I was scared to run after him because I didn't know if he was armed or not, so I went back to the office and asked a reporter-friend of mine to go with me and check it out.

But first I made him promise that the story would be mine.

As we headed the direction I had seen him last, a passerby shouted to us that the boy had stolen the beer from the Winn-Dixie a few doors down.

We walked down to the ditch behind the building where it is thick with trees and underbrush. Some rustling sounds caught our attention.

(Now I'll call the suspect "Huck" since that's the way I described him.)

My friend heard Huck breathing and told him to get up from where he was lying in the ditch.

"What are you going to do to me?" Huck asked.

"What are YOU going to do?" my friend echoed back.

"Are you with the police or something?" Huck choked.

"No, actually you're talking to Clark Kent and Lois Lane."

The boy may have believed that introduction because when I asked if he'd already been drinking he looked at me through his dazed eyes and grinned, "Yeah, I've had about a six-pack and a half. They kicked me out up at Ripp Tide Lake."

After we had talked to Huck for a few more minutes, he warned us that if we came any closer he was going to run deeper into the brush.

He was barefooted and was wearing only a pair of cut-off jeans. My friend told him, "You do what you want to, but that brush looks pretty thick and you're not dressed to go through it."

About then a motorcycle policeman drove past us and Huck ducked into the woods. An instant later, three Pelham patrol cars surrounded the area and one of the officers let me ride with him.

It didn't take very long for the police to locate Huck because the trees moved as he went through them.

Finally he came out and he was cut up pretty badly.

The officers handcuffed him and put him in the car.

They arrested him for public drunkenness, but Winn Dixie didn't press charges for stealing the beer. We returned the full bottles back to the grocery store manager.

So here's my story....another thrilling day in the life of a busy reporter.

Shelby County Reporter

More little league pictures wanted

Little league seasons around the county are almost completed and the Shelby County Reporter has been making a effort to print team pictures of every team in the county. In the past several weeks, more than thirty teams have had their picture in the paper and more are still to come.

If you haven't seen your team yet, give us a call at 669-2731. If we don't have the picture on file, we'll gladly accept your copy (it's OK if the picture is color) and use it to make a copy for the paper.

We are in short supply of teams from Helena and Montevallo as well as Chelsea, Vincent and Westover.

Children playing baseball is a national past-time and we at the Reporter want to give every player in the county a chance at seeing their team in the paper. Give us a call today and we'll be happy to do our part.

By the way, extra copies of the Reporter at filed in our Columbiana office. If you would like some extra copies give us a call or come by.

Champion Major Dodgers

The Montevallo Major Dodgers won the Major League Championship early last week after another win posted by the team in Jemison. The Montevallo league plays teams from Clanton, Jemison, Thorsby and other Central Alabama towns. Next year the league may combine with Calera to form a new league.

Alabaster Minor Phillies

The Alabaster Phillies took second place in the Minor League. The team recorded a season record of 10 wins and 5 losses. Coaches for the team are Eddy Bentley and Mike Dorough. Members of the team are: (front row) Todd Pyron, Kevin Lee, Chris Dorough, David Walker, David Tannihill; (back row) Ty Flanagan, Brett Bentley, Jason Harris, David Hackaby and Steve LeSuer. Not pictured is Rick Rollin.

UM Basketball Clinic is a cut above the average with its own uniqueness

What makes the University of Montevallo Basketball Coaches Clinic so special, anyway?

There are a number of reasons for the uniqueness of the UM Clinic, which will take place for the 15th consecutive year on July 12-14 on the Montevallo campus.

For openers, the Montevallo get-together is a three-day affair. The golf and tennis tournaments that set the clinic in motion are also pretty special, the golf being a two-day, 36-hole tournament, and the tennis featuring both singles and doubles divisions.

The social aspect is appealing as well, with a large number of coaches from all divisisons gathered together in a rather informal setting. A picnic-style lunch at the College Lake, and a full-fledged banquet with some truly excellent cuisine are also highlights for many.

Everyone seems to have clinics for kids playing basketball, but the UM Clinic strays away from the paths of tradition by being a clinic strictly for coaches, both men and women. A "clinic for coaches" was a concept that a lot of people in basketball circles felt was overdue when the coach at Montevallo 15 years ago, Dr. Leon Davis, decided to go with that particular format.

Indeed, the UM Clinic apparently gets more popular every year. Last year's record turnout of 96 coaches topped the previous mark that had been set just the year before.

But perhaps the finest aspect about the clinics at Montevallo has been the outstanding list of speakers who have been featured. The original clinic was composed of five high school coaches from around the state, but the staffs now consist of coaches from high school, junior college, small college, and major college levels.

This year's keynote speaker is Sonny Smith of the up- and coming program at Auburn University. He will be joined on the staff by Greg Walcavich of Birmingham-Southern, Doug Key of Chattahoochee Valley Community College, Stokley Bazemore of Wetumpka High School, and Jerry Rice of Butler High School in Huntsville. It's another top-notch group of coaches assembled by Montevallo coach Bill Elder, and a group that is sure to both entertain and inform.

For information on how to register, contact Coach Bill Elder at the University of Montevallo.

Farm League Champions

Pelham's Farm League A's have turned in a good season. Members of the team are Michael Metcalf, Russell Kurtts, Daniel Deshazo, Jeff Carroll, David Dixon, Michael Ivey, Kenneth Dunnaway, Doug Sanders, Kyle Cutcliff, Keith Springer, Blake Thomas, Gary Tankersley and Todd Chambers. Coaches for the team are Tom Davidson, Wayne Davidson, William Davidson and James Dunnaway. Team mothers are Pat Thomas, Teresa Sanders and Sherry Dixon. (photo by Richard Crosby.)

Shelby Speedway hosts big July 4th celebration

Shelby Sppedway is preparing for its first annual July 4th race. The all day festivities begin at 10 a.m. with the opening of the Alabaster VFW club's Independence Day Barbecue.

Track manager Jerry Handley told the Reporter that other special events will also precede the afternoon races.

"We'll be having a watermelon eating contest, bicycle races and a dunking machine," Handley stated. Fans will be able to take a chance at dunking their favorite or not-so-favorite driver with a good softball throw.

Racing begins at 2 p.m. and headlining the day will be a 50 lap stockcar race. A full field of drivers is expected for this main event. The racing card will also include heat races and time trials along with the buggy race feature.

Shelby Speedway is loacted off Highway 31 on County Road 87. The money raised during the races will be used to buy lights for the track and Handley expects that they will be installed and working near the end of the month. Once the lights are added racing will be held on Saturday nights at the local track.

There will also be a fireworks display at the conclusion of the July 4th races. Barbecue will be on sale all day long and there is no admission chanrge for the a)early morning activities.

Thousand dollar quilt

Lela Bell Porter of Shelby, manager of Porter's Grocery, displays the quilt she sewed by hand to raise money for the parsonage of the Shelby Church of God. The quilt contains the names of 394 interested persons who donated money for the cause. Mrs. Porter, who raised $1000 with the project, said it took three months to complete. The pastor, Rev. James R. Prince, said the money will go for the purchase of windows. He and men of the church have been building the new parsonage for some four months. (Photo by Sims)

TES summer school 'can be turning point'

Hot air balloons have been suspended from the ceilings of Thompson Elementary School during the Title I summer school program.

The colorful models were put up for decoration and to carry out this year's theme of "Up, up and Away."

Despite the short duration of the summer program, one teacher remarked that "It can be the turning point for any number of students throughout the county."

The program is helpful because of the concentration of math and language skills they receive on an individualized basis.

"The short day and removal of much of the competition that some students fear in the regular school situation, " is responsible, one teacher noted, "for students to grasp information they missed during the regular term of school."

According to the staff of the Thompson Elementary School summer program, the atmosphere for learning has been the key to success there. "Even though the schoolroom structure is maintained, the students come into the program in a more relaxed frame of mind," one teacher noted.

It was pointed out that every effort is made by the administration and staff to stimulate the student by creating an atmosphere conducive to his or her own learning ability.

The physical appearance of the school is partially responsible for making learning fun and exciting, say staff members. Brightly colored decorations, such as the hot air balloons, posters and bulletin boards add to the visual aspect of the program.

Live plants and well kept grounds also help students appreciate the school, remarked a teacher. "The children appreciate what we offer, he said, "and they don't damage or destroy the plants and decorations because they feel they are partly theirs."

SPECIAL SERVICES

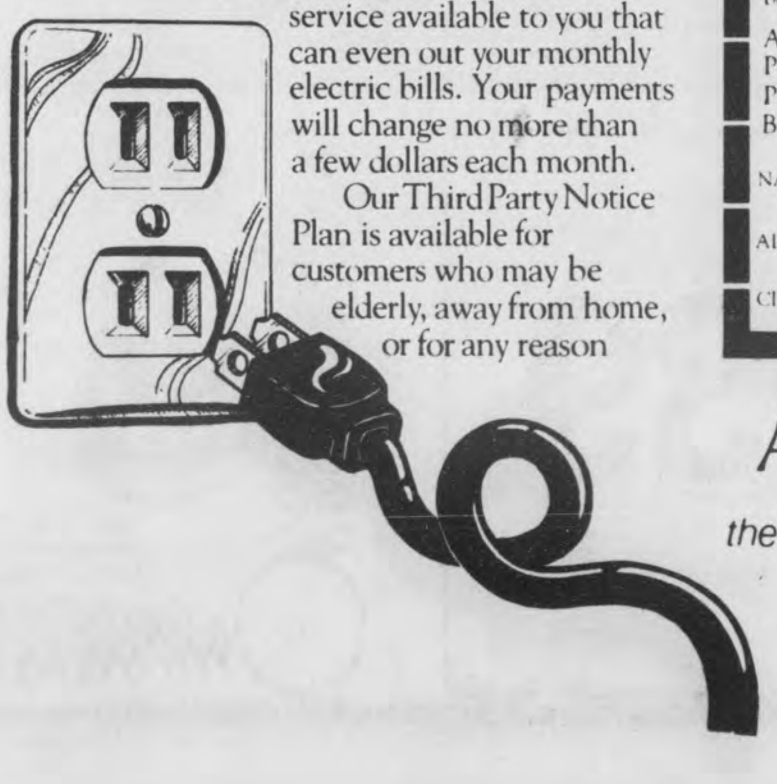
During the next few months, you'll probably be spending more for electricity than you did this past winter. That's because we're heading into the hottest part of the summer. And that's when most electric bills get higher because you use more electricity for air-conditioning.

ENERGY INSPECTION

But here are some ways that you can keep your costs down. They won't solve all of your money problems this summer, but they can help.

You can have one of our representatives come to your home for an Energy Inspection that could help you save energy and money.

Levelized Monthly Billing is a service available to you that can even out your monthly electric bills. Your payments will change no more than a few dollars each month.



Our Third Party Notice Plan is available for customers who may be elderly, away from home, or for any reason unable to respond to a notice that their electric service will be disconnected.

Or, if you have any questions about your electric bill, simply call your nearest Alabama Power Company office for assistance.

To lower your costs even further during the summer months, keep your air-conditioning thermostat at 78° or higher.

We want to help you better manage your electric bills. So send in the coupon below for more information about the many special services available from Alabama Power.

When the door clangs shut.....

What do you do about bail?

by David Moore

The cell door clangs shut in your face. Maybe you're guilty, maybe not. Either way, you probably don't care to sit in jail and wait for your trial date. You want out.

There are four (legal) ways to do this. If you have the cash, you can make your own bail. Or if you've been locked up for a traffic violation, some municipalities will hold your drivers license in lieu of bail. Or maybe two property owners in the county of your offense might be willing to sign a property bond for your release.

But what if you don't have the cash, or you're not in for a traffic violation, or you can't find property owners to sign for you? What then? You have but one option: call a bondsman or bonding company.

The bondsman can get you out of jail, but the service is not free. The charge runs from 10% - 25% of the amount of the bond, and general policy is to collect cash on the spot. You do not get this money back.

At the time your bond is made you are notified of your court date. Until then the bondsman is your legal guardian.

Should you skip bond and fail to show up in court, the judge will issue a conditional bond forfeiture and an alias warrant for your arrest. As your legal guardian, the bondsman now has 30 days to get you back in jail.

According to local bondsman Johnny MacCrawford, about 25% of his clients skip bail. "What makes it a high percentage is a lot of people neglect it (their court date) for some reason. They say their lawyer was going to handle it, or they weren't notified."

If you skip bail and a bondsman or a law enforcement officer has not rearrested you within the 30 day period, the judge issues a final forfeiture on your bond. This leaves the bondsman to foot the court cost plus the amount of your bond. (You, of course, still have an outstanding warrant against you.)

Shelby County circuit clerk Kyle Lansford points out, however, that not too many final forfeitures are issued.

Crawford says he has had to chase down alias warrants as far away as California and West Virginia. This sort of business can be risky and, Crawford notes, "You should use common sense because you could get your head blowed off." He has had butcher knives and "small things like that" pulled on him before.

The bondsman's job is not always easy or pleasant. Futhermore, not everyone holds this profession in high esteem.

Sheriff Buddy Glasgow describes his department's relationship with bonding companies as having "its ups and downs". He says problems sometimes arise in collecting from bonding companies on final forfeitures.

An officer with the Pelham police department states that it is unfair that police and county deputies often have to make arrests on alias warrents. "The public pays to collect no-shows for the bondsmen," he says. "We've had very poor luck with (bonding companies)."

The Pelham officer adds, "Bondsmen do serve a purpose. You're entitled to make bail. But these guys really clean up."

An inmate at Shelby County jail says, "Why pay a bondsman when you can get someone with property to sign for you? They're a rip-off."

Kentucky Governor Julian M. Carroll was recently quoted as saying the commercial bondsman is "a parasite that preys upon the poor...someone who makes a buck on another's misfortune."

In 1976 Kentucky passed a statute making it "unlawful for any person to engage in the business of bail bondsman." The state reports it is doing well with its program of releasing "good risk" defendants on their word to show up in court.

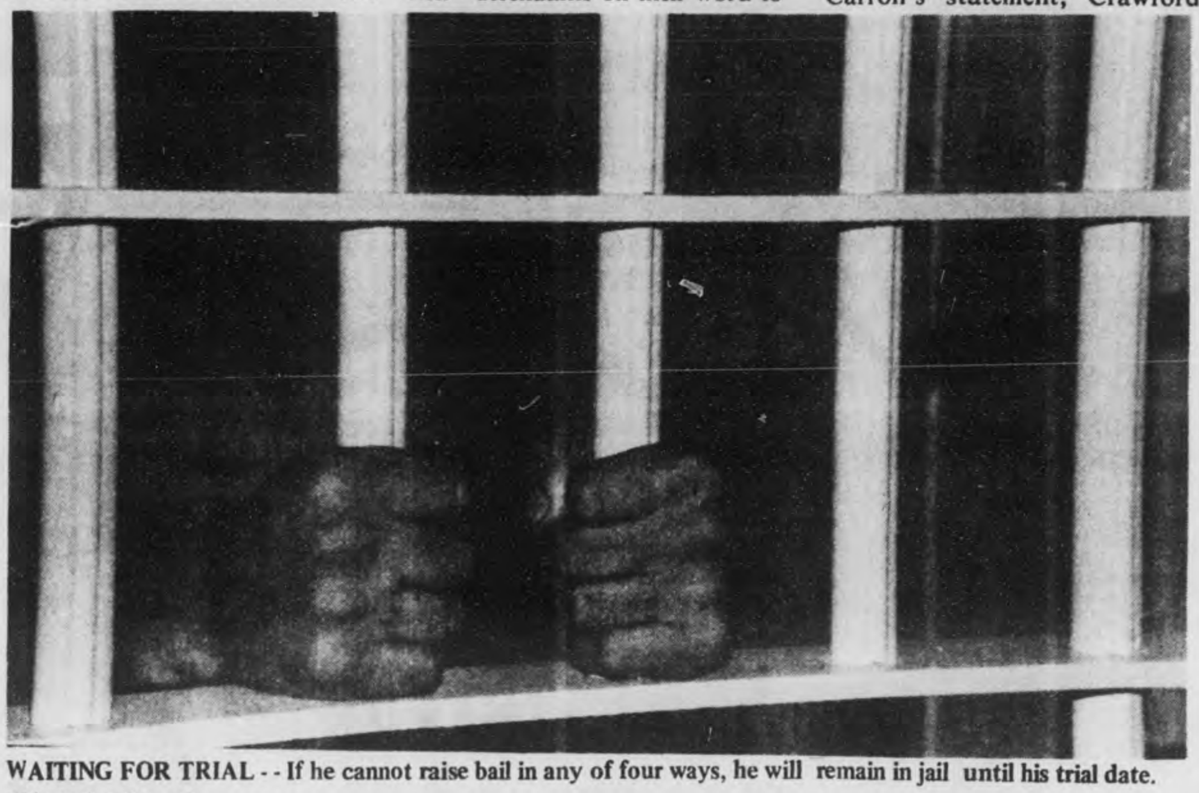
In reference to Governor Carroll's statement, Crawford says, "That's his business about what he wants to say. Everyone's entitled to his own opinion. That's one to laugh at."

A number of bonding companies from surrounding counties are licensed in Shelby County, as are several private bondsmen. Crawford, a retired Air Force master sergeant, has been a private bondsman for five years.

Crawford emphasises the point that no one is forced to call a bondsman, and adds that more people now are released on property bonds than by bonding companies.

"There's a lot of bonds you can get if you go for them. I don't handle them unless they call me," says Crawford. "You use common sense and treat people like you'd want to be treated."

District court magistrate L.C. Payne, a former mayor and county judge, states, "It's necessary to have bondsmen. I don't see how they could operate the system without them."



WAITING FOR TRIAL - - If he cannot raise bail in any of four ways, he will remain in jail until his trial date. (Photo by Moore)

County faces new borrowing

by Marcia M. Sears

The Shelby County Commission will have to go back to the bank for another loan to tide it over the fiscal year.

The Commission's financial advisor James I. Harrison told the Commission Monday that $86,000 more will be needed at a minimum to pay county expenses through the end of September.

The county borrowed $430,000 against next year's revenue sharing funds. But that loan did not include the costs for paying the deputies' back salaries or their increased salaries as a result of a recent Supreme Court decision.

As Harrison outlined it Monday, the total county debt for the rest of the fiscal year amounts to $516,000. This includes the $260,000 deficit in the general fund; $95,000 deficit in the gasoline fund; $131,000 in back pay to deputies; $25,000 in increased pay to deputies; and $5,000 for interest on the first loan.

As at a previous Commission meeting suggestions were made for tightening up county operations but no definite steps were taken.

Instead the sheriff's department sent Chief Deputy James Jones to the meeting with Dr. Al Graves a professor of criminal justice at the University of Alabama in Birmingham who told the Commissioners they should hire at least 19 additional people for the sheriff's department.

Graves quoted national statistics and court orders to back his figures and warned that the county could be sued by prisoners if the jail were inadequately staffed.

Graves had helped to arrange the transfer of women prisoners from Shelby County to Jefferson County when the county had to drop five former CETA workers including matrons from jail duty. The women were exchanged for men prisoners because Jefferson County had space at the time and matrons to provide services to the women prisoners.

Shelby County has five matrons on the payroll but they are needed for various office and administrative duties according to the sheriff's department, and are not scheduled to work any night shifts.

Probate Judge Tommy Snowden and the Commissioners asked Graves how he thought the county could pay for these additional people in light of the county's need to borrow over a half million dollars merely to meet the present payroll and expenses.

Graves came through with the suggestion of using seven interns from UAB, financed by a grant that would cost the county nothing. He arranged for the interns over the lunch hour.

Graves volunteered to conduct a study comparing Shelby County's law enforcement with that of other counties in the state and report back to the Commission in two weeks.

Chief Jones also requested that salary increases be approved by the Commission so the department could promote someone to add another lieutenant and another sergeant from within the ranks of the present department. The increases in salary would amount to about $50 per payday, Jones said. The Commission took no action.

Local funding proposed for interchange

by David Moore

The Alabaster Chamber of Commerce is proposing that Operation Interchange be built by matching federal highway funds locally. The proposal was presented by a delegation which met in Montgomery July 2 with State Highway Director Dr. Rex Rainer.

Initially, the delegation set out to find where Operation Interchange stood in the highway department's priority listing.

Chamber V.P. John Ferree said that although Dr. Rainer considered the Alabaster interchange a viable project, he pointed out to the delegation that due to the defeat of Gov. Fob James' 4¢ gas tax, there was no money available for the state to match the federal funds.

"Dr. Rainer didn't hold out much hope for us," said Ferree.

During the discussion, Operation Interchange Chairman Sherman Holland inquired about the feasibility of raising the 10% matching funds locally with in-kind services and products.

Estimated cost of the interchange project which is proposed for Hwy. 11 (Simmsville Road) and I-65 has been given at approximately $2 million. Federal funds for the project would cover 90% of the cost, leaving about $200,000 which would normally be paid by the state.

According to Holland, after some discussion Rainer indicated that "he saw no reason why the project could not be completed if funds were matched locally."

Since the meeting with Dr. Rainer, Holland has said he would donate the use of a number of diesel dump trucks for the project.

Earl Standifer, an Alabaster businessman, has gone on paper saying that he would furnish all the chert-fill material necessary for the project.

Holland requested that the County Commission consider providing in-kind help for the project such as road equipment and/or labor.

But at County Commission meeting Monday, the Commission stated that they were in no position to provide any money. The Commission, however, said they highly favored the interchange and could make inquiries into right-of-way land donations by individuals.

County Highway Director Jimmy Ray said that if the proposed highway between Columbiana and Pelham/Alabaster incorporated the Simmsville Road/I-65 overpass, it would save $1 million on that project in bridge work.

At Tuesday night's meeting (this paper's press time) the Alabaster Chamber of Commerce went on record supporting a drive to raise the 10% matching funds for the interchange to be built.

The Chamber has strongly supported the construction of the interchange, saying it would save time for emergency vehicles going to Shelby Memorial Hospital, save fuel for nearly all area residents, and keep the Alabaster business community from being isolated when the freeway is opened.

Holland told the Reporter that raising the matching funds locally would be an excellent vehicle to draw the community together through a common project.

"We'll all benefit from (the interchange at I-65 and Hwy. 11), but we'll all have to work for it," Ferree pointed out.

Coal lamps donated to UM

Three early coal mine safety inspection lamps were donated to UM last week by retired U.S. Steel Co. mine inspector Robert R. Jones of Helena. One of the lanterns, a "Davy Lantern," invented in 1815 in England, may be more than 150 years old, Jones said.

The Davy lantern, which was the prototype for all mine safety lanterns, and two other safety lanterns were given to Jones by a Scottish mine safety inspector, W. N. Tinman, who moved to Birmingham in the early 1900's and worked in area mines as a "fire boss."

Used to detect methane, also known as swamp gas, marsh gas or fire damp, the lamps use the principal of holding a flame within gauze. Flammable gas in the mine, he said, would make the standard flame burn brighter without exploding.

Special oils, particularly whale oil, were used as fuel in the lamps.

Jones, 81, who began work in the mines at age 10 for 59 cents a day, said the invention and use of the lanterns saved many lives. Inspectors took the lanterns with them to survey mines before each shift, he said.

The lamps and an English book on coal mining printed in 1896 will be displayed in the UM library with the Civil War era coal mine carts found by U.S. Steel officials while excavating for new mines in northwest Shelby County.

Brown said he donated the antique lanterns to UM because the coal carts were already on display here and because Shelby County is the site of the beginnings of Alabama's first major coal mining. "We live in Shelby County," Brown said, "and it's in the heart of the coal mining country. Shelby County really began it."

Contractor sought for fire station

by David Moore

Pelham Fire Station Number Two will enclose 4090 square feet--if someone can be found to build it.

When the city opened bids on the new station last week, only one contractor responded. Bill Kinnebrew, a local contractor who bid over $149,000 on the project, was disqualified because he was not licensed as a general contractor.

Neither Mayor Burk Dunaway nor PFD Chief William Bryars have been able to figure out why no more than one bid was made on the building.

Mayor Dunaway said that since the bids were closed, he has been approached by several contractors interested in the building. He added that Kinnebrew could bid the project again after obtaining the proper license.

One alternative open to the city would be to build the new fire station itself, subcontracting the different aspects of construction to individuals. But Dunaway indicated he preferred the general contractor approach. A new date has not been set, should the project be rebid.

Dunaway said he thought the $149,000 bid Kinnebrew gave was high.

A temporary fire station became operational last Friday at Search reveals no body

Deputies from the Sheriff's Department conducted a futile search Sunday afternoon for the body of a woman who had been seen earlier in the day walking along County Road 43.

According to reports, a motorist who had observed the woman walking along the road at 5:30 a.m. noticed a woman's underclothing lying in the same general area later in the afternoon.

A search of the area behind Mountain View Lumber Company went on for approximately an hour after the witness called at 3:30 to report seeing the garments.

No trace of a body or any foul play was found.

Board ponders fate of RMS teachers

by Bert Seaman

After emerging from a two hour session behind closed doors Monday, the Shelby County Board of Education approved the proposed cancellation of contracts for two Riverchase teachers.

No reason was given for the proposed dismissal of the teachers who transferred from Pelham when Riverchase opened.

Complying with state law, the Board will not make a final decision on terminating the employment of Odessa Jackson and Willie David Johnson until a hearing is held.

No date for the two 7th grade teachers to appear before the Board has been set, but according to Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles, it cannot be any sooner than 20 days after they have been notified by certified mail and no later than 30 days.

Those who were present during the lengthy discussion of the teachers, which included studying their personnel folders, were: attorneys Oliver Head and Sonny Conwill, Riverchase Principal Dr. Bobby Anderson, the Board's Personnel Director Vern Davis, the Superintendent and members of the Board.

Jackson, who has been in the Shelby County School System for four years teaches math, and Johnson, who teaches social studies, has taught in the county for five years.

Reporting that he had talked to a number of people about filling the vacancy that was created by the resignation of Ben Howell, from the Board, Knowles recommended the appointment of J.H. "Jack" Upchurch.

The Columbiana resident was principal of Shelby County High School for a number of years before he left the teaching profession. However, remarking that she had never made his acquaintance, Board member Barbara Whitman said that she would like to meet with Upchurch before casting her vote.

It was agreed that the matter be tabled until the Board's next meeting July 25.

Because of her experience, Knowles recommended that Patricia Bulger be appointed to the county's Personnel Appeals Board and the Board was unanimous in their agreement.

The Board was informed that the request for another member of the education profession on the Appeals Board had been made by Commission Chairman Tommy Snowden.

In other action, the Ed Board appointed E.B. Hughes as campus custodian of SPMH and Cen-

Finances weave thru Montevallo meeting

The city's tight financial situation was a theme that weaved its way throughout this week's meeting of the Montevallo City Council.

In analyzing the picture, Finance Committee Chairman J.A. Brown noted that the city is entering the final quarter of the current fiscal year and most of the annual revenues have already been collected. How to stretch the dwindling dollars over the next three months was the topic as each committee chairman made his monthly report.

No cutbacks were ordered. It was agreed, however, that a loose moratorium be placed on all but emergency spending.

Finance Chairman Brown asked all departments to submit proposed budgets for the next fiscal year as soon as possible. This is designed to give the finance committee ample time to weigh projected revenues against requested expenses.

In other business Street Committee Chairman Herbert Milstead announced that replacement street identifying markers are currently being installed at intersections. City Clerk Don Hughes explained that replacement signs are being installed first and that new signs for intersections where no signs exist will have to wait until the power and telephone companies locate underground cables.

Milstead and Hughes reported that household garbage and discarded appliances are being dumped in the area where the city disposes of leaves and tree limbs. They attributed the recent dumping to a new fee being charged at the county's landfills. Hughes received authorization to erect a fence and gate at the site in an effort to stop the illegal littering.

In a follow-up report to the June 25 meeting Hughes reported that he has been in contact with the city's legal counsel regarding complaints against two fraternity houses. No solution to the problem was forthcoming from the law firm, according to Hughes.

Hughes also reported that a County Health Department representative had inspected property at 295 Highland Avenue and 298 Oak Street last week and found both pieces of property to be rid of certain health hazards that existed earlier this year. Both houses have recently been acquired by Aris Merijanian and both are undergoing refurbishing and remodeling.

Among topics discussed was a proposed city-wide back-to-school promotion. Radio Station WBYE, the Shelby County Reporter and the Shelby County News were asked to make promotional presentations at the next meeting of the Chamber, scheduled for August 14. Representatives of the media agreed to present ideas, themes and sample advertising messages at the next meeting.

Another topic discussed centered around a proposal to improve existing sidewalks and build new sidewalks throughout the city's business district. Representatives of the Chamber plan to attend next Tuesday's meeting of the Calera City Council to explore various sidewalk proposals.

In other business a schedule of dues was discussed and names of proposed officers for the upcoming year were submitted.

Supervisor reports

Landfill system proves success

Shelby County's Solid Waste Supervisor Carlton Franks, reported to the County Commission Monday that the new system at the landfills is proving successful.

He indicated there had been no complaints from regular users of the landfills. He said that when individuals drive up to any of the three county landfills without a permit, they are permitted to unload once but are told of the new system where they must buy coupons to pay for the privilege.

The new system went into practice July 1.

Frank's report to the Commission is as follows:

1. The three landfill gate keeper houses have been built and put in use.

2. Five "Ceta" workers have been hired to operate landfill gates. (Two more needed.)

3. 1729 Auto and pickup permits have been issued.

4. $5,197.50 worth of industrial permits have been issued.

5. The general public's acceptance has been outstanding, no complaints have been registered.

There are still some rough spots that must be worked out. I have had some difficulty obtaining qualified CETA workers. For this reason, there have been times when the gates were not in operation as planned. However, I expect this to be eliminated shortly.

I respectfully request that you approve the expense for the following items which will be necessary toward improving the program.

1. Wire and paint the buildings.

2. Allow extension phones to be installed.

3. Give me permission to rent a construction type toilet for the Calera Landfill.

County engineer backs 4 ^c gas tax

Shelby County's veteran highway engineer wants the state legislature to pass the governor's proposed four cent gasoline tax.

In a statement issued Monday, Engineer James L. Ray, Jr. issued a four page explanation of why the state and county needs the additional funds for highways.

He pointed out that for the past five years Shelby County has not had the funds to pave a single mile of new road. He says that with existing revenues, "It is all we can do to just attempt to maintain on a day to day basis our 900 miles of Shelby County highways, roads, subdivision streets and 306 bridges."

The price of asphalt which is one of the major materials used in highway work, has risen from 10 cents per 60 gallons in 1973 to 37 cents today - an increase of 270%, Ray notes.

He also pointed out that the price of regular gasoline and diesel fuel as given in sealed bids to Shelby County on March 1 this year was 52 cents per gallon (tank wagon price) and now, only four months later, is 72 cents per gallon.

Tax revenues now collected from gasoline are based on number of gallons sold, not on the cost of gasoline. Tax revenues have grown only two to four percent per year since the first Arab Embargo in 1973.

Ray says, "The current proposed 4 cents per gallon gas and fuel tax legislation that will self-destruct in four years would bring in $3.1 million to Shelby County."

He concluded his appeal for support of the tax with the statement, with 34 continuous years as a professional civil engineer in Shelby County's Highway Department, my only interest is the welfare, safety and preservation of our county system as well as those of the municipalities and the State Highway Department. Only a few productive years remain for me, so I certainly have no selfish motive and will also be paying whatever the cost may be."

"I strongly suggest that more revenue must be generated, or an already dire state of maintenance and construction will be in unacceptable distress."

Courthouse Dome

Shelby County Planner Paul Owens presented drawings to the County Commission Monday outlining proposed new office space in the courthouse and annex. They were drawn up by Owens and Kenneth Walton.

The plan would move the computer terminals to the second floor of the annex. The Extension offices would remain in the same place, but the Commission offices would also be moved to the second floor.

Space for the Tax Assessor is said to be the most critical need because of the large maps and books that will become county property when the reappraisal program is finished.

Owens said that there is a 34% increase in space available now that the Board of Education offices and the jail have been moved.

The third floor annex space formerly occupied by the jail would house offices of the Farmers Home Administration and the ASCS. The Tax Assessor would also have about 489 square feet according to Owens' plan.

Heads of all departments are being asked to study the drawings and make suggestions before any further plans or moves are made.

Potential adpotees becoming scarce

Editor's Note: This article is one in a series on the programs and services of the Department of Pensions and Security, which has offices in all 67 counties.

According to State Department of Pensions and Security Commissioner Gary Cooper, adopting a child in Alabama is a time-consuming and aften difficult process for couples who want a healthy, white infant.

The Commissioner added that the process was not due to government bureaucracy, but to the fact that healthy white infants available for adoption are scarce and becoming more so.

"I often receive inquiries from prospective parents who do not understand why they have not yet been given a child despite the fact that they were approved for adoption many months and sometimes years ago," said Cooper. "There are simply more couples wanting to adopt than there are available children."

He pointed out that the number of children available for adoption through the Department of Pensions and Security was fewer during the past year than it was the year before, and if the trend continues, there will be even fewer children this year.

"This trend is national in scope," said the Commissioner. "Factors that contribute to the decline include the contemporary tendency for unmarried mothers to keep their babies, the easy availability of abortion, and the widespread use of birth control."

Cooper said that the agency received 233 children to place for adoption last year (33 less than the previous year), and 217 were actually adopted.

He added that the shortage is primarily of white infants, and that there are often more children in some groups than there are families that want them. These groups include black children, children in family groups-brothers and sisters-older children, and physically and mentally handicapped children.

Cooper said that his agency welcomes applications from couples interested in adopting black and handicapped children. Those interested should contact their county department of Pensions and Security.

All applications for adoptions are carefully investigated first by county staff and then reviewed by the state staff in Montgomery. The decision of whether to approve is made jointly by the county and state offices.

The time lapse between application and approval may last from six months to a year. However, the waiting does not necessarily end with the approval of the application.

"Many people think that adoptive applicants are served on a first come basis," he said, "but this is not true. We make every effort to place each child according to the child's individual needs and interests and according to what kind of a child the couple will accept."

Pensions and Security began the current fiscal year with 357 approved adoptive homes, and an average of 21 applications has been approved each month since the year began. There is no predictable average waiting time between approval of the home and the actual placement. It often takes years.

Commissioner Cooper pointed out that the agency places for adoption only those children whose parents' rights have been terminated by court action. Legal complications and appeals often cause delays in the placement of a child in a permanent home.

Students cry 'wolf' with gag fire alarms

Dear Sir:

Montevallo has one of the finest volunteer fire departments in the State of Alabama. It is a shame that someone takes delight in mocking it by turning in false alarms.

The students living in main dorm on the University campus had better hope it never catches fire because the firemen may be slow to respond thinking it's another false alarm. But the Montevallo Fire Department is too dedicated for that, as they have so proven by the way they have consistently responded to these false alarms at Main Dorm. Whoever is doing it is probably doing it for a joke, although I see nothing funny in dragging men out of their daily routine at all hours of the day and night. A false alarm is treated like any other alarm, even if the firemen know it is false, the trucks roll up to Main Dorm. They send men into the building in breathing apparatus to search every single room and make sure it is false. That is what is done every time there is a false alarm at Main Dorm.

One of these days Main Dorm may really catch fire, and somebody may have cried "wolf" one too many times.

Sincerely,
Henry Sledge

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

Moments I'd Like to Live Over: The seat wasn't made for the boat. But it was all I had and it had to do. But it wasn't too bad if you sat still and didn't move. No more than the little movement you made in your chest with the air coming in and going out.

But who can sit perfectly still on a lake with a full moon in April and a little wind blowing and the blackbirds prissing about in the reeds like blackbirds do when spring sets their blood on fire.

I don't know if bluegills can read signs. Or if they can read anything for that matter. But there's one sign that's sho as shooting: when there's a full moon in April and you're out hunting bluegills you'd better get your best hold, because the big bulls are on the bed then and they're mean enough to take your pole.

I don't recall what time I got there, or if there was anybody else around. It must have been around two o'clock. And there must have been two big-town dudes on the bank. All of which you'll find out before we cover many more paragraphs.

The place was Roland and Bernice Lester's lake. There's never been another place like it for bluegills. He'll lay in the shallow water behind two rough banks and fight you tooth and toenail from the time he swallows your bait until you get him in the boat.

I guess it was about two o'clock when it happened. The bluegill bed was about ten inches further than I could reach, sitting straight on my seat. So I'd lean over, pitching my bait as far as I could. It must have been my fifth pitch when I spied the moccasin. And that did it. I turned around too quick and the next thing I knew I was in the lake. My seat was floating off, toward the bank and toward the moccasin.

That would have been the end of the tale except for one thing. The next week I was back up there. And there was these two big-town dudes standing on the bank.

"Wonder what happened to that little bald-headed guy who was up here last week," one was saying, a little laugh bubbling up in his throat.

"I don't know," the other said. "But he could run. Did you ever see a guy run that fast."

"And on the water too." He laughed louder now. The sound hung in the air. "But did you notice that his feet were a good two feet above the water."

"I bet he didn't even get his shoe soles damp."

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

A child's imagination is a wonderful and mysterious thing.

I mean, would you ever think of using buttons and boots as make believe people?

Well, I know a little girl who does just that, and it's not because she lacks for toys.

While typing up a story at home the other day, I heard her in the next room talking to Brownie Higgins.

That didn't sound as though it would be a doll's name. But she has all kinds of stuffed animals and little model horses, so I thought she must be addressing one of them.

When I went to investigate though, I couldn't see anything but a row of buttons in front of her.

Shaking her finger at a rather innocent looking medium size brown button, she scolded it for not following instructions. "Shape up Brownie Higgins," she admonished, "or you're going to be in big trouble!"

Some of the buttons seemed to be trying to get away, I gathered, since their bedtime was approaching. As I watched, I noticed a couple fall off the table and roll underneath.

One button had apparently made good its escape. "I wish you'd come back Bluie," the little pretender implored. "We really miss you."

But just then another mischevious button claimed her attention and the runaway was forgotten for the moment.

Boots also seem to hold a special kind of fascination for this young lady. And tucking them in for a nap is a favorite pasttime.

The boot family seem to cooperate better than the buttons, but getting them tucked in is more time consuming.

Since she feels the family room is the best place for their nap, they have to be transported from the utility room down a long hallway. And we have an abundance of boots.

When they're all settled carefully on their sides, they have to be covered. If there aren't enough of her old baby blankets to go around, she uses bath towels.

Anyone walking through the room has to do a little side stepping of course, so the boot family never get very long naps.

However, there was one occasion I was glad the sleeping family were in their places when a salesman came to the door.

"You'll have to speak quietly," I whispered, because we've just gotten our boots to sleep."

He said he'd come back another time, but for some reason, I haven't seen him again.

Bounced checks are top offense

Issuing worthless checks now tops the list of offenses for which arrests are made in Montevallo. Kirkland's monthly police report shows that more fines were collected for this violation of the law than for such traffic violations as speeding, reckless driving, driving while intoxicated or any other offense during the month of June.

A new reporting form was used by Kirkland for the first time this month. The report to the council shows the activity of each member of the police department including number of arrests, number of days on duty, traffic accidents investigated, miles driven and cars stopped.

This month's report shows that 122 tickets were issued during June, $3884.47 collected in fines, 20 city prisoners were held for a total of 66 days and that police personnel drove nearly 8,000 miles while on patrol duty.

Tax climate is favorable in Alabama

It was written in Wisconsin, for Wisconsin, by the Wisconsin Department of Revenue's division of research and analysis, but it says more for Alabama's "Corporate Tax Climate" than anything thus far written in and for Alabama.

The study, using six hypothetical corporations (paper products, facricated metal products, machinery manufacturing, scientific instrument manufacturing, food manufacturing and processing, and printer publisher) compares state and local taxes each would pay in each of 16 states.

Wisconsin makes the point that its tax structure is by far the most favorable to industry among the Midwestern states, ranking among the four lowest-cost states along with Alabama, Louisiana and Texas.

However, in the detailed study, it is Alabama that comes out on top, time and time again.

One conclusion: "The highest tax costs for all six corporations occur in California. The lowest costs occur in Alabama for all six corporations."

And: "On average, the corporate tax liability in the highest taxing state is 3.2 times higher than the tax liability in the lowest taxing state."

The 1977 study (another is to be published next October) has been reprinted by the Alabama Development Office and is available on request.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

Some Who Did Not Write The Bible

Those who teach that there are no conditions of pardon with which a person must comply for salvation did not write the Bible, for the Hebrew writer stated that "Christ is the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Hebrews 5:8, 9) Unless one knows God and obeys the gospel of Christ, he will be eternally lost. (II Thessalonians 1:6-9)

Those who teach that a person is saved by faith only did not write the Bible, for James says, "Ye see how by works a man is justified, and not by faith only." (James 2:24)

Those who teach that baptism (immersion) in water does not save did not write the Bible, for Peter stated, "The like figure where unto even baptism doth also now save you." (I Peter 3:21) Ananias told Saul, "Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling upon the name of the Lord." (Acts 22:16)

Those who deny that a child of God can so sin as to be finally lost did not write the Bible, for Paul said, "Take heed, brethren, lest haply there shall be in any one of you an evil heart of unbelief, in falling away from the living God." (Hebrews 3:12) Paul stated that he buffeted his body daily, lest even he, an apostle of Christ, should become a castaway. (I Corinthians 9:27) He warned, "Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall." (I Corinthians 10:12)

Let us go back to the Bible for the basis of faith and practice!

UNITED FEDERAL ANNOUNCES BIGGER RETURNS FOR SMALLER SAVERS.

At United Federal you don't have to have big bucks to get big returns. Because at United Federal, we've made some big changes for small savers.

5-1/2% INTEREST ON REGULAR SAVINGS (STATEMENT AND PASSBOOK).

At United Federal all new and existing regular savings now have a higher interest rate of 5-1/2%. That's a yield of 5.65%. So if you've been putting off putting a little away, open a savings account at United Federal and reap a bigger and better return on your money.

MINIMUM DEPOSIT ON CERTIFICATES DROPPED TO $100.

All certificates, with the exception of Money Market and Jumbo Certificates, now have a new minimum deposit of $100. That's $900 less than what it was. At United Federal we're making it easier for small savers to take advantage of higher interest rates.

INTRODUCING THE 4-YEAR VARIABLE RATE CERTIFICATE.

At United Federal there's an entirely new way to save money - the 4 Year Variable Rate Certificate. Unlike our regular 4 year certificate, the Variable Rate Certificate has an interest rate that is set monthly, 1% below the 4 year average for U.S. Treasury Securities. So when you open a 4 Year Variable Rate Certificate you lock in that month's interest rate for the term of your certificate.

UNITED FEDERAL EASES EARLY WITHDRAWAL PENALTIES.

Federal regulations require interest penalties when withdrawals are made before certificates mature. Federal law now allows United Federal to ease those penalties. Now for certificates of one year or less, early withdrawal will mean a loss of three months' interest, only on the amount withdrawn. For certificates of more than one year, the early withdrawal will mean a loss of six months' interest, only on the amount withdrawn. The old withdrawal penalty will remain in effect on all certificates issued before July 1, 1979. On Money Market Certificates, all interest is forfeited in case of early withdrawal.

INTEREST OPTIONS AVAILABLE ON MONEY MARKET CERTIFICATES.

Money Market Certificates (MMC) customers may choose any one of three ways to receive the interest their MMC earns: (1.) 1/6 of the total interest is deposited automatically each month into our customer's 5.50% regular savings account. (2.) 1/6 of the total interest is sent by check each month to our depositor and (3.) the total interest earned is available at MMC maturity - as it has been in the past.

Importantly, options 1 and 2 could mean additional earnings and flexibility for United Federal MMC depositors.

All savings deposits earn interest compounded continuously, except Money Market Certificates and Jumbo Accounts, which earn simple interest.

At United Federal, we can't make those shrinking dollars any bigger, but we can help you get more of them. So if you're thinking of opening a savings account, look to the people who've been paying savers more for their money for over 30 years.

Look to United Federal.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Alabaster eateries cater to customers

When you're traveling through Alabaster at mealtime there are two outstanding places to visit where you can find foods prepared with delicious flavor and distinction.

Keat's Deli and The Breakfast House are not run-of-the-mill eating places. Both of them remember that you are an individual and prepare and serve foods especially to your order.

If it's breakfast you're looking for, The Breakfast House is open from 5:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. serving hot homemade biscuits, fluffy cheese omelets, bacon and Southern-style grits.

The atmosphere of the Breakfast House is like what you find in your hometown cafe or drugstore, informal and friendly. Friends, neighbors and business men gather for coffee and discuss happenings from all around.

Manager Mark David says that after people try the menu at his establishment, they usually end up being regular visitors. In fact, he says that he comes to know each customer personally if he can.

If it's lunch or suppertime, you can go one door down from the Breakfast House to Keat's Deli. Keat's is open Mondays through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Specializing in big juicy sandwiches with steamed buns, manager Keat de la Torre recommends his famous New York Reuben with lean corned beef and piping hot swiss cheese.

Cheeses and meats are sold by the pound. When you're planning a party, Keat's party trays provide the perfect answer to pleasing your guests and you don't have to slave in your kitchen.

According to de la Toore, the thing that makes Keat's different from most grocery store delicatessens is that their meats are deli-cut meats, high quality smoked, aged and seasoned meats that can't be bought in the grocery stores.

Even if you're simply in the mood for a hot dog, Keats offers you a different kind of hotdog-a big fat juicy all meat weiner inside a homemade bun.

Every day Keat's offers you a $1.95 special-you get a sandwich, a bowl of homemade soup and a medium size drink.

Keat's is not another fast food place because food is prepared while you wait, the way you request it. But Keat's has a casual atmosphere complete with pinball machines and juke boxes for little kiddies as well as grown-up kiddies to enjoy while they wait. And when you taste the difference in quality, you'll be glad you waited.

So if you're traveling through Alabaster or just live there, satisfy all those hunger pangs--at breakfast or at lunch-stop in at either The Breakfast House or Keat's Deli, which ever fits your needs at the moment.

National Standard's earnings drop

National-Standard Company's estimated earnings for the third quarter ended June 30 will be significantly lower compared to the same period in 1978, according to T. H. Pearce, Chairman of the Board.

The lower earnings are due primarily to reduced third quarter shipments to the rubber industry because of inventory accumulations during the first six months and continuing losses in tire cord operations.

"We look for continued softness in the fourth quarter, and therefore anticipate that earnings for the full year ending September 30, 1979 will be at least 15% lower than those of the prior year. The earnings report for the third quarter and nine months will be released about July 16," he concluded.

National-Standard Company manufactures a wide range of wire products, fabricated metal products and specialized machinery, with 22 domestic and seven foreign facilities.

The company has plants in Columbiana and in Childersburg.

Family loves dip

Hamburger dip recipe entered in Cook-off

by Bert Seaman

When Faye Shaw visited her sister in Virginia several years ago, she never dreamed that the beef dip she created would be entered in a statewide recipe contest.

But on Saturday the concoction will be one of the entries in the Beef Cook-off which is sponsored annually for members of the CowBelles organization.

Recalling how the idea for the dip was conceived, the Westover resident said that she and her three sisters decided that one with hamburger in it ought to be good. So they set about experimenting.

A friend related that the dip which resulted has been described as "fantastic" by everyone who has sampled it. "People often like it better than the main course," Mrs. Shaw noted.

Observing that the dish is now a family favorite, Mrs. Shaw's daughter said it is served at most get togethers including Thanksgiving and Christmas. And the dip is also standard fare now at church gatherings.

The inventive cook and her husband Lane Shaw built their home on the old family homeplace eight years ago. It's about two miles from Union Methodist Church where Shaw is choir director.

Although she enjoys being in the kitchen, Mrs. Shaw doesn't have much time to spend there as she's employed by a Birmingham surgeon.

Mrs. Shaw has been a member of the CowBelles for three years. If anyone would like to try her recipe, which will serve 20, the ingredients are as follows:

2 lbs. lean hamburger

2 small (3 1/8 oz.) cans Frito bean dip

1 8 oz. can taco sauce (I use mild)

2 4 oz. cans green chilies (not Jalapeno - too hot)

1 envelope taco meat seasoning

Salt, pepper & garlic salt, to taste

1 or 2 tomatoes, chopped

Same amount chopped lettuce

1 onion, chopped (optional)

8 oz. Monterey Jack cheese, grated (can use part cheddar)

Saute meat; pour off excess liquid. Add bean dip, taco sauce, chilies and seasonings and put in 1½ quart casserole.

Bake at 350 until bubbling. Stir in chopped lettuce, tomato and onion and cover with cheese.

Serve in chafing dish with fritos.

(If cheese does not melt completely, place under broiler briefly.)

Homecoming set for New Hope

New Hope Presbyterian Church will hold its homecoming Sunday, July 15, at 12:30.

Everyone is invited to bring a dinner for a picnic on the grounds, or in the fellowship hall in case of rain. Congregational singing will be led by Stewart Bowman.

The Jubilairs, a special guest quartet from Jackson, Tennessee will sing at 1:30.

New Hope Presbyterian Church is located at 5100 Cahaba Valley Road (Hwy. 119) north of Pelham.

Cecil Nummys honored by Harpersville Church

The Wesleyan S. S. class of Harpersville United Methodist Church entertained with a covered dish dinner Tuesday June 26 in the home of Mrs. J.H. Kimbrough honoring the retiring Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Nummy. Everyone enjoyed the delicious food and reminiscing of by gone days.

Mrs. Nummy is taking a leave of absence from teaching an adult S. S. class, and Mr. Nummy has retired from 15 years service in Shelby County Sheriffs' Department. They plan to spend quite a while traveling to many places of interest.

Mrs. Kimbrough offered toasts to the couple with God's richest blessings during their travels.

Paving set for Hwy 17

NOTICE TO RESIDENTS
County Highway 17 - U.S. 31
Northeast to U.S. 280

The Shelby County Commission is desirous of resurfacing (paving) your highway this year if at all possible.

To do so, will require the use of federal aid secondary highway funds if they can be acquired. We have been and are trying hard to get the funds.

Inflation has affected the cost of asphalt and other materials greatly and the resurfacing (paving) only (excepting the I-65 area construction) will cost approximately $300,000 at current prices. Of this amount, hopefully federal aid funds would amount to 75% or $225,000 with $75,000 (25%) matching county funds that we will have to borrow.

To use federal funds we must increase the pavement width to 22 feet and the roadbed to 30 feet. This will require considerable work on our part filling and cherting which we will begin in the next few days again hoping we can secure federal funds.

We realize this will be of some inconvenience to you and humbly ask your understanding and cooperation. Please drive carefully! The end result will be a safer, wider, smoother highway for you. Thank you.

Home Decorating with Becky

YOU DON'T HAVE TO FURNISH DRABLY

Most women spend the greatest portion of their lives in their homes. Since this is true, do you ever wonder why people don't surround themselves with more beauty in their homes? After all, it doesn't have to cost any more to furnish attractively than it does to do so drably.

Perhaps we are "too close to the woods to see the tree". It is somehow easier for most of us to recognize the shortcomings of the furniture and furnishings in someone else's home than in our own.

In many cases, the addition of one single item in a room can change it from something dull to a thing of beauty.

Take a good, long, objective look at your furnishings and ask yourself, "What can I do to add beauty to my every-day living?"

Make believe that you are a military officer inspecting his troops. Take a memo book and pencil, make a slow and careful inspection of the rooms you live in and write down all the possible improvements you could make to beautify your surroundings.

You may suddenly discover that a pretty new sofa or pair of lamps will transform your living room, or that some vivid color is needed to bring a sweep of new life to your rooms.

In any event, a visit to us can start you on your way to adding new beauty to your way of life. Come on in and browse at two locations.

Brantleyvile driver wins July 4 race at Shelby Speedway

Great racing greeted Independence Day celebraters at Shelby Speedway last week. Track Manager Jerry Handley said of the day, "We had the best racing we've ever had, and I'm not exaggerating!"

The big winner of the day was Ronnie Gothard of Brantleyville who won the McCreary Racing Tire 50 Lap Modified Race. Gothard drove his 1966 Chevrolet to the checkered flag in sweltering 100 degree heat.

The race was not a cakewalk for Gothard. Alvin Wallace of Alabaster looked like the man to beat with Billy Massey hot on his trail in second place but spunout halfway through and went to the rear. That moved Gothard to second and two laps later Wallace spun out and Gothard took the lead. Despite having to go to the rear of the pack, Wallace worked his way back up and pressured gothard for the final ten laps. On the final lap of the 50 lap race both Wallace and Gothard were side by side in a finish not unlike those at Talladega and Daytona. It was Gothard that got a fender length lead as the cars came out of the final turn and he held on the final 100 feet.

The win was worth over$500 to Gothard who took home cash and a complete set of McCreary dirt track racing tires. Wallace ended up second with Billy Massey third, Greg Buse fourth, and Paul Walden fourth.

In the 25 lap Bomber Division, Art Brackin of Jemison took first place with Gordon Champion of Chelsea second, Steve Payton of Calera third, Buddy Thomas of Harpersville fourth and Gary Perry and Willie Norris sharing fifth place.

Bobby Carter of Bessemer took first place in the 25 lap buggy race. Bennie Brasher of Calera took second with Jerry Carter third, Ricky Majors of Brantleyville fourth and Cecil Oaks of Vandiver fifth.

Earlier in the day, the Alabaster VFW Post began its barbecue sale with track officials taking turns on the dunking machine and wives holding a garage sale. There was also a watermelon eating contest held on the track with two men tying for the prize. Both consumed an entire watermelon in less than two minutes.

Track manager Jerry Handley also told the Reporter that lights have been purchased and will be erected as soon as possible. When those are installed, Shelby Speedway will change its racing program to Saturday nights under the lights.

Racing will again be held this Sunday afternoon with the gates opening at Noon and racing starting at 2 p.m.

Gothard scores big win

Pelham welterweight joins league

The Pelham Youth Football Association joined the newly formed Alabama Youth Football (AYF) League. According to Bob Gignilliat, Pelham Youth Football Commissioner, one reason that Pelham joined the new league was that the league is part of a National Football Association which allows an outstanding team to advance to national champions. Fifteen other teams in the league which include Hoover, Leeds, and Cahaba Heights.

The League will be divided into two divisions. The current plans are to group the teams into geographic areas so that the distance between teams will be minimum. All regular scheduled games are to be played on Saturday. The home games will be played on the Pelham High School field.

The AYF League has seven age and weight divisions for the teams which range from 7 years old and under 65 pounds to 15 years old and 130 pounds. This year Pelham plans to expand from three teams to five. The five teams are as follows:

75 pound-teams for players 8 years of age and under, cannot be 9 years of age prior to August 1 of the current year.

85 pound-teams for players 9 years of age and under, cannot be 10 years of age prior to August 1 of the current year.

95 pound-teams for players 10 years of age and under, cannot be 11 years of age prior to August 1 of the current year.

105 pounds-teams of players 11 years of age and under, cannot be 12 years of age prior to August 1 of the current year.

115 pounds-teams for players 13 years of age and under, cannot be 14 years of age prior to August 1 of the current year.

Pelham may expand to 6 or 7 teams in the future.

In an effort to allow every player to play in each game the team's roster will not exceed players. Registration will be the Pelham City Hall on July and 28 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. T first week of registration limited to players who hav previously participated in th Pelham Youth Football League. Rosters will be filled on a first come first served basis. Players must have a photostat copy of their birth certificate to register.

The registration fee will include team insurance, game jersey to keep, and use of all required football equipment except shoes, mouthpiece, and other personal items.

The Board of directors is now accepting requests for coaching positions. Adults desiring to coach a team should send a letter stating what team they wish to coach to P O Box 761, Pelham. The coaches will be selected July 15.

UM signs two more baseballers

A pair of Kansas City, Kansas, natives have signed 1980 baseball scholarships with the University of Montevallo.

Right-handed hurler Tom Bukorac of Kansas City Kansas Community College, and catcher Ron Potter of Johnson County Community College, are the newest Falcons, bringing to seven the number of announced signings by UM coach Bob Riesener.

Both players were recommended to Riesener by Coach Kenny Gonzalez of Kansas City Community College, who was assistant coach under Riesener at Montevallo in 1975 and 1976.

"Both of these players have the potential to step in and help us immediately," observed Coach Riesener, "and we're counting on them to replace some of our key loses next year."

Columbiana Rec Rap

Even though the days are getting hotter, the kids still like outdoor fun. The park is their favorite area to eat lunch and play. At the rec, the elementary group enjoys baseball and volleyball outside.

The pre-schoolers made fruit and vegetable presses last week along with other exciting things. They were quiet at storytime and loud at songtime. Singing is one of their favorites and they do it very well.

Ping-pong and pick-up sticks are the highlights of the afternoon group. The girls in this group are practicing on their disco-dance for the showcase planned in August.

Paul Doughty came in first in our field day activities with 16 points. Ashley Phillips came in second place with 14 points and Kenneth Smith, third with 13 points. These events took several days and everyone tried their best.

Our film was "Bed Time Worries" with the funny Little Rascals. Cartoons are in line for this week with "Speedy Gonzales."

A special thanks to Donna Smith who works at the rec and is great with the kids. She really has fun and enjoys playing with all.

Very few came to our watermelon cut and the hayride was rained out. Adults, where are you? After the let downs at the softball game and the watermelon cut I'm beginning to appreciate your children the most. I hope they stay interested and rub it off on their parents.

Blue Ladies win two tourneys

Two first place trophies in two weekends. That's the enviable record racked up by the Montevallo Blue Ladies Slow-Pitch Softball team.

Last weekend the team from Montevallo allowed only nine runs to be scored against them throughout the entire tournament. The Blue Ladies went undefeated and captured the championship of the 13-team Tuscaloosa Women's Softball Invitational Tournament.

This weekend the team from Shelby County traveled to Arab and won the Brindle Lee Mountain Ladies' Softball Classic in a 24 team tournament.

In the Tuscaloosa tournament the Blue Ladies got things off to a fast start by shutting out the first opponent, the Shirley Sluggers from Jasper 12 to 0. In the second game the MMI sponsored Blue Ladies took only five innings to defeat Tuckers from Montgomery. The score: 18 to 5 in favor of the Blue Ladies.

In a third game played at night the Blue Ladies beat J.D. and Company 6 to 4. J.D. and Company is a team from Danville.

The same two teams met in the championship game. The Blue Ladies scored another shutout, beating the team from Danville 24 to 0.

The Blue Ladies, coached by Montevallo's G. D. Jones took the championship honors. J. D. and Company of Danville placed second. Tucker Hardware came in third.

Thirteen teams participated in the invitational played in Tuscaloosa this past weekend.

In the Brindle Lee Mountain Softball Classic the first game saw the Blue Ladies shut out the First National Bank of Arab 7 to o in a five inning contest. The second game was won by Coach Jones' team 7 to 4 over the Birmingham Spirits. Game number three also went to the team from Shelby County. It was 9 to 4 over the Birmingham Streakers.

The fourth game was dropped by the Blue Ladies. They lost to the Birmingham Misfits.

The loss put the Blue Ladies into the losers' bracket. However, they came back and posted two shut outs, first over the Cullman Classics, 5 to 0 and then they defeated the Birmingham Misfits 8 to 0.

In the finals the Blue Ladies beat the Birmingham Misfits 8 to 6. This gave the team from Montevallo championship honors in the Brindle Lee Mountain Classic.

The Blue Ladies now return to Montevallo to host a Montevallo Park and Recreation Department ladies' invitational tournament. The invitational will be played in Montevallo July 20 and 21 and will be under the direction of Ott Knight, Montevallo Park and Recreation Department director.

Still on the agenda for The Montevallo team is the Class A Women's tournament to be played in Tuscaloosa July 27, 28 and 29.

On August 3, 4 and 5 the Blue Ladies will compete in the Women's Major tournament to be held in Lagoon Park in Montgomery. The two top teams in this tourney will advance to the regional playoffs to be held in Tampa, Florida in mid August.

Fish saving methods

by Bob Brewster

Catching and then having to release fish is a strange thing to fishermen who have usually kept most of their catch.

But with more people fishing these days, biologists are imposing length limits on many species in order to assure continued good fishing.

In doing so, they realize that some fish will be injured and will die without being utilized as food for humans.

But the dead fish will likely be used as food by other kinds of animals, so all is not lost.

Fishermen can help to reduce the mortality rate of released fish by using proper release techniques.

In the case of a swallowed hook, don't pull on the line or hold the fish suspended by the line.

Keep the fish on the water and cut the line near the hook.

One catch-and-release method which many anglers shun, is a landing net.

Trap the fish in the net, slide it to the boat, reach down, release the hook and turn the fish loose.

This simple method eliminates handling the fish and thus destroying the protective slime on its body.

Plus, the fish isn't injured by lifting if from the water and placing undue strain on its internal organs.

If you don't have a net, you can hold toothless fish by the lower jaw, remove the hook, and release the fish.

Toothed fish can be held over the back just behind the gills. All this is done in the water.

Shiloh leads league at Camp Branch

Shiloh leads the Camp Branch Softball League. The team posts a 15 win and 3 loss record for the season. Summer Hill is in second place with a mark of 14-5.

Camp Branch is in the third spot with a record of 13 wins and 6 losses. Scottsville is fourth at 12 and 5, and Elliotsville rounds out the top five with a 12 and 7 record.

The remaining teams in the league and their records are as follows: Concord 11-8, Bay Springs 9-10, Christ United 8-9, Shelby 8-10, Homewood 7-11, Ken Terry 5-13, and Cross Creek 0-19.

Terry Edwards, 11, of Montevallo, proudly displays a six-lb. bass he landed on Sunday, June 10. Terry says his secret was a red-tailed black worm. Terry and his uncle, Jerry Edwards, were fishing on the Warrior River when the fish took the bait.

Panning for gems yields $1350 stone

Rubies are Columbiana rock-hound's jackpot

by Lisa Sims

Some may claim he has "rocks in his head," but Willard Holcombe of Columbiana has been a rock-hound for 25 years and he has valuable gems to show for it.

Protected in pill bottles, baby food containers, and pint fruit jars, Holcombe has a collection of precious gems and minerals--rubies, sapphires, garnets, rhodolite, and rutile--all that he's mined himself.

For the past eight years, Holcombe and his wife Bennie have vacationed in Franklin, N.C. where they mine for rubies and sapphires in the famous Cowee Valley mines.

The Holcombes say that the area is peaceful and beautiful and that mining for the precious gems is "just plain fun."

The mines, located in the North Carolina Smokies, are the main tourist attraction in the Franklin area. According to Holcombe, there are 15-20 different mines and in a good gem season, there might be 200-250 people in a single mine.

Ruby mines are not in anyway similar to underground coal mines, Holcombe says.

"Actually what you do is buy a bucket of dirt and gravel," Holcombe explains.

In the Cowee Valley, rubies and sapphires are found along the Caler Fork of Cowee Creek in a layer of sand and gravel that lies about 10 feet below the ground surface. One theory is that the layer of sediment containing the gems was washed out of the mountains centuries ago. A 163-carat ruby is the largest ruby ever found in the Cowee Valley area.

Holcombe himself has found a rare three-quarter carat rose-colored ruby in the Cowee mines. He had the stone faceted and his daughter, Karen wears it in a solitaire setting. Jewelers tell the Holcombes the stone is worth $1350.

According to the Columbiana rock-hound, the mining process is simple, but is time-consuming and requires a bit of good luck.

Miners can enter a mine for a fee ranging from $3 to $5 a day, and for an additional dollar can purchase four two-gallon buckets of dirt.

The rest of the process involves a lot of patience and luck.

Anxious prospectors sit in the hot sun hunched over a wooden trench filled with muddy water. With the gravel in screen-bottomed trays, they wash the sediment layer by layer, straining to see red, blue and amber colored stones--rubies and sapphires.

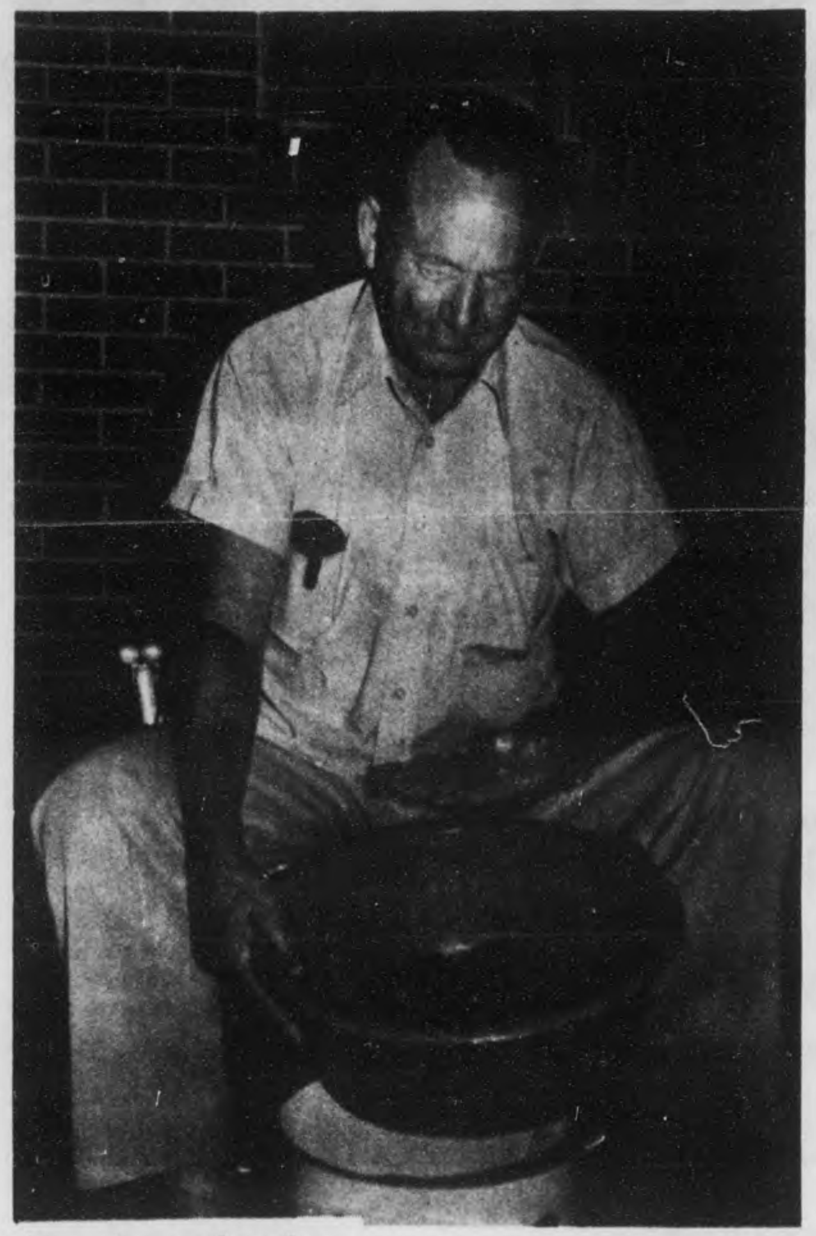
All rubies and sapphires are made of the mineral corundum. The color depends on other minerals the stone has come in contact with.

Mrs. Holcombe warns that rock-hounding is not a "clean hobby" and recommends that amateurs wear comfortable shoes, old clothes, suntan lotion and a hat.

Mr. Holcombe also cautions that amateurs should not let just anyone facet and cut the stones they find. Often, Indian rubies, which are nowhere near as valuable as the North Carolina stones, may be substituted by crooked jewelers.

Despite the sticky mud, and the hot sun, Holcombe says the satisfaction of discovering a real jewel is like hitting the jackpot on a slot machine.

"I guess I feel like someone who sees three cherries roll up on the slot machine, when I see that red rock shining through the water," Holcombe laughs.



Rock enthusiast

July 15 is last day for undersized mail

July 15 is the deadline mailers have, to use up small and undersized envelopes and cards, according to local postal authorities.

Starting July 15, the Postal Service makes its new size standards effective. Cards and envelopes measuring less than 3½ inches high or 5 inches long no longer will be mailable and will be returned to sender.

Extra large First-Class envelopes--more than 6 1/8 by 11½ inches--will incur a 7 cent surcharge if they weigh one ounce or less.

Birmingham Postmaster Charles D. Moore advises these oversized pieces will be returned to the sender if they do not carry the 7 cent surcharge but can be remailed if the surcharge postage then is affixed. However, delays for these pieces can be avoided if mailers make sure that sufficient postage has been applied.

The new regulation also will prohibit thin or flimsy cards. After July 15, the cards must be at least seven thousandths (.007) of an inch thick. "Small envelopes and flimsy cards tend to jam mail processing equipment and cause damage to other mail as well," explained Postmaster Moore.

"The surcharge on oversized or odd-shaped pieces is intended to cover the added cost of handling such pieces which must be processed manually," he said. "These standards have been established to allow the Postal Service to process mail more efficiently and this will mean better service."

Olympics held

A family olympics is being held Sunday in Montevallo's Orr Park.

The First United Methodist Church is sponsoring the event which will include such games as checkers, shaving a balloon, sack races, and an ice cream eating contest.

Members of the congregation will bring sack lunches and meet at the park after church.

The concluding event of the afternoon will be a softball game pitting the 5-22 year olds against the 23 and up group.

Pet Show at the Rec Building in Columbiana--

Attracting first place attention was Mike Hill, five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Hill, with a bowl of gold fish held tightly in two little hands. Sam Roberts and his white rabbit won acclaim, too, and many, many others, too numerous to mention.

In Memory of Alton Young

It is a dark and dismal place, For I no longer see his face, I close my eyes and recall the past, Our lives were so happy, I thought it would last.

He was so good to everyone, So patient and so kind, He was the most wonderful person that you would ever find, He did good deeds for everyone, With a smile upon his face, He was someone very special to me, No one could ever take his place. We do not understand, Why God took him away, We loved him very very very much, And wanted him to stay, He has no pain, or sorrow now, And he is happy there I know, And I hope to see my Dad when it's time for me to go. My Dad has gone now, And things are not the same. The only thing I have left now, Is the trip down memory lane.

Your daughter,
Angela Purser.

CARD OF THANKS

Perhaps you sang a lovely song
Or sat quietly in a chair
Perhaps you sent beautiful flowers
If so, we saw them there.
Perhaps you sent or spoke kind words
As any friend can say;
Perhaps you were not there at all
Just thought of us that day.
Perhaps you prepared some tasty food
Or maybe furnished a car.
Perhaps you rendered a service unseen
Near at hand or from afar,
Whatever you did to console the heart
We thank you so much-whatever the part.

The family of Hosea T. Holcombe.

ky divers seek thrills over skies of Vincent

by David Moore

Three thousand feet over the Vincent drop zone, Ray Hara opened the door of the plane. It was hot inside the stuffy Cessna cabin, and hotter still inside my jumpsuit. The cool air felt good, somehow alive.

"Get ready," Hara said.

I've done some crazy things before, but I'd never jumped out of an airplane. Oddly enough, there were no butterflies swarming in my gut, I wasn't shaking and I didn't feel like throwing up. None the less, Hara's voice was calm and reassuring.

"Okay, cut it," Hara said. The pilot throttled the plane back to 90 mph.

My mind was racing with the thousand do's and don'ts they taught me during my two hours of training, the things I needed to remember to stay alive. There was too much to think about to allow any time for worrying. What would be, would be.

"All right, David. Get out of the plane."

I swung my legs out the door, feeling the hard push of the wind. I grabbed the wing strut, found the small steel step mounted on the landing gear and pulled myself out the door. It's true, I thought. Sky diving is a crazy sport.

The wind was hard now against my body. I looked at Hara, not the ground.

"Okay, jump."

His ever calm voice caught me totally off guard. In the movies the paratrooper commander always barks tearse, dramatic commands.

"Now?" I asked, expecting something more.

"Now."

Raises fatten pockets of three county officers

by Marcia M. Sears

It is celebration time in Columbiana for three officials who saw their salaries take a big jump last week.

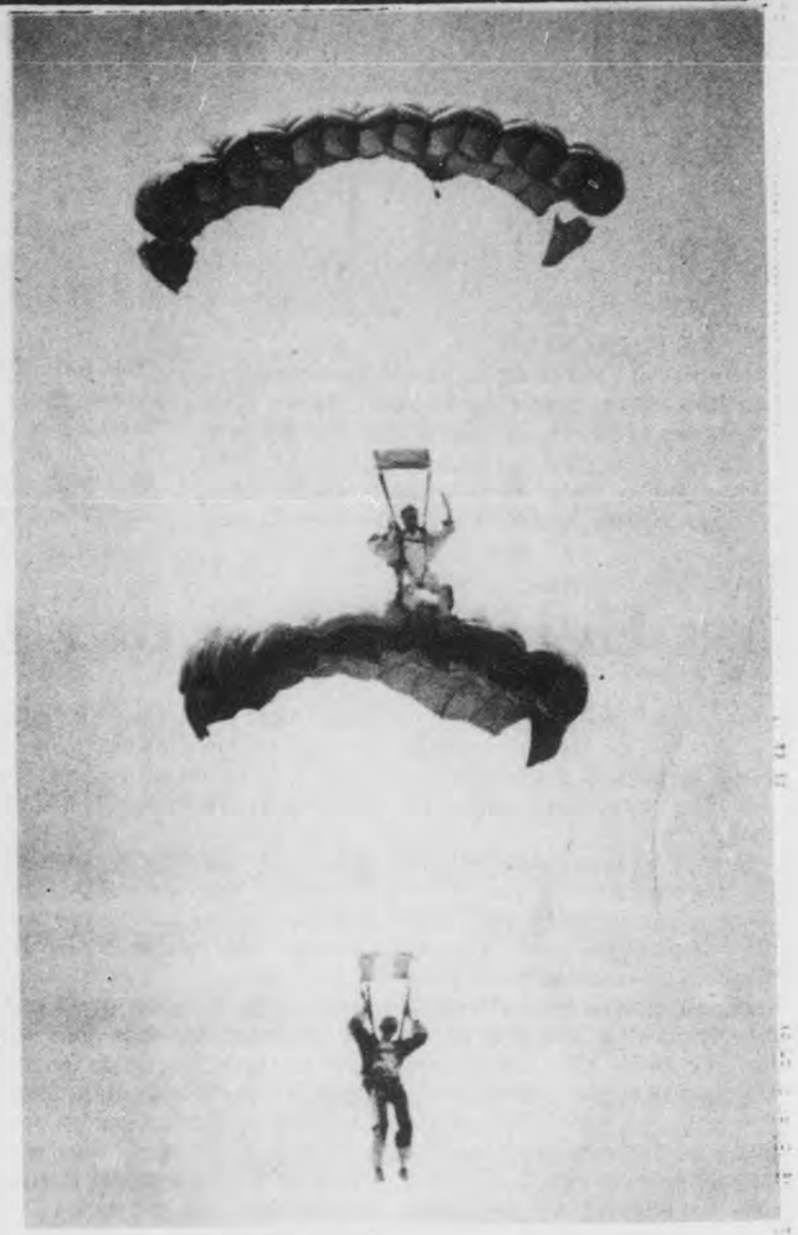
The legislature approved raises for the offices of Shelby County probate judge, tax assessor and tax collector. The probate judge's raise goes into effect immediately upon the signing of the bill by the governor. Raises for the other two officials will take effect October 1.

The probate judge's salary goes from $17,100 to $26,000 under the new law. His expense allowance of $3,800 which is in addition to salary, will remain the same.

Salaries for the other two officials are at present $10,000 per year with a $5,000 expense allowance. The new law will give them salaries of $22,500 each with no expense allowance.

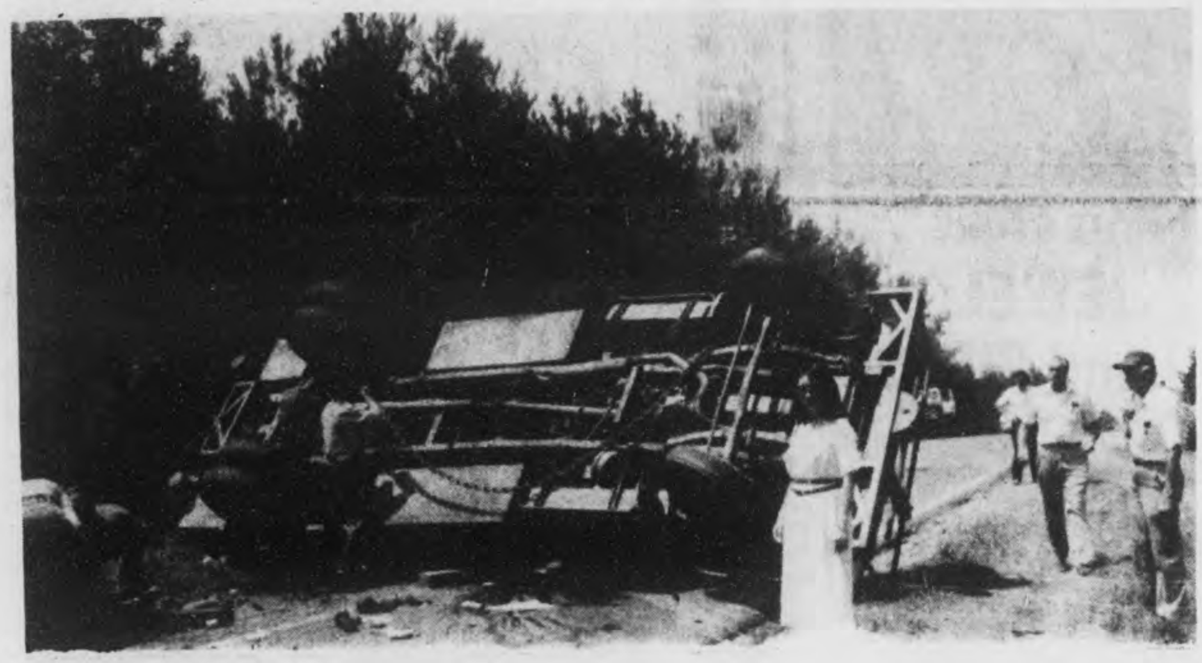
Sky King

Don Martin of Jacksonville, hanging to the strut of the jump plane, prepares to jump over the Vincent drop zone. Of the sport of sky diving, Martin jokingly says, "It's a dirty, dangerous job, but somebody has to do it!" (photo by Moore)



Canopy stacking

Soaring back to earth in a canopy stack formation, sky divers over Vincent appear to be flying some sort of futuristic (or ancient) flying machine. Strata Cloud square parachutes such as these are similar to hang gliders and can obtain forward speeds of 25-30 mph. (Photo by Moore)



A truck loaded with well drilling equipment turned over on Highway 25 about 350 yards south of the double bridges near the Wilsonville steam plant Monday. Within minutes coal trucks coming from the plant had formed a line waiting to get through. The highway was cleared in about 30 minutes. The driver of the truck was not injured. (Reporter photo)

Court case load hits record as felonies rise by 106%

by Bert Seaman

Is crime up in Shelby County or is the Sheriff's Department working harder to put criminals behind bars?

Figures compiled by the District Attorney's office reveals that the number of felony cases in the county during 1979 is expected to be 106% above last year's figure.

Indications are that a hard working Sheriff's Department may be the cause. Both Assistant District Attorney Bob Williams and Chief Investigator Reed Smith say that felony investigators are on the job double the routine number of hours.

What it boils down to for his office, Williams says, is that there will be double the number of cases to be handled by the same number of people.

"And last year," he noted, "we each handled 2,100 criminal cases." The Assistant DA also pointed out that one prosecutor is required to spend 75% of her time working on child welfare cases," which gives us 2¼ people to use on felony cases."

So far this year indictments on 281 felony cases have been recorded in Circuit Court and another 113 will be heard by the grand jury when it convenes August 6.

"The case load level in Circuit Court is the highest it's ever been," Williams said.

In 1977, he pointed out, there were 216 cases and last year 271. As for District Court, the Assistant DA reported that cases were up by 39%.

To mete out justice to those accused of felonies, Williams noted that the number of trial weeks will be doubled and there will also be twice as many grand jury sessions, he added.

In order to cut down on the time lag and streamline the court system, Williams said that his office has been working with the defense bar and judges James Sharbutt, Robert Armstrong, Kenneth Ingram and Harold Walden. He emphasized that all the judges have been "most cooperative."

Alabaster's income takes jump

by Reporter Staff

June was a very good month for Alabaster as far as collecting revenue was concerned. According to City Clerk Dot Henry, the city's income was up approximately $20,000 over the previous month.

The increase was partially due to the one cent sales tax that went into effect last month. And it was announced at Monday night's Council meeting that the additional funds will help bail out two department budgets that have gone in the red.

According to Police and Fire Commissioner Wayne Lucas, the hiring of two firemen put a dent in his budget. Street Department Chairman Dan Gillis noted that expensive equipment repair was responsible for the drain on his finances.

Both men pointed out that they were operating on budgets that had been "cut to the bone" to begin with.

Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek pointed out that other revenue last month had been brought in due to stricter enforcement of building permits and fines collected from motorists caught driving without a license.

After Councilman Lucas announced the recommendation from the city's attorney that consideration of fire contract protection for residents in police jurisdiction be dropped, the panel had another go-round on the matter.

The city's liability seemed to be the crux of the matter. "If our liability is that great, maybe we shouldn't go outside the city at all," declared Councilwoman Charlotte Burke.

However, since no figures were available, it was agreed that more consideration would be given to the proposal and it was tabled until the next meeting.

In other business on the Police Commissioners table, it was reported that the specifications on the bid for two police cars submitted by Sherman Holland Ford had met requirements.

The panel voted unanimously to accept the bid of $6,475.85. The only other bidder was Strickland Chevrolet. Their figure per unit was $7,198.

It was learned at the meeting that residents of the Alabaster Pelham area who want to hook up to the cable TV that's being installed will be able to do so the first part of August.

Terry Johnson, whose company is carrying out the project, reported that work was progressing satisfactorily and barring any unforseen problems, service would begin in September.

Inside the Reporter this week

If you're still breathing after reading David Moore's front page feature about jumping from planes over Vincent, read on!

David isn't the only one who's been "up in the air" lately. Milton Bird gets "treed" on page 4 while he's pickin' summer's last blackberries.

Administrator applicants meet board

by David Moore

The Shelby Memorial Hospital Board of Directors will interview applicants for administrator at a special call meeting Friday.

Board chairman Ben Grubbs said four applicants choosen by the screening committee will be interviewed by the board at the closed meeting at 6:30 p.m., July 20.

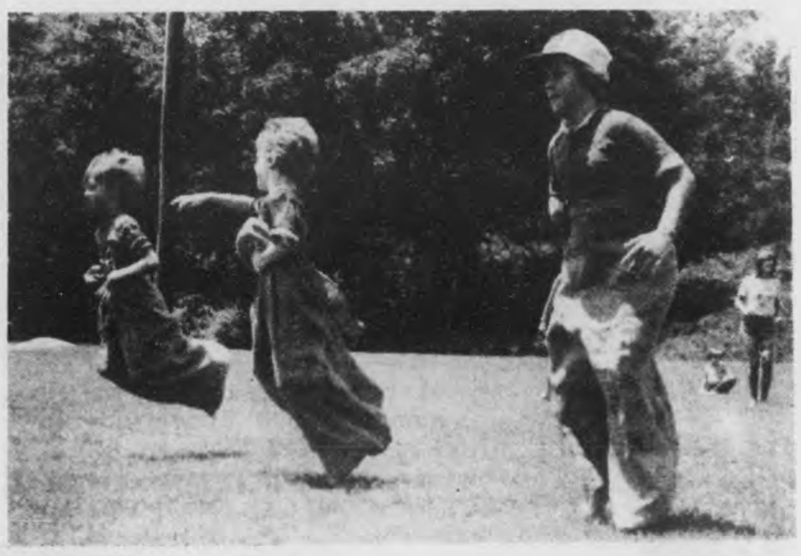
Grubbs disclosed that the board might reach a decision that night, or the decision might be announced next week at the regular board meeting.

Though names of the four applicants are being kept confidential, the Reporter has learned that three of the applicants are from Alabama and one is from out of state.

According to the board chairman, one applicant is currently a hospital administrator, one is an assistant administrator and one is a previous administrator.

SMH financial director Ralph Underwood is temporarily filling the position of administrator.

Former administrator, Richard Lind, resigned in May.



Hopping along

John Hardin, Ward Lott and Robby Roberts were among the participants in the Family Olympics sponsored by the Montevallo United Methodist Church Sunday. The sack race was one of the afternoon events that took place in Orr Park.

Some bills pass; others fail

The issue of a county-wide sales tax is alive in the state legislature, having been introduced in the House of Representatives on the last day possible for passage.

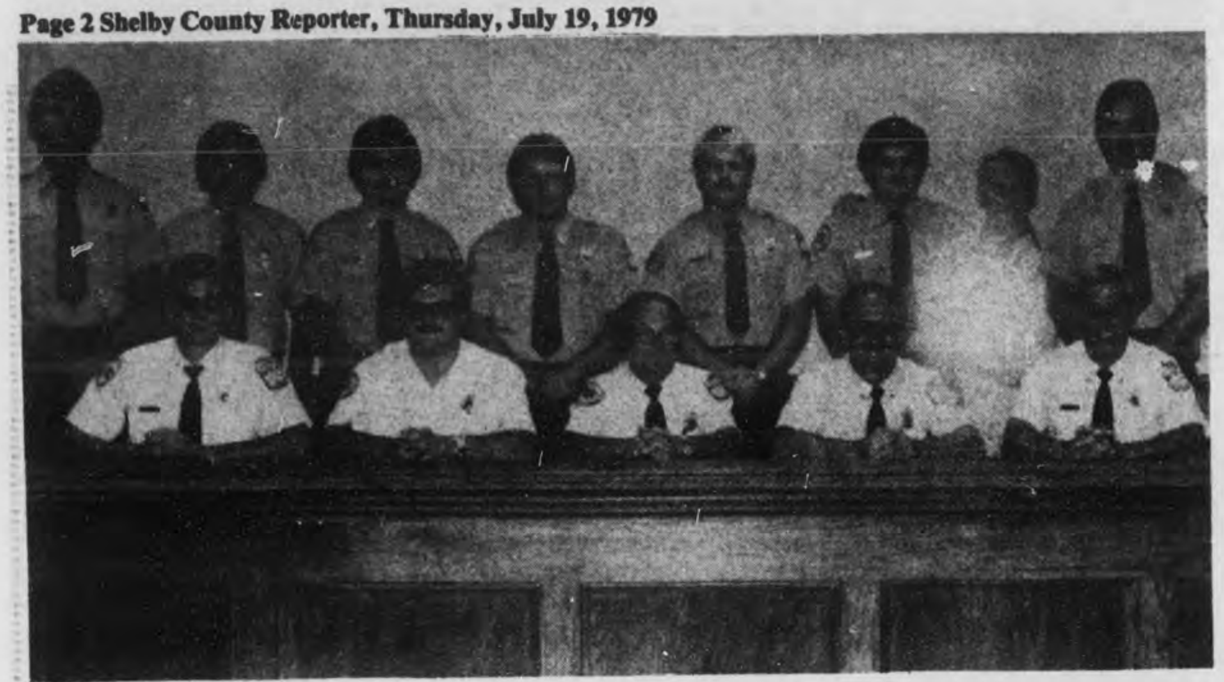
If it should clear both houses of the legislature, the people of the county will be allowed to vote on the measure before tax can be collected.

Three other proposed bills which were advertised, however, failed to be introduced and are dead for the year. These included the $5 fee to the probate judge for performing marriages, a county-wide leash law to control dogs, and a prima facie law to aid in enforcing litter laws.

The proposal to establish a branch courthouse in north Shelby County is tied up in committee and will probably not make it through the legislature in the few days remaining in the session.

Two laws which have passed both the House of Representatives and the Senate deal with elections.

One of them increases the pay of workers at the polls to $25 per day. The other allows for the opening of the polls in Shelby County at 7 a.m. instead of 8 a.m. as the law has provided in the past.



PFD honored

Members of the Pelham Fire Department received certificates of appreciation from Mayor Burk Dunaway at Monday's Council meeting. Pictured here are (front from left): Lt. Terry Ray, Lt. Pelham lauds firefighters

by David Moore

Eighteen firefighters were honored at Pelham City Council for completing the 240-hour Minimum Standards Training course. The men were given a round of applause by the large number of residents and visitors attending the meeting.

Firemen from Pelham who completed the rugged course were: Pete Zekoff, James Roberts, Keith Davis, Kenny McMurry, Danny Endress, Danny Ray, David McCurry, Brian Cleveland and Bill Kline. Most of these men were presented certificates at the meeting.

Dennis Cook, Robert King, Phillip Walker and Richard Payne from North Shelby County Fire District completed the course and most were presented certificates at the meeting. Alabaster firefighters Billy Beers and Doug McBrayer completed the course as did Lt. John Ryan from Rocky Ridge FD. A firefighter from Bluff Park and Tarrant City also passed the course.

Councilman and Fire Commissioner Roy Jowers commended Pelham Deputy Chief Mike Howell, Lt. Jerry Lamb, D/E Joey Lovelady and D/E Rick Miller who taught the course.

Jowers presented seventeen certificates of appreciation from Mayor Burk Dunaway to Pelham firefighters and officers.

Councilman Ray Hamilton said that "without equivocation, the Pelham police and fire departments are the best in Alabama." He added this may hold true for the Southeast and the entire U.S. as well.

Mayor Dunaway read a letter from David Abner of the Pelham Youth Baseball Asociation thanking the city, fire department, paramedics, police and Park and Recreation Board for making the 1979 season successful for the more than 300 boys and girls who participated.

The Council passed a motion to buy a trophy case requested by the Park and Recreation Board to display the trophies won by the Pelham Dixie League. The case will go in City Hall.

The appointment of Mrs. Jill Tapscott of Ryecroft Road to the Park and Recreation Board was approved by the Council.

The Council approved a five-year least to Shelby County Cablevision for rental of a 30-foot square of land adjacent to the tennis courts for use as an antenna site. The cable company will pay the city $600 per year and be responsible for construction of a fence and liability insurance.

In other action, the Council moved to table the request for two liquor licenses.

A request for a liquor license by Connie Schultz for The Celler, to be located at 2105 Old Montgomery Hwy., was tabled until fire and health inspections could be made.

The second liquor license request was tabled until a health inspection could be verified for Brentwoods South at 2145 Hwy. 31. Currently, the establishment is operated as a teenage disco, and Clerk Dennis pointed out the business had failed to pay the city 10% of their door receipts to date, as required by city ordinance.

Chief D.O. Watson reported that the PPD had issued 239 traffic citations for the month of June. Police worked 40 traffic accidents, 10 grand larcenies, two auto burglaries, two residential burglaries and one business burglary. Police recovered two stolen vehicles.

Chief William Bryars reported that the PFD answered 52 alarms in June. Twenty-one of the alarms were fire calls and 31 were rescue calls.

Helena won't pay dump fee

by Lisa Sims

The town of Helena wants to dump garbage in the landfill inside the city limits--free of charge.

Sound reasonable? Mayor Charles Penhale told town council members Monday night that he told everyone at the County Mayors' Association Meeting last week that Helena refuses to pay a dumping fee for a landfill within the city limits that is patrolled and cleaned by city employees.

Penhale also told the council that Carlton Franks told him the County Commission had agreed to waive the town's dumping fee and apologized for the inconvenience.

In other business, the council paid their outstanding bills, rezoned two portions of property back to A-1, and allowed a house trailer moved into the city limits.

The land that was restored to zone A-1 was land that had previously been strip mined and land behind the Fox Haven Subdivision that was once used for office space.

Although the town of Helena has an ordinance that does not allow house trailers inside the city limits, if a trailer was in the town when the ordinance passed and later moved out, the owner still has up to a year to move it back into the city.

Mayor Penhale said that Joel Penhale wanted to move a trailer back onto his farm and that the trailer was moved only nine months ago. Therefore, the city council voted to allow the trailer back in.

The council also agreed to take legal steps to allow them to gain entrance through private property to a cemetery near the Liberty Heights area.

Jane Holmes, Chairman of the Helena Library Board, gave a report on the progress of the library. The council decided to look for an air conditioner to put in the library so that workers could avoid the heat.

The council also voted to allow Town Clerk, Frances Parrish to join the City Clerks' Association.

All city council members attended the Monday meeting.

Library seeks funds

A fund raising campaign is underway by the Friends of the Montevallo Public Library to raise a minimum of $3,000 to replace books that were ruined in a Dec. 30 fire.

Although the library opened in new quarters behind the city hall last month, thousands of books are needed to replenish the shelves.

Many of the books now available were provided by a number of individuals, local libraries throughout the state, the Alabama Public Library Service, the Shelby County Library System and the University of Montevallo.

Friends of the Library committee point out that the remodeled brick building, which now houses the facility, is more spacious and better able to serve the needs of the reading public than the historic depot which burned.

But in order for the library to fulfill its function, an adequate number of books must be secured; hence the fund raising drive.

Anyone wishing to make a contribution may make checks payable to Friends of the Montevallo Public Library, Inc. which is a non-profit charitable and cultural organization.

The tax deductible gift, should be sent to the organization's treasurer, Judy Morgan, 9 Brookhill Lane, Montevallo, 35115.

All contributions will be publicly acknowledged.

Douglas R. Rodgers and Sidney J. Vance are co-chairman for the Books-for-the-People Campaign.

SPERRY AND HUTCHINSON

"I could see the whole world..."

I threw myself back, stomach down, legs and arms spread, back arched. As I fell away from the plane I could see Hara watching calmly out the door.

During training they had told us we could count to three during free fall, then the pilot chute would pop open the main chute.

That's all well and fine, but who can count at a time like this. I was completely taken by the weightless sensation of the fall. I think, perhaps, I was so taken by it all that I relaxed my arch slightly, because I felt my feet starting to float over my head.

Before there was time to panic I heard the parachute swish out of my pack. I braced for the jolt I was sure would come when the chute filled with air. But the jolt did not come for nearly 3000 feet.

Instead, what felt like a giant, feathered hand gently caught my plummeting body. My first reaction should have been to immediately look up and check to see that the chute and stabilizers had opened properly and my lines were in order. But the feathered hand had me now and I knew instinctly that everything was right.

I reached over my head and unsnapped the two control handles from the shroud. The radio inside my helmet crackled into life.

"All right, black and yellow," said the voice of Larry Cuthrell, president of Alabama Aero Sports Club. "You're looking good. If you can hear me, execute a complete right hand turn."

Pulling the right control, the parachute swiveled me 360 degrees as smoothly as if I were spinning around on an office chair. I shouted in sheer delight. I could see the Coosa River, the bridge, the lakes and backwaters, the mountains in the distance, the giant Kimberly Clark plant near Childersburg, more of the Coosa, the far away stacks of the Wilsonville steam plant, the water tower in Vincent. I could see the whole world, and it was all mine.

Finally my eyes zeroed in on the tiny looking grass airstrip belonging to John Burdette Bates of Vincent. I could see the parked cars and trucks, a second plane on the airstrip, the parachute canopy tent and dots of people.

I was determined to make a good landing on the airstrip. No Coosa splash-down or tree snagging for me. So from that point, I kept a pretty close eye on the slowly enlarging airstrip.

"Now give me just a little left," cracked Cuthrell's voice in my ear. I responded accordingly. "A little bit more--there! Hold what you've got. Looking good."

Looking good? From my raptured point of view, everything was looking great, wonderful, fantastic, tremendous, far-out, beautiful and all the other inadequate adjectives that fall short of the actual experience.

Again I shouted in ecstasy, hollered to the earth and friends below, the ocean of cool, sweet air in which I floated, and the great white clouds above. And I hollered to that big black and yellow parachute spread open so beautifully over my head.

Cuthrell's voice came over the radio again. "Look between your feet and note your ground speed." I was traveling about 15 mph.

My feet looked very peculiar with nothing but 2000 feet of air between them and Shelby County. Then I noticed the black, round shadow moving across a green pasture. That's me, that's my shadow, I thought in amusement.

"You're looking good, blue and gold," said Cuthrell, giving instructions to another student jumper who had now exited the plane somewhere overhead.

I had been in the air for somewhere between a second and a lifetime. (Approximately 3 minutes). The ground was growing closer. Cuthrell gave a few more directions and I made the proper adjustments, facing the wind for my landing.

Running down the airstrip I saw Diane Abercrombie in her red blouse and Howard Sims of Alabaster who had made his first jump Saturday, July 14, the day before. I hollered to them, waving my arms, feeling so good to be so alive.

Cuthrell's voice gave me final instructions. At an altitude of 100 feet I pulled my feet and knees together, bent my legs and grabbed the rear risers of the chute.

"Pull!" yelled Cuthrell over the radio.

I pulled the risers. My feet hit the ground. I fell and rolled.

I did it!

Even before Cuthrell could tell me to signal if I was okay, I had leaped to my feet, laughing and shouting and waving my arms, grinning as big as a parachute full of air.

The Alabama Aero Sports Club sky dives nearly every clear weekend in Vincent.

The club offers a jump training program for people interested in learning to sky dive. Unlike most training programs, the AASC course can be taken in only two and a half hours. Though the program is short, it is recognized by the U.S. Parachute Association as one of the most advanced courses offered.

According to Ray Hara, club jumpmaster and chief rigger, and designer of the program, its basic purpose is "survival instinct instruction."

The real learning comes from subsequent jumps, Hara says, as the beginner advances to higher altitudes and longer free falls.

Advanced jumpers often dive from altitudes of 8500 to 10,000 feet, free falling for 45-60 seconds before opening their chutes.

One of the club's biggest fans is Vincent Police Chief George Humphries, who turns out frequently to witness the sky divers in action.

Club president Larry Cuthrell invites anyone who's interested to come out to the air strip and watch the excitement and/or sign up for jump school. (Note: the AASC will not be jumping in Vincent the weekend of July 21, 22.)

To reach the airstrip, take Hwy 85 south from Vincent and turn east approximately one mile on Hwy. 62. Turn left on the first paved road on Hwy. 62, and follow it to the Bates' residence where the pavement ends. Follow the gravel road a quarter mile and you are there.

For more information, call Ray Hara, 595-5905.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

I was out there by myself. I don't do it often now that I've had more birthdays than a lot o' folks can count. There's always the chance a tree will fall on you, or you'll stumble over a rock and break a leg, or meet a snake eye to eye in a place where there's no running room.

Or, you probably won't believe this, you could cross paths with a male cow and come out on the little end of the stick.

I had got there about nine o'clock, on a little hill in the middle of a guy's pasture, where the blackberry briars were as full of berries as bees in a clover patch. I don't know who the blackberry picking champion is, or where he lives. But whoever he is I can tell him one thing for dead sure: Skillet Bird is might close behind him when it comes to lifting the berries off the vine without disturbing the redbugs.

By ten o'clock I was well on my way toward filling my eight-quart basket half full, with just enough red ones in the bunch to make the basket pretty. And by five minutes past ten I got the first inkling of what the day was gonna be like. From over the hill, town- way, there came the sound a male cow makes when he's hunting romance or just being curious or really looking for trouble. At first I just hoped it would go away and then I started wondering what to do and at twelve minutes past ten I was ten feet up a pine sapling with my berries scattered over the ground and a full grown male cow stomping around under the tree.

How long he pranced around down there, I don't know. Hanging on that limb with my feet dangling, it seemed like a whole week-end. But I guess it wasn't. Still, it might have been if a young sleek heifer hadn't come through the berry patch and caught the male cow's eye. I guess he liked her better than me, since he made one final snort and trotted off through the briars, heading her way.

Did you ever try to pick up the berries from an eight-quart basket that was half full a little while ago but were spilled out now, most of 'em in grass ankle deep? You ought to try it sometime. It'll make your next broken leg seem like child's play. In fact if you're like me you won't pick 'em up. You'll just start over and hope your luck is better the next time around.

And so I did. With the male cow and the young heifer romancing over the hill, and the berries as thick as ever, I had my basket almost full again by eleven-thirty. But I was hot. The sun, while I was busy in the berry patch and not looking, slipped down within three feet of the briars and unloaded his hot stuff on my head. I got so hot, with the sweat running off my forehead and splashing on my specs, I couldn't see the berries or the briars or the little trails the cows had made. And I suppose that's why it happened.

I didn't step on the snake. But I stepped so close to him I heard him rattle. When I got to the gap half a mile away and started through, I remembered I had left my berries. But I didn't go back. I was so mad I just walked home and left my truck standing there, every inch of the four miles from there to my house. Later that afternoon, in the shag of the day, I walked back and got it.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

You know how sometimes you'd like to do something but for one reason or another you never get around to it?

Well that was definitely not the case with me when it came to having pierced ears. I had never wanted those little holes poked in my ears. In fact, I thought it was rather ridiculous!

And then a couple of Christmases ago, I tore into an attractively wrapped package. Its contents were a pair of earrings for pierced ears and a note saying I was entitled to have the procedure done at a particular doctor's office.

All the arrangements had been made, I was told by the gift giver, who was my daughter. The only thing I had to do, she informed me, was to present my ears at the appointed time.

She had secretly had her ears pierced when she was in high school. Knowing that there would be some disapproval in our household, she made sure her ears were hidden from view by her hair for months afterward.

But at my advanced age and with no real desire to have holes in my ears, I was considering how to politely refuse my Christmas gift.

However, after mulling over the idea for a time, I decided it might be fun to wear earrings again. My last pair had been stored away years ago after my ears had been pinched one time too many.

When I asked how painful the procedure was, my daughter assured me it didn't hurt much. "And it only takes a second," she added reassuringly.

So off I went at the appointed time and fortunately I didn't have long to wait - otherwise I might have chickened out.

As I awaited the summons to the doctor's office, I envisioned all the beautiful earrings I'd be able to wear until I'd almost worked up a longing to have those holes punched.

Expecting that he'd take precise measurements with some sort of a little device, I was startled when the doctor picked up a red magic marker and quickly made two dots on either ear.

"But, but, but"...I sputtered, "are you sure the holes will be in the same spot on both sides by just using eye measurement?"

"I perform surgery every day," he said dryly, "and so far I've been pretty accurate."

"Go ahead," I mumbled weakly.

Well, it wasn't half bad. But my vision of all the beautiful earrings I was going to wear hasn't worked out.

I thought poison ivy was the only thing I was allergic to. But I find my ears can't tolerate one of the substances jewelry makers put in their earrings.

However, all is not lost. I've learned that high quality gold earrings apparently don't have that offensive substance. Of course they're not easy to find and they're a little more than I can afford.

At the moment my earring wardrobe consists of one pair. So while others switch earrings to fit the occasion, I appear everywhere with the same little gold balls protruding from my ears.

When I get tired of looking at them, I guess I'll just start wearing my hair over my ears.

Patient complains of ER treatment

I, Josh Burnett, went to the Emergency Room at the Shelby Memorial Hospital on July 4, 1979, with a severe pain in my left eye. Dr. Victor Norman, M.D. said I had a bad infection in my eye. He refused to treat me other than prescribe pain pills, which I told him I did not want. I needed something to kill the infection. He told me to go to another doctor in Hoover the next day. I'm almost 70 years old and nearly blind; it seems like the doctor in emergency was unconcerned about me.

I saw Dr. Joe Moore, MD, the next day and he has almost cleared the infection in my eye. He said it needed to be treated before it spread beyond help.

Please publish this in the paper for me.

Sincerely,
Josh Burnett
Shelby, Alabama
35143

Editor's Note: When the Reporter telephoned the hospital in regard to Mr. Burnett's complaint, Dr. Norman said he had called an opthamologist for Mr. Burnett who recommended a medication and asked to see Burnett the next morning.

Dr. Norman said he recommended the specialist because Mr. Burnett had an old eye injury and had earlier been under treatment for it.

Mr. Burnett did not care to see the specialist, Dr. Norman said, indicating he would go to his own doctor. Dr. Norman and others at the hospital feel they did everything they could to help Mr. Burnett.

Brierfield director sets goals high

Plans for developing Brierfield Ironworks Park into a first rate tourist attraction have received a shot in the arm with the recent appointment of a new director.

Marty Everse has been busily drawing up plans for the 100 acre facility since he took over the post which has been vacant for several months.

One of his top priorities, Everse says, will be to get the historic outdoor drama Brighthope into production again. The UM produced play was well received when it premiered last summer, but lack of financing prevented it from being put on this year.

In the meantime, Everse will be renewing activity at the park by scheduling events such as the one coming up on August 18. Summerfest '79 will feature several country rock and jazz groups. Then, later on this fall, Everse said he hoped to have area bands participate in a benefit concert.

His previous experience provides the new park director with a good background for obtaining grants and getting the park on its feet again.

Everse carried out projects for the Alabama Historical Commission throughout the state. His last assignment was with the Live-in-a-Landmark Council.

A 1974 graduate of Samford University, Everse earned his degree in history. A native of Grand Rapids, Mich., Everse and his wife, the former Janice Seaman, live in Montevallo.

In order to get funding for the outdoor drama, which Everse sees as the main drawing card for the park, the new director has instigated project Brighthope '80. The goal of the fund raising drive is $60,000.

Once the play is being staged again, there's a good chance Everse related, of securing a grant from the Arts and Humanities Council to film it.

Promotion of the Bibb County facility would then be nationwide, Everse pointed out, with TV viewers across the country learning about the park and what it has to offer.

Since the ruins of the old furnace are about the only part of the ironworks left for visitors to inspect, Everse emphasized that the outdoor drama is the best means to make the park a success.

But he describes the acreage, which was leased by Kimberly-Clark Corporation at no charge, as having "limitless potential."

The setting in the wooded area seven miles south of Montevallo is ideal, Everse says, for recreational and cultural activities.

He would like to see a building constructed with office and classroom space where all kinds of seminars could be held. An area for campers is also part of his overall plan. And a ballfield is on the drawing board too.

As far as immediate projects are concerned, the director reported that work on the reconstruction of an 1825 log cabin would be resumed shortly.

The old structure will be used as a museum in which artifacts collected from the area can be viewed by tourists.

Arts and Crafts shows, Trade Days and family reunions are other activities that Everse will be promoting in the park.

A twelve member board, which was appointed by Bibb County Probate Judge George Desmond, is responsible for the park. Through the efforts of their representative Walter Owens, the board will be receiving a $20,000 grant from the legislature this year to operate the facility.

However, some of that money will be used to pay off debts, Everse noted.

County 4-H riders learn horseshow hints

"Keep your eyes on the judge!"

That was one of the tips members of the Shelby County 4-H Horse Club were given Friday as they brushed up on showing their horses at halter.

Susie Morris, a former exhibitor who is now active in judging worked with the 4-H'ers who are getting ready for the District 4-H Horse Show in Decatur, July 23-24.

Working with club members who gathered at the Alan Eisenerg farm near Shelby Academy, Morris stressed that they keep a close watch on the judge as he circled their horse and position themselves to show their entry to best advantage.

Not all of the youngsters who turned out for the instruction will be attending the upcoming event. The local group will have nine entries in the Decatur show and winners will go on to compete in Montgomery, Aug. 2-3.

Youngsters who took advantage of the training opportunity were: Jessica Eisenberg, Pam Powers, Kelly Stamps, Sandra LeFoy, Wendy Lawrence, Stann Mahan, Darby Woolf, Glenda White, Ginger Callihan and David Morris.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

The new testament is the final authority in religious matters. What does God's will say concerning the question of religious titles? The word "reverend" is used in reference to the name of God (Psalms 111:9); however, "reverend" is never used as a religious title for any human being. Paul is never referred to as "Reverend Paul" nor is Peter ever referred to as "Reverend Peter." Paul is referred to as a "preacher" and as a "teacher," and Timothy is instructed to "do the work of an evangelist. (II Timothy 4:5; II Timothy 1:11).

Christ forbids our calling any person "Rabbie," "Father," or "Master," as religious titles of honor. (Read Matthew 23:7-10) No one is authorized to wear or to refer to any human being as "Reverend," "Rabbi , "Father," or "Master."

Every Christian, or member of the Lord's church, or kingdom, is a priest. (Revelation 1:5, 6; I Peter 2:9) Thus, no one should have the idea that only preachers are priests. The New Testament does not divide members of the Lord's Church into "clergy" and "laity." (Read Galatians 3:28) Christ stated that we are all brethren (Matthew 23:8) Peter referred to Paul as "brother Paul," etc. In addition, evangelists were not termed "pastors." (Ephesians 4:11) Thayer's Greek English Lexicon of the New Testament" points out that a pastor is a bishop, elder, overseer, presbyter, or shepherd. The words "overseer," "bishop," and "elder" are used to refer to the same people in Acts 20:17,28. The New Testament does not use the word "pastor" interchangeably with "evangelist" or "preacher" nor does the New Testament authorize only one pastor, or bishop, to rule a local congregation. The church in Ephesus was ruled by a plurality of bishops, elders, or pastors (Acts 20: 17,28), and the church in Philippi possessed a plurality of elders, or pastors, not just one bishop, or pastor. (Philippians 1:1).

Those sincere followers of Christ who "speack as the oracles of God" (I Peter 4:11) will be extremely careful not to use unscriptural titles.

Car pooling

Helena man solving energy crisis

F.D. Elliott of Helena started working the first thing Monday morning to figure out ways to conserve energy.

He was responding to President Jimmy Carter's television appeal of Sunday evening in which the President emphasized the seriousness of the oil importing problem and called on Americans to save energy as a matter of patriotism.

Elliott lives in Helena, but as bailiff for the 18th Judicial Circuit, drives to Columbiana to work five days a week. He knows of several others who live in the Helena and Alabaster areas who also make the same trip, all in their own automobiles.

Elliott is trying to organize these people into car pools or into a van-type transportation system as his bit in helping save energy.

Elliott feels that even if the work hours are slightly different for some of the people, they should be willing to adjust their hours or to come earlier or stay later to help with the situation.

Elliott reasons that it takes at least two gallons of gasoline to make the Helena-Columbiana round trip and if six people could ride together, it would save 10 gallons a day. If others tried to do the same thing, the number of gallons saved could lower the demand for foreign oil by a significant amount.

Columbiana girl serves on national panel

JACKIE JOINER

A Columbiana girl was recently chosen one of six teenage girls nation-wide to serve on the Southern Baptist Acteens National Advisory Panel.

Jackie Joiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer C. Joiner, is presently serving as a camp counselor at the Illinois Baptist Camp at Lake Sallateeska.

She spoke at the Women's Missionary Union Annual Meeting in Houston, Texas, June 8-12 and will be on the program at the National Acteen Convention in Kansas City, July 24-27.

Acteens is a missionary organization for high school aged girls.

Jackie says that the most important thing about Acteens is that it gives her a chance to do for other people. Since she was eight years old, Jackie has taught in a Bible school in Baldwin County for migrants who follow vegetable harvests.

Besides being Associational Acteen President next year and being busy with Acteen activities, Jackie is also active in church and school functions.

At the First Baptist Church of Columbiana, Jackie is accompanying pianist for the youth, adult, and ensemble choirs. She plays the piano for Sunday worship services as well.

At Shelby County High School, she marches in the Wildcat Band, plays in the concert band and county band, is Junior Civitan President, a 4-H breads winner, was 4-H president, and is consistently on the "A" Honor Roll.

Welcome Wagon plans bazaar

The Welcome Wagon organization offers newcomers in the Alabaster-Pelham area a chance to get acquainted as well as providing an opportunity for rendering service.

Members are now making plans to sponsor a bazaar for the Association of Retarded Citizens which will be held in October. And everyone is getting busy on handiwork projects which will include macrame and Christmas Tree ornaments.

Jackie Davis, president of the county's ARC group will speak at the Welcome Wagon's August meeting.

Anyone who would like more information on the organization may call Sue Smith at 663-5866.

Training

Army Private Jeffery Doss prepares to practice what he just learned during training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. (US Army Photo by John West)

For combat engineer

Soldier learns tools of trade

A peavy, mattock, and gooseneck wrecker might sound like a group of rare and exotic birds, but a Columbiana man knows they will soon beocme the tools of his trade.

Army Private Jeffery Doss, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Doss, Columbiana, is learning to be a combat engineer at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri. Part of that training involves familiarization with more than 42 different hand and power tools.

One of the first "hands on" lessons taught during the eight-week engineer course is the safe use of power tools, such as saws, drill presses, and hydraulic jacks. Students must also learn how to care and maintain these tools which are designed to operate on portable power sources like air compressors and gasoline generators. "I've learned a variety of new skills that I hope to use in the future," he said.

Only one phase of traning included the use of tools. Army engineers must also learn the quick assembly and breakdown of many types of portable roadways. This includes floating footbridges and huge steel structures strong enough to support an Army tank. In addition to these skills, he must also learn crafts such as masonry, metalworking, and that of an electrician; crafts taught primarily to support combat operations, but also used to aid civilian communities during emergencies.

The 20-year-old Doss found the training tough but rewarding. "I thought the training was great," he explained.

Doss, who attended Thompson High School, joined the Army last February. On completion of the program he will be assigned to a regular Army unit.

1969 Vincent High graduates hold reunion

Class of '69 reunited

The graduating class of 1969 of Vincent High School held their 10 year reunion July 7 at a Homewood Restaurant.

Following a buffet dinner, speeches were presented by class president Neville Bearden and by the class sponsor, Diane Conwill. Entertainer, Paul Davis of Birmingham provided music from the 1969 era.

There was much laughter, conversation and renewing of old friendships which made the evening special for everyone in attendance.

Coordinators for the event were Kathy Carden and Cyrenthia Denty.

News notes from Pelham to Fourmile

A lot of bull is running around Pelham these days--in fact, 2,200 pounds worth.

Pelham police and Sheriff's Deputies have been issued a BOLO (be on the lookout) for Bebe. Bebe, a bull belonging to Dr. Harvey Coker and his wife Paula who live near Hunter's Glen, has been missing since Monday morning.

Bebe was last spotted around 9 a.m. Monday at the intersection of U.S. 31 and Hwy. 52, according to PPD Chief D.O. Watson.

Mrs. Coker said she and her husband moved the bull from their Montevallo farm last Sunday, and Monday morning he was missing from his pen.

"Bebe's real friendly," she said, "We can put our arms around him."

The bull, however, does have horns and anyone seeing it should not attempt to approach it.

If the bull is spotted, contact the Cokers at 663-0442 or call the Pelham police or Sheriff's office.

Understanding the diet and care required for the diabetic is important. The first of a series of sessions for diabetics will be held Wednesday, July 25 at 10 a.m. at the Columbiana Library.

These sessions will include foods in the diabetic diet and food exchanges, food preparation following the doctors instruction, and physical care.

Marian Cotney, County Agent-Home Economics says these sessions will be conducted by dietitians and nurses from Project HELP, Birmingham.

All diabetics and those who care for diabetics should plan to attend these sessions.

Miss Alabama local favorite

When Kathy Pickett was selected as the '1979 Miss Alabama' she had a large cheering section of relatives on hand from Shelby County.

Although Miss Pickett is from Mulga, her father is a Shelby County native. Her grandparents, aunts, uncles and dozens of cousins live here.

Although Miss Pickett and her immediate family live in Mulga, her father's side of the family hails from Shelby County and many of them still live here.

Jess and Margie Pickett of Pea Ridge are her paternal grandparents. She has an aunt, Mildred Pesseackey, and an uncle, Clarence Pickett, who also live in Pea Ridge, and another aunt, Barbara Rutledge, in Columbiana.

According to Mrs. Rutledge, the number of her other Shelby County relatives are almost too numerous to count.

Miss Pickett is a graduate of Birmingham-Southern College and has been studying voice at the Juilliard School of Music in New York for the past two years.

She will compete in Atlantic City for the title of "Miss America" at the end of the summer.

Her mother will accompany her to the resort city as her official chaperone and her mother's expense will be paid by the pageant.

Miss Pickett wanted her father and her sister, Janie, to be able to attend the pageant, also, so she has given them the prize money she won in the 'Miss Alabama' talent contest to enable them to make the trip.

Effective immediately upon annexation, all portions of the annexed territory, other than the Planned Development as described above, shall receive zoning classifications under the Zoning Ordinance of the City of Hoover in accordance with such properties' then present use and consistent with any recorded restrictions on such properties.

LEGAL NOTICE
Interstate Commerce Commission
Washington, DC
NOTICE
AB 2 (Sub-No. 24F)
Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company
Abandonment Near Calera and Columbiana In Shelby County, Al

The Interstate Commerce Commission's Energy and Environment Branch concluded that the proposed abandonment by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company of its line between Columbiana and Calera, AL, a distance of 16.3 miles, if approved by the Commission, does not constitute a major Federal action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment.

It was concluded, among other things, that changes in energy consumption and air pollution would be insignificant. Moreover, there are no development plans contingent on continued operations of the line. A determination has been made that the right-of-way would not be suitable for alternative public use.

These conclusions are contained in a staff-prepared environmental threshold assessment survey, which is available on request to the Interstate Commerce Commission, Office of Policy and Analysis, Washington, DC 20423; telephone 202-275-7011. Interested persons may comment on this matter by filing their statements in writing on or before August 10, 1979.

It should be emphasized that the environmental threshold assessment survey represents an evaluation of the environmental issues in the proceeding and does not purport to resolve the issues of whether the present or future public convenience and necessity permit discontinuance of the line proposed for abandonment. Consequently, comments on the environmental study should be limited to discussion of the presence or absence of environmental impacts and reasonable alternatives.

Home Decorating with Becky

TEXTURE APPLIES TO MORE THAN JUST FABRIC

In making sure that you have a beautifully decorated home, it's important that you consider the impact of textures--and, although textures are often spoken of only in fabrics--the truth is that textures also apply to woods and walls and ALL the materials used in furnishing a home.

Oddly enough, many people forget about textures when they decorate their homes--yet, textures have a very important effect on the final appearance of a room.

For example, should a particular chair have a smooth, silky material or a rough, tweedy one? Should a chest have highly polished wood or a duller, open-grained wood? Should walls be smooth or have a textured material on them? Should the carpet be soft or shaggy?

These things should be considered. When people don't give enough consideration to textures (and many don't), they're often unhappy with their furnishings later without really knowing why.

Texture is a useful tool in making rooms more interesting and more beautiful, and we can help you use it. For decorating suggestions, and for any of your furnishing needs, stop in and see us.

Close play at first

A close play at first base last Saturday night in Pelham drew a lot of players as both the pitcher and first baseman came running toward the bag but as you can see the first baseman has the ball and made the play as the umpire is about to signal. &photo by Richard Crosby)

Football begins in only 30 days

by Richard Crosby

Despite the football season opening which is only a month away, interest is still keen. Most of the action leading up to the start of practice is going on inside the locker rooms in the county's schools as coaches prepare their strategy for the upcoming season.

All public school coaches will be attending the Alabama High School Athletic Association coaches conference which will be held in Tuscaloosa the first few days of August. The annual North-South football and basketball games will be held in conjunction with the coaches meeting.

After the clinic, coaches will be returning home to start summer practice on August 6th. The first few days of practice are for conditioning only. Players will not be allowed to make contact or put on full gear except for pictures.

For the most part, county coaches have been grooming their respective playing fields and making adjustments in techniques for battling other schools this fall.

The athletes have been busy most of the summer working out on weights, running and - racticing on their own. Most of that activity is organized but cannot be supervised by any coaches.

So, as far as local fans are concerned, football is still several weeks away. Keep watching these pages for the first signs of life that prep action shows around the county.

Watson Shell takes title

The final standings of the Montevallo Softball League were made public this past week. Watson Shell won the Men's League with a record of 19 wins and one loss.

Ending up in second place was Central State Bank with a 17-3 record for the season. A-1 Plumbing took third with a mark of 15-5.

Other teams in the league and their final season records are as follows: Helena 14-6, Royals 8-12, Dragons 7-13, Pearidge 7-13, Howks 6-14, Shelby Glass 6-14, and Providence 1-19.

Thorsby won the Women's League title with a record of 14 wins and three losses. Merchants took second with a 12-5 mark. The two remaining teams in the league field to have a winning season as H.R.C. ended up 7-10, and H & H never won a game but lost 12.

Trophies to the league winning teams will be presented at a later date according to Montevallo Park and Recreation Director, Ott Knight.

SCHS Boosters to meet

The Shelby County High School Athletic Boosters will hold their first meeting of the summer July 26th. The meeting will be held in the Columbiana City Park at 7:30 p.m.

Head coach Mark Bradley urges all athletic parents, school supporters and interested parties to attend this very important organizational meeting for the coming year.

Charles Knowles, County Superintendent of Education, will be the guest speaker.

Homemade ice cream will be served at the meeting.

County bowhunting club readies for final shoots

The Creek Bowhunters are getting ready for the final shoots of the season. On July 28th the club will hold its final Club Shoot of the year. On August 11th the Club Championship will be held.

August 25th and 26th are the dates for the annual Howard Hill Invitational Shoot which draws bowhunters from throughout the state and several adjoining ones. The shoot is held each year in memory of the club's originator, Howard Hill, who has been called the world's greatest archer. The final shoot of the year will be held September 15th. For more information concerning competing in the activities of the Creek Bowhunters Club, contact Jerry or Kris Gardner at 678-9821.

Gothard continues to win at speedway

Race fans at Shelby Speedway got an eyeful of wrecks this past weekend. Track manager Jerry Handley told the Reporter that fans witnessed some of the most spectacular wrecks that have ever occured.

On the first lap of the modified heat race, four cars tangled in the first turn. Terry Wesley, Alvin Wallace, Ronnie Gothard and Gary Franklin all sustained injured cars.

Most of the cars returned to run in the Feature race but not without extensive repair work done in the pits. Gothard returned to win the feature race as he did last week in the July 4th 50 lap race.

Placing second in the Modified Feature was Gerald Harris with Greg Buse third, Gary Franklin fourth and Paul Walden fifth. Handley called the field of Modified cars "The best we've ever had at Shelby Speedway."

Tony Payton won the Bomber heat buy only managed second in the feature race. Art Brackin of Jemison won that honor. Bobby Lucas took third in the feature with Steve Payton coming in fourth. Only four cars finished the race with was run in near 100 degree heat.

In the buggy division, Bennie Brasher of Calera continued his winning ways. Rick Majors placed second. Bobby Carter came in third after having chased Brasher for first place till his engine succombed to the heat. Jog Horton of Alabaster took fourth place and Ron Henderson fifth.

Henderson was invovled in one of the days most exciting crashes. In the heat race he shot past Majors but then lost control and started sliding sideways right into the path of Majors. His car went completely over the top of Henderson's and became airborne. While in the air, Henderson's car went under the flying automobile. Major's car came back to earth upside down smack on top of Henderson. Amazingly no one was hurt except the cars which went through some extensive repair work in the pits and both drivers returned to run in the feature race with both of them winning.

Racing will be held this Sunday at Shelby Speedway with the gates opening at Noon and racing starting at 2 p.m.

For Better Hunting and Fishing

by Earl Franklin Kennamer

Believe it or not, but energy talk has become more popular than sex discussion!

The event: the 52nd Annual Outdoor Writers Association of America (OWAA) meeting and workshop. Place: Hilton hotel, Albuquerque, NM. Time: June 16-21.

To me, the most significant portion of the week's program was discussion of the energy problem facing the nation's hunters, fishermen and campers. Experts on the panel facing 300 of us outdoor writers were Bob Honke, marketing manager of Ford Motor Company's Recreational Vehicle Div.; Dr. Wilbur LePage, project leader for the U.S.D.A. Forest Survey; Charles Singer, environmental data specialist for Pacific Gas and Electric Company; and Keith Hay, conservation director for the American Petroleum Institute (API). The consensus of the four panel members was that of all national groups, outdoorsmen will be struck hardest by the fuel crunch.

LePage stated that 50 percent of the total number of the nation's families are planning camping trips. "But," intones LePage, "Outdoorsmen will spend more time recreating close to home. Planning a camping, fishing or hunting trip will be the new order of the day--not just impulse traveling."

How many of you readers have said at Friday noon, "Let's jump into the ol' trailer and go to the Gulf for the weekend?" Or, have impulsively done something along the same line, such as going to grandma's or to mom and dad's?

Singer's points I jotted down. "Outdoorsmen will continue to travel, but they must be willing to spend more money for recreation. There will be a shift in the type of RV's (recreational vehicles), such as greater numbers of mini-vans. There will be more use of close-to-home recreational facilities. Outdoors minded citizens living close to population centers will use them rather than traveling long distances. Trips will be less frequent and stays will be longer."

We in Alabama are very fortunate in having plentiful streams and big lakes equally distributed for hunting, fishing and camping. I don't think that's possible in some of the western states, at least unless you involve a lot of traveling.

Honke said Ford was going to continue building RV's. But he said, "We're looking for all ways to save fuel, such as eliminating weight. For instance, we have redesigned fender wells to reduce weight of each fender 1½ pounds. Windshields are now being slanted to let air slide over the windshield and thus reduce air resistance to give more gas mileage."

"How can the Japanese introduce a new car model in this country which will burn regular gasoline and at the same time meet EPA standards while we have to suffer with catalytic converters on American made cars?" piped up one of my younger writing colleagues. He had a good question, but then he ruined it with this comment: "Certainly we are smarter than the Japanese!"

At this point I almost lost all control of my temper and joined in the ripple of dissenting mutterers in the room. "The Japanese," I said to my close-by seat partners, and they agreed, "Are as smart as or smarter than we. They make our computers, TV's, topflight cameras, binoculars, scopes. The same is true of the Germans--their Volkswagen, cameras, and other optical equipment are proven examples of their skills. The Germans used fuel alcohol during the war while we are just now getting into the business. Given time and Werner von Braun and Einstein and they would have developed the atomic bomb before we did. I fought the Germans and I can tell you right now--their army had soldiers as good as or better than ours. We just overpowered them with more troops and logistics. The trouble with us is that Americans have been brainwashed to the point we really believe we're superior to all other peoples!"

Still don't believe me? Who makes Daiwa tackle, which I now consider to rank among the best? Who now makes Browning guns?

What stands out as the most important statement at the Albuquerque meeting was this statement by one of the four panelists: "We know the energy shortage is here and it's just not a temporary event of 1979. It will last for the next five to 10 years."

What made this meeting a highlight to me was that for 15 years I had been telling my hunting and fishing audiences on TV, radio, etc., that we will burn up in 100 years' time what nature took possibly three billion years to produce!

At the time I was driving a 4-cylinder Falcon and getting up to 30.3 miles per gallon, while folks driving standard sized cars were getting 15 mpg!

County educators develop state program

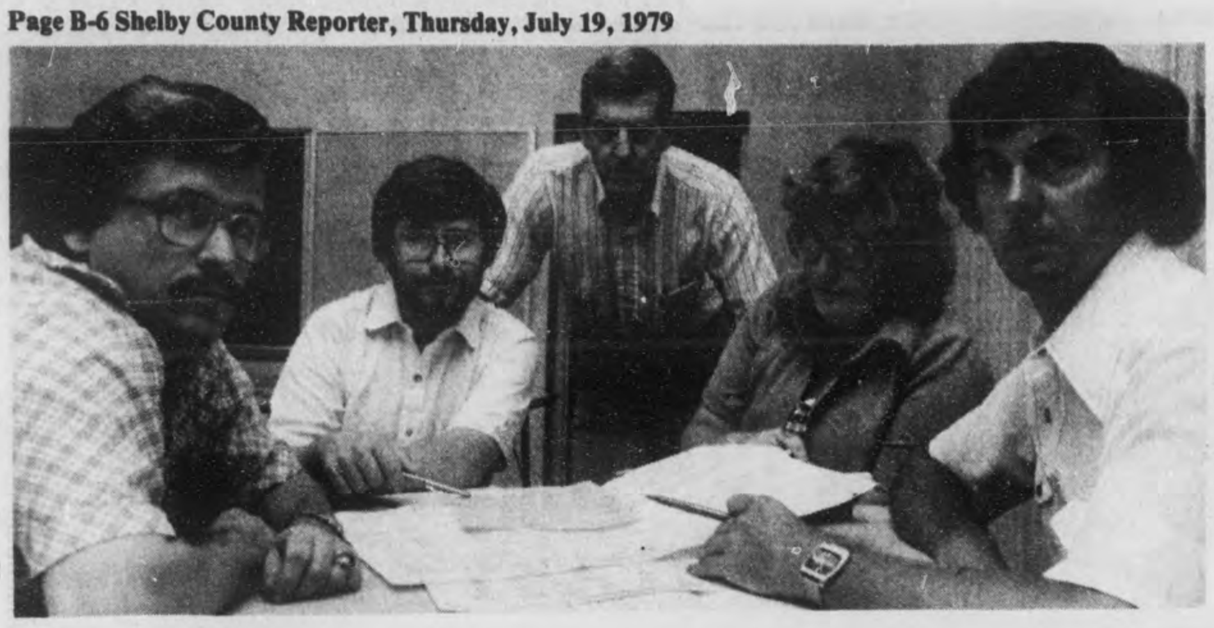
Two Shelby County educators are part of the task force that is writing the social studies curriculum for public school in the state.

When the group met the first week in July at the University of Montevalo, UM faculty member Dr. Henry Lash was selected to head the committee that will be concentrating on the course study for students in grades 9-12.

Dr. Lash and Thompson Middle School teacher J.B. Denham acted as hosts when members of the task force from throughout the state gathered on the UM campus.

In addition to his duties on the task force, Denham is also District 7 Director for the Alabama State Council for the Social Studies.

A projected deadline of December has been set by the group to complete their work which will determine social studies curriculum for students in grades K-12 for the next six years.



Studying social studies curricula for the state's elementary and secondary schools are members of the State Department of Education's Social Studies Task Force meeting at the University of Montevallo. Left to right are, J.B. Denham, Thompson Middle School, Alabaster, director, District Seven, Alabama State Council on Social Studies; Dr. Raymond Wicks, director of curriculum, McGill-Toolen High School, Mobile; Dr. Henry Lash, UM College of Education; Carol Holloway, Section High School; and Roy Smith, Bibb Graves High School, Millerville.

Garden-in-the-round solves space problem

Where there's a will there's a way. And the way a Calera couple found to grow both vegetables and flowers in a limited space could easily be imitated by others in a similar situation.

Although Paul Gray Ozley says she and her husband Robin borrowed the idea of an above the ground garden from a magazine, they adapted it to their own location.

The circular plot was constructed around the double trunk of a mimosa tree which had been cut down. Bricks were used to contain the soil which is a mixture of old sawdust and dirt brought in from the woods.

Planted in the spring, the garden is now thriving and bean vines have completely covered the tree trunks and are beginning to wind their way along an attached clothesline.

Other vegetables in the little garden include tomatoes and peppers which are nearly ready to pick. "We'll have all we need," Ozley commented.

Flowers now in bloom in the backyard enclosure are petunias, verbena and colea. Chrysanthemums will add more color later on.

Mrs. Ozley admitted that she's the gardener in the family. "But after moving in here two years ago," she related, "I never could find enough room for a plot."

The Ozley's home is located on Hwy. 25 just south of the Dairy Queen. And it was a neighbor, Mrs. Ozley noted, who started them on the unique garden by showing them the picture in a magazine.

And because other friends helped out, the project was done at no cost, Ozley reported. "One man told us where the sawdust could be found, and another hauled it for us in his truck," he said, adding that the old bricks were also donated.

Garden idea works

Paul Gray Ozley is shown working in the unique circular above the ground garden that she and her husband made this spring. Beans are almost ready for picking and tomatoes aren't far behind. Flowers add color to the backyard garden patch.

County Arts Council seeks talented artists

A group that wants to develop artistic appreciation among school age children is looking for people who would be willing to share their abilities in music, dancing, art and writing.

A push is on this summer by a new organization known as the Shelby County Arts Council, to get the names of people who would either speak or provide information to teachers in the school system.

"We'd even like to have the names of organizations that might be willing to come to the school and put on a dramatic or musical performance," says Debra Reeves, a Columbiana tea cher who recently joined the council.

Since the educational budget doesn't provide for much instruction in the field of the arts, the council is hoping to find support among parents and those interested in sharing their abilities.

In order to compile a resource list, it's asked that anyone who would like to take part in the endeavor or who would like more information to call Reeves at 669-7385. Letters may be addressed to Rt. 1, Box 97A, Columbiana, 35051.

Ordinary hot water wipes out fire ants

There's a simple way to rid your yard of fire ants, declares the state's environmental education organization. And it's effective, easy to apply and harmless to the environment, your family and pets.

According to the Alabama Environmental Quality Association, all it takes are a couple of buckets of hot water.

AEQA says Dr. Walter Tschinkel, insect ecologist at Florida State University, recommends the hot water as an alternative to using a variety of chemicals that are only moderately effective, and sometimes even banned by the Environmental Protection Agency, to control fire ant infestation around the house and yard.

Tschinkel told AEQA that ordinarily all it takes to wipe out an entire ant colony is about three gallons of hot water per ant hill. And, not even boiling hot.

For best results, Tschinkel suggests a sunny, but cool day, when the sun has drawn the ants close to the surface, for pouring hot water on the tops of encrusted mounds that have been broken open.

One or two additional treatments may be necessary, depending on where the ants are in the colony when the hot water is applied, he says, adding that some of the ants may survive, but they won't migrate after the hot water treatment.

He'll be competing the rest of his life. Maybe not on a ball field, but in class or for a job. And what will show up then is what you've spent on insurance for his education. Or what you haven't.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Beautiful antiques auctioned bi-monthly in Pelham

"Here is a fabulous Chippendale mahogany bookcase cabinet--dated 1800. Look at the sheen--this antique piece is in top condition...do I hear bids for this beauty?

The auctioneer's voice booms out persuasively and the highest bidder takes home a valuable period bookcase.

Antique enthusiasts from all over the South are on hand at bimonthly auctions at Pelham Mall's Auction Gallery.

Licensed auctioneers, Col. Charles W. Clements, Col. Dave Patterson, Col. Bob Byrum, and Col Charles W. Clements, Jr. call the event which is usually on the first and third Friday nights of every month beginning at 6:30.

The antiques offered at the Auction Gallery include everything from tremendous china breakfronts to sterling silver services and antique porcelain china.

The items, all top quality, are purchased from individuals, antique dealers, and often from estate sales.

Oriental pieces, which are the rage in today's decorating circles, are commonplace at an Auction Gallery auction. Japanese screens, urns, paintings, and even china cabinets are usually among items offered.

Plush oriental rugs, in small sizes as wel as wall-to-wall sizes are among the valuable antiques in stock.

Because so many items are sold at each auction, new pieces are brought in after every sale. Every auction offers a brand new line of articles to choose from.

Among the beautiful furniture you see as you wander through the gallery (the gallery is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. - 6 p.m.), you'll see brilliantly polished brass beds, solid pine grandfather clocks, American paintings, crystal Victorian lamps, and rugged oak roll-top desks.

Pieces from historical decades in the history of America as well as France, China, and England fill the gallery's chambers.

Desks, chests, dining suits, tea services, portraits, candlesticks, lamps, mirrorss, even vases and planters are among the many interesting antiques you'll see at the Auction Gallery.

Reserved seats for the auctions can be obtained by calling Howard Bonds at 663-1994, or better yet, drive out to the gallery, located in Pelham Mall, 2842 Montgomery Hwy. and pick out the antiques you want to bid for at the next sale.

Refreshments are served at the auctions and even if you don't find that prized piece you've been looking for, it's fun to hear that auctioneer do what he does best.

"Going once, going twice...sold, and this highest bidder is now the proud owner of a genuine Chippendale cabinet. It's all your's sir!"

Confused taxpayers pour into courthouse

by Lisa Sims

Taxpayers who have questions concerning their new property appraisals, are pouring into the courthouse this week.

According to Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds, 12,000 notices were mailed to property owners last week, informing them of the new appraised value of their property.

She said that 12,000 notices will be sent out by the end of this week and some 12,000 more the following week.

The new appraisal, completed this year by the PRC Jacobs Company of Virginia, raises the market value of Shelby County property by a significant amount.

Unfortunately, property owners don't often agree with the statements they are receiving.

According to Reynolds many are being credited with land they do not and never have owned. Others don't agree with the reappraised values.

"I received a letter today from a company informing me that they haven't owned land in the county in ten years," Reynolds said.

But the corporation still received a property reassessment.

The county's Board of Equalization began hearings this week.

Members of the board are Chairman L.P. Wilson of Alabaster, W.J. Mathis of Alabaster, and Louis W. Lauer of Calera.

Reynolds said that the Board hears 24 appeals per day and have heard almost that many after the first two days of hearings.

The hearings will probably continue for the next two weeks, Reynolds said.

Reynolds urges those who have problems or questions about mapping, land descriptions, or the new appraised values, to follow the proper procedures:

If the problem is simply one involving mapping and description, Reynolds said that property owners should first try to work out the errror in the Assessor's Office.

A WRITTEN request for a hearing is required to see the Board of Equalization. PLEASE include the ad valorem tax number, Reynolds said.

The Tax Assessor will then set up an appointment with the board which will be mailed to the taxpayer filing the appeal.

Reynolds said that hearings are going smoothly and that the board is looking at appeals realistically.

UW names teams

The Shelby County United Way Division leadership team was recently announced during a meeting with officials from the Jefferson, Shelby and Walker County United Way.

University of Montevallo President Jim Vickrey, County chairman for the second year in a row, said a team of what he called "busy people" are heading the seven-area campaign in the county.

Team members are John Lauriello, major account chairman; Hylott Armstrong, Columbiana-Wilsonville section chairman; Don Hughes, Montevallo-Calera section chairman; Rev. Reid Crotty, Alabaster-Helena section chairman; Bobbie Reynolds, public employees section chairman; Patsy Johnson, Pelham-Riverchase section chairman; and Steve Sears, professional section chairman.

"The men and women constituting the Shelby County leadership team are among the busiest people in our area," Dr. Vickrey said. "For that reason alone, I appreciate their willingness to help make the 1975 United Way campaign the success I'm confident it will be.

"But more than that, I am impressed by their continuing commitment to the welfare of our county, and I want to say 'thank

Sheriff's purchase raises questions

The Sheriff has a new Blazer for his department but members of the Shelby County Commission were unable to learn Monday how he intended to use the vehicle.

Before taking out insurance on the four wheel drive vehicle, Commissioner Ned Bearden said he thought the panel ought to know who would be driving the vehicle and for what purpose it would be used.

It was reported that Sheriff Buddy Glasgow was purchasing the $13,000 vehicle with pistol permit funds.

When Chief Deputy James Jones was summoned to the Commission office, he said he had no knowledge of how the vehicle would be used, just that it would be a Sheriff's Department vehicle.

Jones reported that the Blazer the department now owns is useful for off the road work such as traveling on woods' roads. He said that it is also used to transport groceries for the jail.

When the Reporter contacted the Sheriff, he affirmed Jones' explanation of the vehicles usefulness. He also noted that the Blazer holds up well adding, "It's worth any two other cars we have."

As to who will drive the vehicle, the sheriff said either he would use the Blazer and give the Chief Deputy his Mercury or Jones could use the new vehicle if he needed it. This will free the Chief's 1979 patrol car for road duty, the Sheriff said.

Explaining why the purchase of the Blazer was not affected by the bid law, Glasgow said that pistol permit funds "can be used at the Sheriff's discretion."

According to the Sheriff, the Blazer was purchased from Ken Terry Chevrolet on terms which amounted to a $1,500 savings. He pointed out that the arrangement was similar to a lease agreement, except that the vehicle would belong to the department when the final payment was made.

He went on to say that the Blazer is a county vehicle and he expected the Commission to take care of the insurance and maintenance.

After being assured by the Chief Deputy that the Blazer wouldn't be classed as an emergency vehicle, (which would mean a 20% increase in insurance charges), Bearden moved that the Commission take care of the insurance and expense.

The panel went along with Bearden and they also approved his suggestion that a survey be made of the number of vehicles being used by each department, who is driving them and how they are being used.

It was noted that the survey would help determine the amount of insurance coverage for each vehicle. One commissioner remarked that high insurance payments may presently be made on vehicles that aren't even needed.

Commission takes offensive

'Tired of blame'

by Marcia M. Sears

County Commissioner J. Alpha Lowe is getting tired of the Commission's being blamed for "everything that happens" in the county.

He said so at Monday's meeting after the latest complaint was filed about the shortage of deputies in the sheriff's department.

The Commission members feel that the large percentage of the total county budget that is required by the sheriff's department is partly responsible for the financial bind the county is in.

After borrowing over a half million dollars to maintain services at near their former levels for the remainder of the fiscal year, many commissioners feel they do not deserve the continued verbal abuse they are getting from people who would like to see the county spend more and more money for services.

When a petition from residents of north Shelby County asked that Deputy Louie Cosby be returned to patrol duties in that area instead of being assigned to jail duty, Commission Chairman Tommy Snowden explained that it is up to the sheriff to make assignments of deputies.

Commissioners tried to make it clear that they are not responsible for the schedules in other county

Beware Pine Beetle

The Alabama Forestry Commission has named Shelby County a critical county due to extreme Southern Pine Beetle Activity.

County Forrester David Stone says these tiny beetles are "more destructive than wildfire" to Alabama's valuable pine forests, and all owners of pine trees should be on the lookout for the beetles on their property.

Pine Beetles have always been a nuisance, but healthy, vigorous trees are usually able to withstand attacks by normal populations of beetles.

According to Stone, stressful situations, such as last summer's drought, weaken the trees' resistance and allow beetle populations to reach levels at which they can overcome even a healthy tree's resistance. This has happened in Central and Southern Alabama.

Symptoms of beetle activity are yellow or red foliage, resin or sawdust on the lower stem of the tree and eventual death of the tree. By the time these symptoms appear the beetles have usually moved on to nearby trees.

In a forest situation, the recommended treatment for an infestation is to harvest the infested trees and the apparently healthy pines in the immediate area which will remove and scatter the concentrated population of beetles.

In an urban or shade tree situation where salvage would be undesirable, pesticide treatment and removal of infested trees is recommended.

Shelby County landowners who notice beetle activity can call the Alabama Forestry Commission at 669-4133 for more detailed information and advice on beetle control.

The forestry commission has stepped up its pest detection activities and will be contacting landowners in the weeks to come if the beetles are noticed on their property.

Stone says this problem is serious and should be taken seriously by pine tree owners.

Hospital appoints administrator

by David Moore

The search for a new hospital administrator came to an end Friday night. By unanimous decision, the Shelby Memorial Hospital board of directors appointed R. Roland Bradford as new administrator.

According to board chairman Ben Grubbs, the board interviewed four finalists selected by the screening committee in the lengthy, special call meeting. Grubbs indicated that the short discussion following the interviews, and the board's unamimous decision were signs that the choice of Bradford was a good one.

"I think (SMH) has more potential than any other hospital in Alabama," Bradford told the Reporter Monday in a telephone interview. "I'm very excited because Shelby County is one of the fastest growing areas in the state and I look forward to helping the hospital grow with it."

Bradford, who has been involved in hospital work for 13 years, is currently administrator of the 38-bed D.E. Jackson Memorial Hospital, a private institution near Athens. He plans to aid that hospital in locating a new administrator before taking his new post at SMH before August 20.

Hospital officials have been searching for a new administrator since Richard Lind resigned the position in May after a conflict with the board over the hiring of a construction management firm to supervise SMH $7.5 million expansion program.

Though Bradford will step into the middle of the planned construction program, the step should not be too unfamiliar to the new administrator. In 1972, as assistant to the president of Birmingham's Brookwood Medical Center, Bradford assisted in the development and construction of the 288-bed Brookwood Hospital, and in 1973 he was appointed its assistant administrator.

SMH financial director and acting administrator Ralph Underwood, who toured the county's hospital with Bradford Saturday, said, "He'll need the support and cooperation of everybody. I know he'll have mine. We're looking forward to his coming."

From 1974-1978 Bradford was administrator of Sumpter Memorial Hospital in Livingston. He entered the hospital field in 1966 as an internal auditor of Baptist Medical Centers, and worked for a while as a Medicaid and Medicare auditor for Blue Cross.

United Way Campaigners

Columbiana man attacked

Columbiana pulpwood dealer Jerrell Moore was taken to Brookwood Hospital Sunday after being beaten by two Auburn University students he surprised in his shop yard.

The two 19 year old AU students were arrested by Columbiana police that Mrs. Moore managed to call as her husband was being attacked.

Moore reportedly got in a few licks of his own that sent William Earl Deupree of Atlanta to the hospital for treatment. He was admitted to the Shelby County Jail Monday morning and released on $700 bond an hour and a half later.

Ricky McWhorter, a 6'6" 215 lb. student from Huntsville was booked at 7 p.m. Sunday evening. He was released the following morning on $700 bond.

Both students were charged on three counts; assault and battery, petty larceny, and destroying property belonging to another.

The two men were discovered by Moore and his wife when they arrived at the wood yard Sunday. According to the pulpwood dealer, they were loading materials into a car and driving his truck recklessly around the yard.

When Moore instructed his wife to call the police, he said "the boys just went wild."

He was able to get a tire tool from his truck, Moore related, and his wife also managed to find a piece of metal and came to his assistance.

For new equipment

Landfill generates funds

After being assured by Solid Waste Supervisor Carlton Franks that the county's three landfills will generate at least $100,000 in annual revenue, the County Commission Monday voted to purchase a new tractor.

And before the meeting ended, the panel agreed to ask for bids on a second piece of equipment used primarily at the landfills.

The Commissioners asked Franks to appear at the meeting after Sherman Holland, a visitor at the proceedings, voiced concern about where the money for such a purchase would come from.

Citing the county's recent borrowing record in order to keep operating, the Alabaster Ford dealer said he didn't see any money available in the budget for a piece of equipment he predicted would cost around $130,000.

However, the figures submitted by the three bidders on the tractor surprised everyone. "I didn't dream they'd come in that low," remarked County Highway Director Jim Ray.

The accepted low bid of $79,125 was submitted by Joe Money. This was the net cost price after the company had given a $10,000 trade-in on the county's old machine.

Payments on the tractor will be divided into monthly payments of $1,604 over a 5 year period. The low price prompted the Highway Director to ask the Commission to send out bids on another machine to replace the worn out equipment the county now owns and they agreed.

Holland contended that "Sometimes it costs more to create revenue than what you take in." Although the expense of running the landfills wasn't spelled out at the Commission meeting, figures in that office show that the cost of running the operation for six months amounted to $75,800.

Operational figure set up in the budget was $120,000. But with the new system of payment imposed on cities and industries which started in July, Franks stressed that another $120,000 would be generated.

Part of the expense of running the landfill comes in equipment maintenance and Franks pointed out that the new machine should cut that figure.

The salary of five employees who operate the equipment accounts for the rest of the outlay of funds. At the present time the supervisor's salary, (nearly $14,000 annually), is paid by the Commission. However, when enough revenue is generated by the landfill operation it will come from that fund.

Because of the precarious condition of the county's landfill equipment, Ray succeeded in shortening delivery date on the new purchase from between 30 and 45 days to three weeks.

He also got the company to agree to furnish the county with a tractor, free of charge, should the county's machine break down before the new one is delivered. Ordinarily, Ray noted, the rental price would be around $3,500.

The next lowest bid was submitted by Thompson Tractor Company. Their figure was $98,501 with monthly payments of $1,974 over a five year period. Tractor & Equipment Company was the other bidder.

In Columbiana

Kindergarten registers

Registration for kindergarten in the Columbiana school area will be held on Tuesday, August 7.

According to Ann Head, principal of Hill Elementary School, the registration hours are from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m.

The kindergarten can accommodate only 20 children. Following the registration period, names will be drawn at random to determine which children can gain admittance to the program.

Mrs. Lisa McElroy Davis will be the teacher. She holds the BS degree from Auburn in elementary education, with special training in early childhood education. She taught in the kindergarten unit at Chelsea last year.

To be eligible for the kindergarten children must be five years old on or before October 1, 1979. Parents should bring the child's birth certificate to the registration.

Pelham reduces cost of DWI test

According to an opinion from the office of Attorney Genreal Charles Graddick, the city of Pelham can only charge a fee of $10 for the chemical test for intoxication.

Previously Pelham has been charging $15 as a part of the court cost for administering the test which determines if drivers are intoxicated.

According to Pelham Police Chief David Watson, the Pelham PD has to pay for the chemicals used in the test, although the machine is owned by the State Department of Public Safety.

Bill needs backing

Commenting on the failure of the Branch License Office bill to pass the legislature during this session, Shelby County Commission Chairman Tommy Snowden said, "It won't become a reality unless the people get involved and let their desires be known."

He also told the Commission Monday that he was working on a bill to separate the County Commission Chairmanship and the office of Probate Judge as he had promised when he ran for election.

The position of Commission Chairman, Snowden said, should be an elective office.

Other counties follow this practice and the idea has been talked about here for a number of years. However no bill has ever been introduced to separate the two offices.

With gas prices rising, Snowden predicted that residents from the north end of the county "are going to get fed up with coming over here for licenses. Then I think they'll begin to voice their feelings," he declared.

SMH administrator

Bradford graduated with a bachelor of science in accounting from Sanford in 1963, where he also did graduate work in business administration. He studied hospital administration through an external, home studies program offered by Trinity University of San Antonio, Texas.

"I think the board recognized that I have good experience and could help the hospital," Bradford said.

As for moving up from the 38-bed Jackson Memorial to the now 170-bed SMH, Bradford is very excited. Having received most of his early training at the 100-bed Baptist facilities and the large Brookwood center, Bradford says, "I had to change my thinking when I went to a small hospital."

Born in 1937, Bradford currently lives in the Huffman area of Birmingham with his wife, Nancy and their three children. Both Bradford and his wife say they are looking forward to moving to Shelby County.

Jail called White Elephant

The Shelby County Jail is one of the best in the country from and aesthetic point of view.

But as far as being functional, "It's not worth a nickel," a UAB criminal justice professor told the Shelby County Commission Monday.

And all of the defects in the 2 million dollar structure haven't been repaired. That fact was brought to the attention of the panel by Commissioner Harold Davenport who reminded Commissioners that warranty on the structure would run out in August.

Davenport said he thought Commission attorney Frank Ellis, Jr. ought to file suit against the contractor and bonding company and the panel approved his suggestion.

It was also mentioned that a suit ought to be brought against the three architectural firms that designed the jail which UAB professor Dr. Al Graves called a "White Elephant."

Plans for the new concrete structure were drawn up by two of the leading jail architects in the south and supposedly would require fewer men to work in the cell block area.

However, the opposite has proved to be the case. And the interns from UAB that Graves had previously told the Commission might be used at no cost apparently won't be coming after all.

According to Chief Deputy James Jones who interviewed four of the students, all of them were concerned about the driving distance.

After giving statistics on law enforcement personnel and the crime rate in other "suburban" counties that the Commission had asked Graves to compile, he told the panel that the county was "far short of the personnel it needs."

The UAB professor said that with the county's fantastic growth, there should be 100 law enforcement people, but he pointed out there are only 73 at the present time (34 are employed by the Sheriff's Department and 39 by municipalities).

According to Graves, the Sheriff's Department should have 20 deputies on road patrol which would mean adding seven men. "You haven't added any personnel in 4-5 years," he remarked. However, he was corrected by Probate Judge Tommy Snowden. Seven new employees were added when the move to the new jail was made, Snowden recalled.

In his comparison of counties, which Graves said was like comparing horses and cows because of differing circumstances, the professor noted that Elmore has the highest crime rate. He attributed the cause to the county have the lowest number of law enforcement personnel.

With only 52 sworn law men in the county (13 in the Sheriff's Department), Graves reported the crime rate in Elmore to be 406 per 100,000 population. In Shelby, the number is 227.

Should B'ham park pay fire district fees?

by David Moore

A communication breakdown has confused North Shelby Fire District's dues billing of Spain Park.

Complaints to the Reporter disclosed that Spain Park, the 300-acre nursery for Birmingham's park and recreation board, located within the fire district's boundries on Valley Dale Road, had not paid for fire and rescue protection.

From what the Reporter learned, fire district trustee Jack van Pelt approached Birmingham horticulturalist Carl Mattil at Spain Park in the latter part of 1978 about fire dues to the district. A commercial rating of 2¢ per square foot of covered are was quoted to Mattil.

After some discussions, dealing with the fact that most of the park's structures were glass greenhouses, van Pelt proposed a $200 contract for coverage.

Van Pelt said he also wrote a letter to park and recreation board business manager Bill Williams informing him of the proposed contract. According to van Pelt, he never received an answer to the letter.

In talking to fire district attorney David Whiteside, van Pelt learned that in the past, the city of Birmingham had considered such payments as a form of tax, and being a municipality, had claimed they were exempt from paying them.

Whiteside told the Reporter he had been given this information by attorneys for the city. He said it was his understanding that the proposed contract between the fire district and park boark had been killed somewhere in city government channels.

Van Pelt took the stand--one agreed upon by North Shelby residents--that it was unfair for the park to receive free protection at the expense of residents paying fire dues.

"If there's any legal base for collecting, we will," van Pelt told the Reporter Monday. "As of now, we'd answer a fire call there without getting a dime. But I intend to find out ultimately where this thing stands."

When questioned Tuesday concerning the fire dues, Mattil said, "I just assumed we had coverage and had paid for it."

Mattil went on to explain that at the park and recreation board's next meeting following his discussion with van Pelt, he had presented the argument that it was necessary to have protection (especially rescue and paramedic protection) from North Shelby County Fire District. He added that the $200 quoted to him by van Pelt was a very inexpensive price.

Mattil and Williams both said that the park and recreation board voted unanimously to pay for such protection.

When informed of this Tuesday, van Pelt said he was very surprised that the park board had acted on his proposed contract. Since he had never heard again from Williams, van Pelt said no invoice had ever been sent to the park board.

Williams said that he saw no reason why the board would not still pay the bill since they had already voted to do so last year.

The only problem remaining to be resolved now is whether or not the North Shelby County Fire District board of trustees will honor the $200 contract quoted to Mattil by van Pelt.

Tax assessor's machine to reproduce maps for property owners

"It will be a good service to the public," remarked Commissioner Ned Bearden as he and the rest of the county's governing body agreed to purchase a blue line copying machine.

The $1,890 piece of equipment requested by Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds will be used to reproduce property maps. Due to the reappraisal program, the demand for maps has increased, Reynolds said.

Highway Director Jim Ray pointed out that his department could also make good use of the copying machine.

It was emphasized that the machine would pay for itself with the fees charged for reproducing the maps. Reynolds suggested setting the price at $2 a copy.

The Commission approved the fee and agreed that the $50 monthly payments be made on a quarterly basis under the lease-purchase contract.

People coming into the Board of Equalization hearings are constantly asking for maps of their property, the Tax Assessor noted. She reported that the proceedings should be concluded by the end of August.

Pointing out that current use figures aren't reflected on the notices now being sent out, The Tax Assessor said they would be on the final notices.

Reader protests raise

Dear Editor:

How can our county officers get such a huge raise when our county is supposed to be broke? Where is all this money going to come from? There's not enough money to hire sufficient help to run our new jail or give the county workers a good salary. Unless you qualify for the CETA Program, there's no job available. There's not enough money for schools to be run sufficiently, and teachers work for peanuts, but our new superintendent of education gets a raise before he is sworn in. These 4 people who have gotten such big raises are elected officials, they knew what the salary was before they ran for office, then they can't live on the salary.

President Carter kept the teamsters from getting a fair raise, the Independent Truckers can't get a fair break. Most workers get a small raise which is expected, but $9,000 to $12,000, Boy!

It's going to take every American Citizen to help solve the gas crisis. It's going to take every Shelby Co citizen to help solve the money crunch. You can't give the officers of the county a big fat raise and then tell the working citizens to pay more taxes, higher utility bills, etc. and expect US to survive.

Salary increase could have replaced sheriff's deputy

Dear Editor:

For the last few months I have been reading and hearing about the County being broke, having to borrow money to meet payrolls and paying bills, even having to lay off people working in the Sheriff's Department. Wanting the 4¢ gasoline tax passed to have more revenue. What for? So some of the people working in the Courthouse can get another raise. It seems to me if there was enough money to give 3 people a $19,500.00 a year raise, that money could have been used to replace, at least one, back in the Sheriff's Department. A position where people are needed, I think it is a shame, that 2 men have to work the County at night, there should be two men to a car, and a car in each district from sundown to sunup, that should be a legislative law. The law enforcement is the most important part of any county and I understand we are 19 personnel short in our Shelby County law enforcement. If this is true I think they should be replaced at once. Shelby County is a big county, with industries and businesses paying big taxes. Where is this money going??

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

Words That Stick in My Mind: Sometimes we'd go down the hill and pass Mrs. McMillan's house and the public school and W.W. Carter's house on Carter Lane and hit Silk Stocking Street in front of the Chandler house and follow it north past the Henry Miller house and the Northup house until we got to the rail road. It wasn't far from there.

But most of the time we'd go out through Longshore's lot and down the shady lane and past the big dewberry patch. It was just down the hill from the dewberry patch. But no matter how we went, we always started taking off our clothes when we got in sight of the wash-hole. And somebody always hollered: "The last one in is a rotten egg."

* * * *

The buttercups had come and gone. And the February rose bush, in the corner of the yard, had lost its blossoms weeks ago. Pop had sent a man up from town and he had plowed the garden. The onions were ankle high and the English peas were full of blooms and the Kentucky wonder beans were beginning to run. We had thinned the corn out and checked the green apples to see if they were ready to eat. And in the chicken lot, the other side of the barn, Granny had already set two bantam hens on domminecker eggs. For two weeks we had been asking her the same thing. And for two weeks she had been saying NO. But this morning, with the sun warm outside and a little wind blowing, she had said: "All right, you can go swimming today. But be back before dinner."

* * * *

We have been living high on the pig at our house lately. We always do this time of year, with the garden dishing out the fresh stuff and Leona cooking it. When we have pole beans and Marion tomatoes and okra and onions and cucumbers and corn at our house it never crosses our minds that there are other things to eat. It just doesn't occur to us that you can get a pretty fair t-bone steak for under $80.00 a pound or center-cut pork chops for under $79.00. But Rip, our little bench-legged dog, ain't so hot on garden stuff. I guess that's why somehow I just got the feeling that this is pretty close to what he's trying to tell me: "For what I'm paying, I think I ought to get a little better grub."

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

I have never been able to see what's so great about arriving early. It's fine to be on time, yes, but why get to your destination 10 or 15 minutes before an event is to start?

The only reason I can see is to get a front row seat if the occasion is such that you would want one. Otherwise, my view is that you hurry up and wait.

When I was married, my spouse would rush me along as we prepared to go somewhere. "It's time to leave," he'd say every few minutes with increasing urgency.

When we departed, I usually felt as though I was only half put together. And when we reached our destination (the few times we succeeded in arriving early), we waited aimlessly for whatever it was to start.

But even getting someplace on time is a big problem for me, and it isn't because, in most instances, that I don't start in plenty of time. It just seems that there are so many distractions.

For example, I can be walking through the family room, where there are about 30 plants, and suddenly notice that they won't be able to make it through the day or night without an immediate watering.

And another thing that throws my timing off is not actually getting out the attire I'm planning to wear. So when the time comes to prepare for an occasion, as often as not the clothes I had in mind are in one of my daughter's closets.

There was one memorable time in my past though , when I managed to "get it all together," and arrived at my destination quite a bit ahead of time.

Although this is distasteful to me, as I mentioned, this particular luncheon was hopefully to lead to my employment. I decided it would be a good idea for me to get my bearings before the affair got underway, hence my early arrival.

"This is really too good to be true," I thought as I made my way into the room where the luncheon was to be held. And I was right.

After sitting there with no one I expected to see showing up, I began to be a bit alarmed.

Looking up the business number of the person who had invited me, I was informed by his secretary that the affair had been moved to another location. "He tried to reach you," she declared sweetly.

There was noting to do but believe her and get directions to the new meeting place.

When I arrived the last plates were being cleared from the table and someone was launching into a speech. My efforts at trying to slip in unnoticed were foiled when my would be benefactor noticed me.

As the speaker threw us dirty looks, he escorted me to a seat at the table, summoned the waiter and insisted that I order lunch.

Surprisingly enough, the speaker and other members of the group were cordial to me as the meeting broke up, but no job resulted.

However, I did learn that I could arrive early if I really tried. If I hadn't, the whole thing would have been over before I found it and I would have missed a memorable experience.

UM faculty-staff to get 4% raise

University of Montevallo faculty and staff can expect a raise of less than four per cent next year as a result of the conditional pay raise bill passed by the Legislature last week.

UM President Jim Vickrey said that although the University will receive an additional appropriation of up to seven per cent of the full-time faculty salary total, the money is to be distributed to all personnel.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

Question of "God-Called" Preachers

Does God miraculously call people to preach today? If He does, why do some of those who claim to be miraculously called contradict each other? The inspired apostles and evangelists of the first century, such as Paul and Peter, did not contradict each other in their teaching. John warned that we are not to "believe every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world." (I John 4:1) Beloved reader, it is possible to believe false spirits and be lost because of believing a lie. (II Thess. 2:11, 12) How important it is not to let a false teacher deceive you!

Many supposedly "God-called" preachers today contradict Bible teaching that baptism is a burial--immersion by teaching sprinkling for baptism. (Romans 6:4; Colossians 2:12) Others contradict Bible teaching that baptism is for the remission of sins by teaching that baptism is unnecessary and does not save. (Acts 2:38; Acts 22:16; I Peter 3:21) Does God miraculously call persons today to contradict what Paul and Peter taught in God's Word? Does God call persons to preach today that one church is just as good as another when Paul taught that "There is one body?" (Ephesians 4:4; Ephesians 1:22, 23; I Corinthians 12:20) Paul taught also that responsible persons are to be "baptized into one body." (I Corinthians 12:13)

Inasmuch as God does not perform miracles in the twentieth century, He does not now miraculously call persons to preach. How, then, are preachers and teachers to be made? Paul instructed Timothy, "And the things which thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." (II Timothy 2:2) To be saved, dear reader, you must believe (Mark 16:16), repent (Acts 2:38), confess (Romans 10:9, 10), and be baptized. (Acts 2:38, 47)

Curtis A. Cates, Evangelist

Annual Homecoming at Aldrich First Baptist Church will be held on August 5.

A revival is in progress this week at Bethel Baptist Church. Leading the services is evangelist Ken Clements, pastor of Indian Springs Baptist Church.

Ed Lightsey is in charge of the music. Services begin at 7 p.m. each evening through Friday, July 27.

Library focuses on bike safety

departments, and advised that petitioners take up the matter with the sheriff.

Snowden's patience was also running thin on the subject of office space in the courthouse. He has suggested for over a year that federal agencies pay rent to the county for the space they occupy or rent quarters elsewhere, but none of them has done so. He said with emphasis, the county is providing the federal agencies free space and utilities and "I think we should tell them to pay rent or get out."

He continued that federal offices serve very few persons compared to those who use the probate office, the tax assessor's office and the collector's office.

"The three main offices that serve the people are so cramped that Fay Quick (Tax Collector) doesn't even have a private office. If you want to talk to her you have to go out in the hall and sit on a bench."

Montevallo firemen respond 117 times

The Montevallo Fire Department answered 4 alarms last week, the 114th to 117th alarms since the fiscal year began last October 1.

None of the alarms was serious, with two being standby calls and two false alarms.

The former occurred Saturday, July 21, when a Burgess mine coal truck overturned at the intersection of state highways 119 and 25. However, the coal was removed before ignition.

Some four hours later, at 2:58 p.m. on the 21st, lightning struck a power pole; knocking wire onto a vehicle parked at the Highway 25 Junior Food Mart. Again, the sparks failed to catch, and active intervention was not needed.

The false alarms were turned in at 6:13 p.m. on Friday, and about 6 a.m.Tuesday at UM's Main Dorm Because of the importance of the building, the department rolled all its units despite the history of false alarms there.

Resident designs county schools

by Lisa Sims

Shelby County is known for its inspiring pine forests and rolling hills and architect Thurston Sumner says the county's landscapes are valuable in his work.

Sumner has been a practicing architect for the past 25 years--10 of those in his own corporation.

Nine years ago, Sumner says, he purchased property in Columbiana on which to build his home and office complex. Last year he built it, situated deep in the woods off a rural county road. The Sumner headquarters blends right in with the natural setting.

The new Shelby County businessman also says that he feels it is important to employ young people in his work. Several county young people work for Sumner as draftsmen, designers and maintenance personnel.

Sumner is credited with the design of the new Calera High School, Pelham High School and renovation at Montevallo High, Helena Elementary, and Thompson High.

Presently, he is designing the proposed Inverness Elementary School. Sumner says the school, like the community, will have a natural, woodsy look.

Working closely with Ted Lansford of the Shelby County Board of Education, Sumner says he has already "donned his overalls" and visited the school site on Valleydale Road across from the Inverness entrance.

Because of the variations in the property's elevation, Sumner says the new school will be built to fit the land. It will be built in increments, divided with ramps for handicapped and steps for other students.

To suit the surroundings, Sumner says the exterior of the school will be made of natural woods, stones, and shingled, sloping roofs.

More glass will probably be used, according to Sumner, because of the beautiful forest enclosure.

The early drawings of the Inverness project, offer classrooms that are self contained, but that can also be opened for team teaching. Unlike the "pod construction" at some county schools, each classroom will have walls and doors will open to the outdoors and to the inner area of the building.

Sumner says that plans for the excavation will be presented to the Board of Education soon for their consideration.

Meanwhile, Shelby County landscapes and natural beauty will contine to inspire Sumner's work on county schools.

Montevallo backs rule on residential zoning

Can heavy trucks be parked in residential zones in Montevallo? The answer given to James Thrasher at Monday night's council meeting was "No."

Thraser attended the meeting to ask the full council if he could not park his truck at his home in Indian Highlands subdivision. Thrasher said he had received a letter from the city clerk asking him to comply with city zoning regulations which prohibit the parking of large trucks in that neighborhood.

The council defended the clerk's enforcement, which came after complaints had been received at city hall about the truck. Thrasher was advised that he could take his problem to the zoning board for further consideration if he wanted to.

In other discussions, Councilman Grady Parker reported he had received several complaints about loitering and beer drinking in the city park near the Middle School on Ellis Street. Some people, he said, feel that children are deprived of use of the park because of the gangs that hang out there.

Councilman Herb Milstead mentioned that loitering is also a problem at the old Standard Station and at the bank parking lot.

City Clerk Don Hughes told the council that the cost of natural gas will go up by 17 cents per thousand cubic feet and the change will be reflected on bills received August first.

Hughes reported that he and Mayor Ralph Sears had gone to Montgomery on July 12 and had met with ABC official Joe Goodwater about establishing a green front store in Montevallo. Businessmen and councilmen who had originally planned to go with them were not able to make the trip.

Hughes proposed that the city start taking bids for a new garbage truck.

In another report Hughes said that preparations for constructing the new building at Orr Park on Vine Street are progressing satisfactorily.

Police Chief Troy Kirkland is checking complaints that pin ball machines are being operated with out licenses in the city. He is also looking into enforcement of the laws on cigarette stamps and the gasoline tax.

Humane Society names fund drive chairman

Hal Fredericks, president of WCRT/WQEZ Radio, has been named chairman of the Birmingham Humane Society Building Fund Campaign to raise $500,000 for construction and renovation of the Humane Society Animal Shelter on Lomb Ave. West.

The new shelter will have the capacity to house 30 to 40 per cent more animals than the present Humane Society shelter. The capacity for kittens and puppies will be more than doubled, according to Dr. John D. Nall, Humane Society board president.

The Birmingham Humane Society shelter serves Shelby and four other counties.

This is NOT by Shelby County Commission Choice!

The Shelby County Commission DOES NOT agree with this since it has always made every effort to lend reasonable aid fairly and equitably to all its citizens and does sincerely regret it is no longer legally able to do so, according to very recent legal opinions.

The above changes are brought about by legal opinions of the Attorney General of Alabama, the Honorable Charles A. Graddick, the highest Legal Officer of the State that were based on Alabama Law. His written opinions are applicable to all 67 Alabama Counties and the State Highway Department. A copy of the Attorney General's opinions may be obtained from the office of the Shelby County Commission if desired.

The Commission thanks the citizenry of Shelby County for their understanding of this matter which is beyond its control.

KAREN HUGHES
IN MEMORY

Memories of Karen
Always full of laughter
Always on the go
Ready to have a good time
But did she ever know?
That we really loved her
How much we really cared
Times we spent together
Moments we all shared.
I don't understand the reason
I ask myself why
God took her from us
Why she had to die?
Her smile will live with us
Her beauty we'll remember
She was too young to die
Seventeen next November

In loving Memory of Karen Hughes, who passed away 3 years ago, July 31, 1976.

Alabaster nutrition site moved to the depot

Participation in Alabaster's Program on Aging has increased to the point that there is no longer enough space at the present meeting site.

So on Monday, moving operations were begun to relocate the program from the American Legion building on the hilltop to the Depot in Alabaster Park.

The Grand Opening at the new facility will get underway at 2 p.m. Friday when Rev. Tom Hammons, pastor of the Central United Church, gives the invocation.

Refreshments will be served at the occasion and there will also be a speaker. Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek and members of the Alabaster Council will be among the invited guests.

The Alabaster program is currently serving 40 meals a day, and there are a total of 115 senior citizens involved in the activities that take place at the site Monday through Friday.

DRAMATIC DECORATING

Yes, you can have beautiful, exciting decor in your home by using some of the principles of dramatic decorating.

One of the ways to achieve dramatic decorating is the addition of one really outstanding piece of furniture to perk up the room and bring new excitement to it.

Or, how about a new color?

Or, some outstanding new accessories.

Or, how about a new mixture of furnishings? You know, one of the great trends in home furnishings is the freedom to mix--the use of specific pieces of furniture to improve a room, with only certain restraints. It is what one decorator has called "disciplined freedom". That is, the freedom of being able to mix differing furnishings but with the discipline of harmony and good taste.

In this way, you can add dramatic highlights to your rooms and assemble the exact kind of things you like.

By using some dramatic decorating, you can create attractive, warm, appealing interiors for your home. And, remember we are here to help you with both the furnishings and the ideas, so stop in.

Coaches clinic success again

Despite the obvious adverse effects of the gasoline shortage and pro-rationing in higher education, the Fifteenth Annual University of Montevallo Basketball Coaches' Clinic was once again a big hit with cage Coaches around the state.

Approximately 65 coaches from all levels attended the three-day gathering on July 12-14, and were treated to some of the finer points of the game as taught by Sonny Smith of Auburn University, Greg Walcavich of Birmingham-Southern College, Doug Key of Chattahoochee Valley Community College, Stokley Bazemore of Wetumpka High School, and Jerry Rice of Butler High School in Huntsville.

Winners of the golf and tennis tournaments were announced at the buffet dinner on Friday night, where Coach Smith was the featured speaker. He and his assistant coach, Herbert Greene, were the tennis doubles champions, defeating Philip Zenoni, assistant at Chattahoochee Valley, and Bruce Stewart, graduate assistant at Jacksonville State University, in an 8-5 pro set.

Zenoni took the singles title, downing Montevallo sports information director Blair Cash 6-1, 6-2, in the finals.

Coach Rice captured the golf tournament with a 36-hole total of 138, carding a 69 each day. Runner-up in the golf was last year's champion, Charlie Pridgen of Baldwin County High School, who shot a 144.

Tennis winners

Distance runner to attempt 150 mile run

On Saturday, July 28, John Henry Parker will attempt to run from Birmingham to Atlanta to benefit the Jefferson-Shelby Heart Association.

Parker says he runs fifty miles per day to keep in training.

In 1976 he attempted a run from Tuscaloosa to Birmingham falling short by six miles.

In 1977 he successfully ran from Montgomery to Birmingham.

Parker is recruiting sponsors on a per mile basis. All proceeds will go to the American Heart Association, Jefferson-Shelby Division.

Those wishing to be sponsores should contact the Heart Association office at 592-8363, or call Parker at 252-8547.

CVA gets new coach

Coosa Valley Academy named a new head football coach last week. Mark Green was named to the post after former coach Hugh Phillips resigned to accept a job with the city of Sylacauga.

Green comes to the Harpersville private school from Tennessee where he served as an assistant coach. Prior to that job he coached three years at Childersburg High School.

The new coach has been in the coaching field for seven years, is married and has two children. Presently Coach Green and his family are living in Childersburg. A spokesman for the athletic department told the Reporter that Green came highly recommended and is already on the job.

Wins another feature race

Payton leads buggies at local speedway

Tom Payton of Calera took the top spot in both the Bomber Feature and Heat Race Sunday afternoon at Shelby Speedway. Gary Perry of Alabaster ran second behind Payton in both races.

Bobby Lucas of Alabaster, Buddy Thomas of Harpersville and Marvin Booth of Dogwood followed in third through fifth place in the Bomber Division feature.

Because of the large number of Bomber entrees in Sunday's race, track manager Jerry Handley held a special consolation race which Art Brackin of Jemison won followed by Bill Haggerty of Pelham who made his first race of the season at Shelby Speedway.

Bennie Brasher continues to dominate the buggy division at Shelby Speedway with yet another feature race win. Brasher also claimed the checkered in the heat race. Bobby Carter ran second in both of those races with Rick Majors of Brantleyville, placing third in the feature whild Jeg Horton claimed third in the heat race.

Terry Wesley of Hueytown won both the Modified heat and feature race. Rounding out the top three in the heat race were Greg Buse and Gary Franklin. Franklin didn't have much of a chance to race in the feature race. On the first lap, he was coming out of the fourth turn when he was bumped by another car. He lost control and rammed into the guard rail which sent his car on a complete double sideways and end over end flip. The car was demolished but due to the safety designed roll cage and seat belts, Franklin was only shaken up.

Ronnie Gothard of Branleyville took second in the Modified feature race with Greg Buse third, Gerald Harris of Hoover fourth and Paul Walden of Bessemer fifth.

Races will again be held this Sunday with the gates opening at Noon and racing starting at 2 p.m. Track officials told the Reporter that as soon as the track lights are installed, racing will begin on Saturday nights.

UM signs two to grants

Ricky Whisenant, a shortstop from Meridianville and Mike McLeod, an outfielder from Rahway, New Jersey, have become the eighth and ninth players signed by the University of Montevallo for the 1980 baseball season.

"We're extremely pleased to have these two joining our programs," said UM coach Bob Riesener. "Ricky has good possibilities of playing a lot for a freshman infielder, and Mike will do a fine job at any of the outfield spots for us."

Previous UM signees include infielders Wade Bolin of Alabaster, Mark Gothard of Jemison, and Robbie Guesnard of Mobile, outfielder David Lewis of Eight Mile, catcher Ron Potter of Kansas City, and pitchers Roger Judy of Mobile, and Tom Bukorac of Kansas City.

Columbiana Rec Rap

Wow, what a week! There were games, games and more games played at the 'rec' last week. Bingo and twister topped them all. Our elemtary and afternoon groups won prizes in bingo and our afternoon group fell for twister.

In crafts, each group proved their creativeness in finger painting. These works of art will be displayed at our summer showcase in August. I hope all parents and friends will be able to attend this.

The afternoon group will be busy this week. They will be beginning a horseshoe tournament and practicing their "act" for the summer showcase.

A big welcome goes to Sherry Pool who will join us every morning to play with the kids.

The preschoolers had a nice picnic at the park last week and played kick ball at the rec.

I hope everyone is having a fun summer. Drop by the rec and see what fun we have.

See ya!

FOR BETTER HUNTING AND FISHING

If you're a fisherman, and odds you are, because you wouldn't be reading this column, you have used Eagle Claw hooks. This firm is one of the two largest makers of fish hooks. But Eagle Claw folks have gone a bit further--they have published a tome to help you with your catch. Title? "Eagle Claw Fish Cookbook."

Author is Ken Anderson; publisher is Dorison House publishers, Inc. Cambridge, New York.

The 144-page hardback covers recipes of saltwater as well as our common freshwater species of fish.

To give you an idea as what to expect, I selected three recipes that fit our popular fish in Alabama. I've never seen these in any other cookbook.

STRIPED BASS SUPREME: Serves 6

2 lbs. striped ball fillets
½ c. melted fat or cooking oil
½ c. sesame seed
⅓ c. cognac
⅓ c. lemon juice
3 T. soy sauce
1 t. salt
1 large garlic clove, crushed

Thaw fillets, if frozen. Cut into equal serving portions and place in a single layer in a shallow baking dish. Combine the remaining ingredients into a sauce and pour the sauce over the fish fillets. Let stand for 30 minutes, turning once. Remove fish but reserve the sauce for basting. Place the fish filets in well-greased, hinged, wire grills. Set the grills about 4 inches from moderately hot coals and cook for 8 minutes. Baste with the sauce. Turn and cook for an additional 7 to 10 minutes, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork.

CATFISH GUMBO: Serves 6

1 lb. skinned catfish fillets
½ c. chopped celery
½ c. chopped green pepper
½ c. chopped onion
1 garlic clove, finely chopped
¼ c. melted butter or cooking oil
2 beef bouillon cubes
2 c. boiling water
1 (16-oz.) can tomatoes
1 (10 oz.) package frozen okra
2 t. salt
¼ t. pepper
¼ t. thyme
1 bay leaf
dash liquid hot pepper
1½ c. hot cooked rice

Thaw fillets if frozen. Cut into 1-inch pieces. Cook celery, green pepper, onion and garlic in butter or oil until tender. Dissolve bouillon cubes in water. Add bouillon, tomatoes, okra, and seasonings. Cover and simmer for 30 minutes. Add fish. Cover and simmer for 15 minutes longer or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove bay leaf. Place ¼ c. rice in each of soup bowls. Fill with gumbo.

BASS STEW WITH CORNBREAD DUMPLINGS: Serves 6 to 8

2 lbs. bass fillets
1½ c. sliced onions
¼ c. butter or margarine
1 (10 oz.) package frozen mixed vegetables, partially defrosted
1 (4-oz.) can sliced mushrooms, undrained
2 (10½ oz.) cans condensed cream of celery soup
1 c. milk
1 t. salt
¼ t. leaf thyme
4 slices bacon, diced
9 to 10 oz. commercial corn muffin mix
As desired milk.

Thaw fish if frozen. Cut fish into 1 inch pieces. Cook onions in butter or margarine until tender but not browned in a 6 qt. Dutch oven with heat proof handles, stirring often. Add frozen vegetables and mix. Add mushrooms, soup, milk, salt, and thyme. Heat and stir until hot, fold in fish. Cover and bake in a hot oven, at about 400 degrees F. for 15 minutes or until hot and bubbly. Fry bacon until crisp; drain on paper towels. Prepare muffin mix according to manufacturer's directions but reducing milk by half. Stir in crisp bacon lightly and drop 6 to 8 mounds of batter onto the hot fish mixture. Return to oven and bake for 20 minutes or until dumplings are done and fish flakes easily.

Eat your heart out, you French snail lovers!

On track closing

Comment wanted

Environmentalists are being asked to comment on the closing of L & N track between Calera and Columbiana.

The Railroad has proposed that the line be abandoned for a distance of 16.3 miles. The law requires that the public be given notice so it may comment on the "Presence or abaence of environmental impacts and reasonable alternatives."

The Interstate Commerce Commission's Energy and Environment Branch has already concluded that the proposed abandonment will not significantly affect the quality of the human environment.

Persons who care to make a statement may make it in writing on or before August 10, to the ICC, Office of Policy and Analysis, Washington, DC 20423.

Columbiana woman honored as outstanding med student

Karen Stone Atwood of Columbiana was among four honored medical students of the University of Alabama's College of Community Health Sciences in Tuscaloosa.

Atwood was a co-recipient of the award for the Outstanding Family Medicine Student.

She recently completed her final two years of training at the College.

Sawdust fuels plant

Russell Corporation has found the answer to skyrocketing and scarce energy supplies. Its solution is sawdust, says the Alabama Environmental Quality Association, the state's environmental education organization.

The Alex City textile firm has converted its plant to wood fuel. Every day tons of sawdust and bark residue from neighboring sawmills within a 50-mile radius are delivered to Russell Corporation to be consumed as fuel, says wood fuel manager Tom Crowell.

According to Crowell, the firm used natural gas, fuel oil and coal to generate the year-round steam required for fabric processing and drying before natural gas was curtailed for boiler use and prices more than doubled for coal and oil. It was then Russell Corporation decided to convert to wood and since January 15, 1976, Russell has used it for fuel.

Russell's two 60,000 lb. per hour boilers consume an average of 112,000 tons of wood residue each year. And Crowell told AEGA that "burning wood waste for fuel saved over five million gallons of fuel oil," reducing our dependence on undependable and expensive foreign oil. "Instead of our dollars going to OPEC, Russell now pays area sawmills for what they used to pay to dispose of while reducing the flow of waste to nearby landfills."

Wood fuel is not only abundant and renewable, it is clean to burn, declares Crowell. Generally, wood combustion is "chemically" clean, he says, pointing out that wood combustion produces less than one percent ash as compared to about 10% with coal and most of that small amount of ash can be removed by mechanical collectors. And, the pollution output for Russell's new boilers is one-fourth the maximum state regulations allow, adds Crowell.

Russell Corporation is the nation's first largescale wood-fired boiler plant in the non-forest products industry, AEQA says.

House designer creates homes from visions dreamed up in his customers' minds

HOUSE PLANS
Let us design a home especially for you!

Tully
Burch
Residential Designer
663-2224
Helena, Al.

The key to Tully Burch's success as a custom house designer lies in the word "communicate."

"I talk with my clients to see what it is they do and do not want in their house. I draw the ideas out of their heads and put them in mine," says Burch.

The end product is a house custom tailored to the client's needs, specifications, budget and/or wildest dreams. Tully Burch, however, is a good one to make recommendations on features that enhance the resale value of a house.

TULLY BURCH

If you're thinking of building in the near future, it would be to your advantage to give. Burch a call before you get started. Given a few ideas of the house you have in mind, he can give further advice as to lot types and settings. After the lot has been chosen, Burch suggests sitting down with the family and determining exactly what it is you want--after all, it's going to be your house.

"You don't usually come up with an idea in one day. If you give it some thought and kick around ideas, then bring them in to me along with maybe some magazine clippings, notes or sketches, I can do a better job," the designer explains.

In his spare time, Burch has been working on a house design for his family. Because his wife cooks so much, he has given the kitchen special attention, designing a desk and bookshelves for her many cookbooks, two large pantries for all the supplies and utensils, and lots of counter space.

For himself, he has designed an upstairs studio, with cathedral ceiling. He's also included a pool room downstairs.

In a similiar fashion, once Tully Burch understands exactly the sort of house you wish to have built, he will tailor the plans to your every need. All his houses include energy conscious features, and solar power can even be incorporated into the plans.

Desigining your house will take Burch from 10-30 days. But, he emphasises, "I won't hurry up and draw a house because I want to get paid for it."

Besides custom houses, Tully Burch also designs room additions, basement modifications and carport enclosures. Furthermore, he has a file of nearly 500 different houses and floor plans from which you can choose if you don't want a custom design.

"If I had a motto," Tully says, "it would be that customers don't walk out of here unless they're satisfied. If the customer's happy, it means I'm pleased."

Tully Burch works out of an office he designed next to the post office in Helena. If the idea of living in a house tailored to your personal needs strikes you as being the way a house should be, drop by or give Tully Burch a call at 663-2224.

Hospital plans ready for bids

The architect's prints for the new Phase II expansion at Shelby Memorial Hospital are in the hands of the State Health Department for approval.

Hospital Chairman Ben Grubbs told the Reporter Tuesday that the Architectural firm Dampier and Harris of Alabaster had delivered the prints to him on July 25. The State must approve them for code compliance and other items before construction begins, he noted.

The board expects to open bids on September 7, Grubbs said. The architects have estimated the cost at about $7.3 million.

The fee for the architects will be $527,060 based on the above estimate. To date the hospital board has paid the architects $485,450 for their work on Phase II designs.

In action at the board meeting on July 24, a contract was awarded to Central Alabama Paving for a new parking area in front of the hospital. The low bid for the work was $104,385. Completion date for the parking project is about 60 days.

Acting administrator Ralph Underwood reported that the results of the state licensure survey revealed that several areas of the hospital, notably the kitchen, had leaking ceilings and peeling paint. Most of the problems will be corrected by the Phase II project.

The survey stated that no significant deficiencies were noted at SMH.

Comparative statistics on the hospital revealed that admissions so far this year are up by 117, while patient days decreased by 167. Occupancy of the hospital is running at 81.5%.

Personnel Committee recommendations passed by the board call for the addition of seven full time equivalent employees to be included in next year's budget. The board also agreed to add Good Friday to the seven legal holidays now granted hospital personnel.

The board voted to grant a tentative wage adjustment for employees in October.

The final amendments to the board's corporate bylaws were approved.

The board approved recommendations by the medical staff for the provisional appointment of Dr. Glen Wells (urology) to the active hospital staff. Dr. Karl Egerman (pediatrics) and Dr. Bruce Irwin (general practice) were approved for provisional appointment to the courtesy staff.

As a point of information, Grubbs noted that Dr. Herbert Pegues had resigned from the Double Oak Emergency Medical Association. Grubbs pointed out that the action in no way affects the company's contract with the hospital for emergency room operation.

essor mails new round ax reappraisal notices

ds of the new tax appraisal notices have been mailed to county taxpayers.

According to Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds, 12,000 statements were mailed last week and another 12,000 on Monday, July 30.

Taxpayers who do not agree with the new appraised value of their property have been scheduling hearings with the county's Board of Equalization since early last week.

Jewel Waldrop of the Assessor's Office, has been supervising the flow of property owners into the Board hearings.

"The hearings are going extremely well. Basically, the only problem we have is with taxpayers who do not understand their statements," Waldrop explains.

The problem with the statements, according to Waldrop, is that they do not include the legal description of the land appraised. Therefore many of the errors are due to incorrect mapping or failure to record changes in ownership.

The Board has heard close to 150 complaints, Waldrop said. And she predicts that they will hear at least 24 complaints per day for the next two weeks.

Statements will continue to be mailed next week. Those who have problems or questions concerning mapping, land descriptions, or the new appraised values, should follow the proper procedures:

If the problem is simply one involving mapping and descriptions, taxpayers would first try to correct the error at the Assessor's office in the courthouse.

A WRITTEN request, is required to obtain a hearing with the Board of Equalization. Reynolds urges property owners to include the ad valorem tax number with their requests.

Waldrop will then set up an appointment with the board which will be mailed to the taxpayer who is filing the appeal.

Reynolds told the Reporter that she is pleased with the hearings thus far.

Montevallo school renovation overbid; Vincent air conditioning gets go-ahead

Money appropriated by the legislature for renovation work at two county schools couldn't be stretched far enough to cover the cost of both projects-at least not on the first round of bid openings.

The Montevallo High School plan had to be scrapped temporarily by the Board of Education at their meeting last Wednesday when bids exceeded the available funds by $28,750.

Going along with the recommendation of Superintendent Charles Knowles, the panel agreed the project should be rebid.

Figures submitted for improvement work at Vincent High School went over the price limit too. However, the plan to air condition the building and lower the ceiling in one wing was approved when the board learned nearly $3,000 had been shaved off the contracted price.

Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, Ted Lansford, informed the panel that changes could be made in the plans effecting up to a 10% difference in cost.

Part of the difficulty in coming under the $125,000 which came from the sale of state bonds, was because of a new 1% charge (of the total cost) which must be paid the state Building Commission and 10% ($12,500) for the architect which is Dampier-Harris.

When questioned by board member Barbara Whitman about the architect's fee, Lansford said that on new construction it was 8%, but because plans for renovation were more difficult, 25% more was charged.

The total cost of improvements at Vincent High, which includes the two fees, will be $124,866. The reduction from the original figure of $127,866 was due to changing the brand of air conditioner and the type of paneling to be used around the window units. Mechanical Erection Company of Birmingham will do the work.

Because of fire damage, money was designated by former Governor Wallace for repair work at both schools last year. However, the money only became available earlier this year when the bonds were sold.

Pursuing plans to build a middle school in Vincent, the board accepted Knowles recommendation that $1,000 in earnest money be paid the owners of property across the highway from the elementary school.

At a previous meeting, the panel had authorized a survey of the 25 acres which will cost a total of $36,500. It was decided that the board would enter into a contract to purchase the land in January if the owner would agree.

Boll worms found

Boll weevils threaten county cotton crop

Concerned about the insect infestation and the unusually heavy rainfall, Shelby County cotton farmers met Thursday in Harpersville to discuss their problems.

After visiting several cotton fields with the farmers and finding both boll worms and boll weevils, Extension Entomologist Ron Smith from Auburn University advised immediate spraying.

Reporting that 4,500 acres in the county had been planted in cotton this year, County Extension Agent John Jones said this was an increase of approximately 300 acres over last year.

"We have good stands and prospects look good," Jones remarked, "if we can get the insect problem under control." He added that the older cotton was "fruiting real good."

Farmers have been keeping a close watch on their fields, the local extension agent noted, with bi-weekly inspections being made.

When a large number of boll worms were found, it was decided the Auburn entomologist be called in to give his views on what should be done.

"They've been holding off on spraying as long as possible," Jones pointed out because that also kills the beneficial insects "such as the lady bug beetle."

When spraying is begun, it has to be continued on a regular basis in order to be effective, Jones related. He said that the first spraying would be done from the air, either by plane or helicopter.

When weather conditions become dryer, Jones said that the spraying could be done with tractors.

UM Arts-Science Dean dies

Alabama's academic community is mourning the loss of one of its most prominent members.

Dr. John Bennett Walters, Jr., historian, author, teacher, administrator, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Montevallo and former Dean of Alabama College died Tuesday morning in a Nashville, Tennessee hospital.

Dr. Walters was 67.

In 1956 Dean Walters came to UM, then Alabama College, as professor of history and chairman of the Social Sciences Division. In 1959 he was appointed Dean of the College. During his tenure at UM he also served as Acting Dean of Men from 1957 to 1958.

A native of Cordele, Georgia, Dr. Walters earned his B.A., M.A., and PhD degrees at Vanderbilt University. Before moving to Montevallo he taught at Vanderbilt, Emory and Henry College, George Peabody College and the University of Virginia.

His book, "Merchant of Terror" a story of Sherman's march through Georgia, was published in 1972 and won the Alabama Library Association's first prize for non-fiction.

Dr. Walters had been hospitalized in Nashville for several months for treatment of a foot infection and had undergone surgery last week.

University of Montevallo president Dr. James F. Vickrey, Jr., described Dr. Walters as a valued colleague and counselor "as well as my friend."

"While he was ill during my first few days at Montevallo, I always felt he would be recovering soon, to return to his old self, as he referred to it," Vickrey commented.

"Dean Walters has several generations of Montevallo students who refer to him as 'Dean of Deans at UM,' " Dr. Vickrey said. "His big impact on this university will long be felt and remembered. I regret that

Columbiana officer faces pre-trial hearing

Columbiana's assistant police chief is still on active duty following an indictment by a federal grand jury earlier this month.

Larry W. "Mickey" Kirkland pleaded "not guilty" to charges of illegally selling firearms and was released on $500 bond.

Evidence against the 30 year old policeman was presented by the federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Bureau.

According to Columbiana Police Commissioner Harold McCord, no decision on Kirkland's status with the department will be made until the policeman's pre-trial hearing Aug. 2.

McCord said the matter would Town clerk resigns from Wilsonville post

Wilsonville Town Clerk, Robert Lankford, is resigning after four years of service to the town.

According to Lankford, he is going back to teach at the Admiral Farragut Academy in Pine Beach, New Jersey.

"I like this work, but it will kill you," Lankford laughs. He says teaching will also kill you, but that he enjoys it more.

Lankford says that he loves Wilsonville and he plans to keep his house and will visit often.

Lankford's new title at the academy will be Coordinator of the Junior School, a private academy for boys in grades 5-8.

Lankford will also teach English at the school.

His resignation will be effective August 31. The town council is now accepting applications for the position.

For more information about the job, call 669-7748.

House fire injures man

A fire Friday night in North Shelby County sent one man to the hospital and left his house extensively damaged.

Melvin T. O'Neal, 57, of 2608 Lakeland Trail suffered extensive burns and was listed in poor condition Tuesday at University Hospital's surgical intensive care unit.

According to Chief Winston Boutwell, the North Shelby County Fire District received the call at 10:20 p.m. July 27. He said the house was fully involved when his two units reached the scene.

NSCFD was assisted in the hour long fire fight by a unit from the Rocky Ridge FD.

Cause of the fire is still undetermined.

Postmen needed in Montevallo

Applications are being accepted from persons interested in becoming substitute rural carriers in the Montevallo post office.

Examinations are required and a register of persons eligible will be established from which future carriers may be chosen.

Applications may be made at the Montevallo post office, according to W.C. Fowler, postmaster.

be discussed at the city's council meeting scheduled for that evening.

Reporting that he had received no complaints about Kirkland's conduct, the police commissioner said other council members had told him of getting calls about the alleged activities of the assistant police chief.

In his view, McCord said, Kirkland was "set up" by individuals who were "jealous" of his position.

Charges such as those brought against the Columbiana police man are not "totally uncommon" related Paul Durham, assistant agent in charge of enforcement for AFT.

Trial days are Sept. 4-14 and Kirkland's case is expected to be heard sometime during that period.

Coach Smith urges

'Talk positive about Auburn'

What do you get when 150 Auburn alumni meet at Riverchase Country Club? Auburn basketball coach Sonny Smith got a good meal, a locally forged, gold painted "War Eagle," and no doubt some needed support for not only his upcoming season, but for the university as well.

Speaking Tuesday night before a banquet room full of receptive Shelby County Auburn Club members and guests, coach Smith urged alumni to say at least one positive thing a day about the university and the basketball team.

"Let's talk positive," Smith said. "You've got to contribute before you can complain."

He explained that to help him build a winning team, alumni needed to contribute more than just money. "Send me newspaper clippings, give me a phone call, speak to good players positively about Auburn.

"Let's stop talking about probation. That's negative recruiting. What we've got to do is start pulling together," the coach urged.

"I hope I can stay at Auburn long enough to have the same feeling for the university you people have: unprecedented loyalty," Smith said in closing.

The coach announced that the Auburn basketball team would play two Birmingham games this season, the Austrian Olympic team on November 28, and Austin Peay on December 14.

The invocation was delivered by University of Montevallo president and Auburn alumnus, Dr. James Vickrey.

Joe Sumners, an Auburn student from Harpersville, was given an honorary presentation at the banquet for his outstanding scholastic achievements. Sumners was recently tapped into Phi Betta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi honorary fraternities.

Alumnus Elvin Hill was recognized for his contributions to Shelby County education, which included 20 years as school superintendent.

The new officers for the Shelby County Auburn Club are John Meredith, president, Jimmy Maddox, vice president, and Katie Robertson, secretary/treasurer.

Bill boosts pay for circuit court judges

The three circuit judges and the district attorney stand to benefit from a pay raise bill passed early in the afternoon Monday, during the Alabama legislature's traditional last-day logjam.

The salaries of Judges Kenneth Ingram, James Sharbutt and Harold Walden and district attorney Bill Hill would be raised from $32,500 to $39,000 provided Governor Fob James signs the bill.

The legislation, sponsored by House Speaker Joe McCorquodale, raises the state pay of the judges from $27,500 to $34,000, and the district attorney from $26,500 to $33,000.

County supplements of $5,000 and $6,000 respectively, provided by the counties of Clay, Coosa and Shelby, which comprise the 18th Judicial circuit, bring the four local officials up to the $39,000 figure.

Senator Albert McDonald sponsored the bill in the senate, and added a provision that county supplements can never exceed $1,000--an amendment not affecting Shelby County.

Prior to Monday's action, circuit judges had reportedly received only a 10% raise--from $25,000--since 1972 while the state salaries of all other officials had risen 30%.

According to National Judicial Statistics, the 20% pay raise still leaves Alabama circuit judges behind those of Mississippi (who get $41,000).

Pelham police pick up robber

Driving without a license is one thing, but robbing a drug store is another.

Pelham PD officer Tommy Thomas stopped Paula L. Sims about 11:30 a.m. Tuesday and discovered she was driving without a license. But a check by dispatcher Debbie Jones disclosed an outstanding warrant for robbery sworn by the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department against her.

From there, it was a simple matter of Jefferson County law enforcers picking Sims up at Pelham jail. she is being held in Jefferson County jail pending a $10,000 bond.

Sims allegedly robbed a Bluff Park drug store of 100 tablets each of valium, quaaludes, demoral, percodan and perin No. 3.

Sims was arrested two years ago in Pelham for attempting to pass forged prescriptions.

Civitans plan gazebo

Montevallo Civitans are planning to have a gazebo built in Orr Park. And when the club held a picnic there Saturday evening, president Mike Benson displayed plans and pointed out where the structure will be located.

The 26 club members and their guests who turned out for the covered dish affair, which included homemade ice cream, had an enjoyable time, despite the rain.

Dessert was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. T.L. Hunicutt, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Taff, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Harkins.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. T.W. Lawrence from Calera. Lawrence is Lieutenant Governor for the Alabama Central District of Civitan International.

Historical trial reviewed at meet

The trial of one of Shelby County's first newsmen will be reviewed at the Sunday meeting of the Historical Society.

Slides of historic sites in the county will also be reviewed and discussed by those who attend the 2 p.m. meeting at Pelham City Hall.

Robert Edwards, a member of the local group, will report on research he has done on the libel trial of Needham Graham, a newspaper reporter in the early days of the county.

The second half of the meeting will be held in Helena's Joe Tucker Park where the group will inspect an 1840 log cabin that is being reconstructed.

Before adjourning, society members and guests will enjoy refreshments under one of the park's pavillions.

NOTICE
SHELBY COUNTY CITIZENS

It is with sincere regret that effective July 23, 1979 the Shelby County Commission will not be legally able to aid its citizens with patrol work (blading) or other aid on ANY road or driveway, EXCEPT:

(1) On highways and roads that are public rights of way by description on record, or

(2) on those county roads that are public by PRESCRIPTIVE USE (used by the GENENERAL PUBLIC for 20 continuous years or more).

This is NOT by Shelby County Commission Choice!

The Shelby County Commission DOES NOT agree with this since it has always made every effort to lend reasonable aid fairly and equitably to all its citizens and does sincerely regret it is no longer legally able to do so, according to very recent legal opinions.

The above changes are brought about by legal opinions of the Attorney General of Alabama, the Honorable Charles A. Graddick, the highest Legal Officer of the State that were based on Alabama Law. His written opinions are applicable to all 67 Alabama Counties and the State Highway Department. A copy of the Attorney General's opinions may be obtained from the office of the Shelby County Commission if desired.

The Commission thanks the citizenry of Shelby County for their understanding of this matter which is beyond its control.

AEA 'machine' loses its steam in drive for teacher raises

The Alabama Education Association's strings on the Legislature that made lawmakers hop so effectively in the past got badly chopped up during the session now ending.

It had to do with the education budget and a pay raise. In the past AEA's Paul Hubbert has moved about through the House and Senate like a pasha. At the beginning of the session much of his old power as a potentate was still there.

However, there had been losses. During the campaign last year the AEA came our lighter in weight than when it went in. Not only did its bag of legislators shrink, it also supported the wrong man for governor.

But back to the education budget. Gov. Fob James wanted $20 million for his war on illiteracy. The AEA rejected that. Hubbert wanted to use James' war chest for a teacher raise instead of settling for a proposed conditional increase of 7 percent or less.

For a while there seemed to be a compromise that would work. The governor would cough up half of the $20 million. It would have guaranteed that at least some of the conditional raise for the teachers would be paid.

Hubbert, though, said no deal. But the AEA forces were unable to bite deeper into the illiteracy money. For one thing, old antagonisms built up by Hubbert came flocking down with terrible vindictiveness.

In the end the $10 million was lost to the teachers. Instead of being allocated for a raise, it was put in reverse. All that was left for teachers-and support personnel-was the conditional raise.

The pickings with that raise may well be from slim to none. "Conditional" means that state revenues have to produce big to supply the money, yet a recession is rolling in to cut the tax take.

Another brick to hit Hubbert and the AEA may be more of a bone-breaker than the pay raise flop. That has to do with liability insurance, the kind that protects teachers in job related suits.

Such coverage has been a big AEA lure for recruiting members. Under the new education budget, it will be supplied free by the state. This can save teachers about $128 a year-the cost of belonging to AEA and the National Education Association in order to get such insurance.

At one time the AEA was a respected organization. It concerned itself with professionalism, with quality education.

But at some point it made itself over into a trade union, building a machine that ran on power, money and membership. The ranks of the AEA should scrap that machine. Otherwise they can leave the job to others who are already ripping away at the monster.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert
Seaman

I used to be a frustrated photographer-what I mean is, I never could find any willing subjects.

Of course, after I was married and had a family, I focused mainly on them-and they got tired of it. "Please mother, no more!" was usually the exasperated plea of my kids after I'd snapped a dozen or two pictures at the horse show, birthday party or whatever.

So now can you imagine my absolute delight in actually being asked to take someone's picture? Since I've been working for a newspaper, I've found that people are actually eager to be photographed-well, most of them anyway.

When I shot a fight that erupted at a football game and it was printed in the paper I wasn't too popular with those folks. And some strike sympathizers that I was photographing threatened to take my camera and bash me in the head with it. But occurrences like these seldom happen.

A Catholic priest showed admirable restraint when I unwittingly walked into an area where I wasn't supposed to be in order to photograph the first Vietnamese wedding in the county.

He interrupted the ritual with just a firm "no", and after the ceremony explained my faux pas.

But most of the time I'm welcomed at the various events that take place around the county. Well-once or twice I've been expelled from a baseball field by the umpire and just a time or two the police have made it clear they wished I was someplace else.

But really, most of the time I'm greeted with the words, "Glad you could make it." And when I ask for a volunteer or two to pose, I usually find my frame filled to overflowing.

And I never cease to be amazed at how cooperative my subjects are. At the least suggestion, a person will sweep what appears to be important papers off the desktop, remove pictures from the wall or even shove heavy furniture around.

I couldn't beg my family to do any of those things in order to get a good picture. In fact, it was almost like trying to move a mountain when I'd ask the kids to shift an inch or two to the right or left.

One of my most embarrassing experiences after assuming professional status will long live in my memory and probably in the memories of those I was supposed to have photographed.

On this particular occasion, I traveled around the county clicking merrily away only to discover when I went to take the film out that I didn't have any film in. There were some folks that week, let me tell you, who wondered why their pictues weren't in the paper.

On the home front, I'm in good shape again. My little granddaughter hasn't started to protest yet, so I'm clicking away at the horse show, the birthday parties and wherever she may happen to be.

I was reading in a newspaper the other day where someone pointed out how inconsiderate it was for parents to get up at an event to take pictures of their children.

Maybe it is, but some of us have just "gotta do it!"

Writer blasts Snowden and Commission

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

We the citizens of North Shelby County and beat twelve are dismayed and upset because the Probate Judge and the County Commissioners have taken five jailers out of the jail and have taken five Deputies off patrol. That leaves about thirteen deputies on patrol for twenty-four hours. They took five deputies off patrol and put them in the jail. That doesn't leave enough deputies to patrol half the county.

Instead of giving the Probate Judge another raise (he's had two already since he took office) why didn't the Commissioners keep the jailers instead of giving the Judge another raise? I say take his raise away and put the jailers back in the jail and put the Deputies back on their regular patrol where they are really needed.

We want Louie Cosby back up here where he's been for twelve years. Everyone knows him and know they can depend on him day or night if they need him.

How many raises did Judge Fowler get when he was Probate Judge? He was the best probate judge we've ever had, and he kept the county debt free. So why is the County so short of funds now? And what makes Judge Snowden think he's worth so much more than Judge Fowler?

Sheriff Glasgow needs all the deputies back on patrol (and needs even more deputies) and the jailers back in the jail.

Also Judge Snowden said he was going to separate the Judges office from the Commissioners office. So why hasn't he done that?

We the people of North Shelby County would like an answer to these questions, and I think we have the right to know.

I'm glad the deputies got their back pay because they really earn their pay every time they are on duty, they put their lives on the line.

I can't see where the Probate Judge has earned the raises he has gotten since he took office.

If things aren't changed, there's always another election coming up. Maybe we can do something about it then.

Turtle traffic

The story of this turtle might well be "life in the slow lane". The shy, mobile home unit was spotted on Hwy. 41 near Shoal Creek. Though no threat to the 55 mph speed limit, the turtle was removed from the road for his own good. (Photo by Moore)

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

A stone bruise when you're ten is like two broken legs when you're middle-aged and arthritis when you're old. It slows you down to a crawl. From Granny's house on the hill to the wash-hole in Longshore's pasture, it was thirteen redbirds and thirty jays and two hundred grass sparrows and half a dozen rabbits and maybe three squirrels, beside the mile and a half of ground as a boy walked. And there ain't no boy living, then or now, who could walk that far with a stone bruise and feel like swimming when he got there.

I guess it was on a Thursday when the soreness first popped up. We were playing horse shoes in the back yard, Marcus Polk and James Longshore and Doug Holman and Sid and I, and Granny noticed I was half dragging my left leg and asked the reason why. She was on her way back from the hen house and had stopped to blow her nose and said, watching me drag my leg: "Seems like you're crippled. What's the cause?"

"I don't know," I answered. "It just started this morning."

"You better come inside and let me have a look."

And that was the beginning of the whole thing. For five days I wore a poultice, tied on my foot with a cloth and covered over with an old sock. The first day I tried to use some home-made crutches, but I needed 'em like I needed a rock in my shoe, so I put 'em back in the corner of the hall where they had been since Uncle Art got over a case of arthritis in his joints almost two years before.

And then on the sixth day Granny called Dr. Chandler. She might as well have called the devil himself. I was that scared.

Dr. Chandler came in and put his satchel on the table and asked Granny for some hot water and washed his hands in it and dried 'em and took a funny looking knife out of his satchel. He didn't say anything at first, just got busy with some other things he took out of his satchel. But all the time he was coming closer and closer to me, stretched out on the bed with my sore foot on a pillow.

"Did you ever go possum hunting?" he asked, without even looking at me. He was still edging closer.

"N-no, sir," I said.

"When I was your age," he went on, "my Pop took me on my first hunt. The dog treed in a big oak with a rotten limb about halfway to the top."

He stopped then and started working with the poultice. When he got the poultice off, he started talking again. "We held the lantern up so's we could see and spotted the possum on the dead limb. I asked Pop if I could climb up there and get 'im and he said I could but to be careful about the dead limb."

He stopped talking again and sort o' moved my foot so that he was right over it with his knife. "You know," he said, "I made it up that tree and got on the dead limb and crawled out about a foot. But just as I reached for the possum the limb broke--"

And that was when Dr. Chandler stabbed me, right dab on the stone bruise.

Pastor urges support for county athletics

Letter to the Editor:

Dear Concerned Shelby Countians:

According to conversations and newsprint there is much enthusiasm building for the upcoming sports season in Shelby County schools. As we contemplate the beginning of a new school year, I wish to share with you my athletic hopes and aspirations for our schools.

There is much talk that the gasoline crux and rise in high school event prices will keep many patrons at home during the sports season. I grant you these are two important concerns. But the performance of our children and the support we render surpasses the first two concerns. Shelby Countians have always shown great interest in their schools athletic endeavors; this year should be no less. With the leadership of our new Superintendent, Mr. Knowles, and our Principals, faculties and parents we must strive for excellence.

According to reports in and around Sylacauga, our county schools are causing much concern already. The reports have it that Shelby County High and Thompson will be the area 3A power houses in football along with number one picked Childersburg. The same reports indicate that Pelham High and number one Sylacauga High are the early favorites to create much winter excitement in area basketball.

With the already successful programs at Montevallo, Calera, Vincent, Chelsea, Shelby Academy and Coosa Academy, this indeed must be a banner year in sports attendance for all county schools!!

Yes, there is a gas crisis and a "dollar watch" but our schools and our athletes deserve our support.

I live in Sylacauga where the parents and students are "die hards," but "my heart" is in Shelby County!

"We're Number One."

Brighthope donation

Montevallo Rotary Club president Dr. John Valkenberg presents a $200 donation from the club to Brierfield Ironworks Park Director Marty Everse. A member of the park commission, Dr. Mike Mahan, looks on.

Montevallo Rotarians back historical drama

Members of the Montevallo Rotary Club feel that history should be preserved. As proof of their sentiments, a $200 donation was recently made by the club to kick off the fund raising drive to get the historical drama Brighthope back in production.

As he presented the check to Brierfield Ironworks Park Director Marty Everse, Rotary President Dr. John Van Valkenburg explained that one of the main reasons for the club's support was to preserve the history of the area for young people.

"Unless we set our foot down now, it's going to slip away," the Rotary president declared.

Dr. Van Valkenburg also noted that this year's theme for Rotary International is "Service, Light the Way." "I feel that this donation goes along with that theme," he said, "and I also feel that we'll be supporting a project that will benefit our community."

Written by the nationally known playwright of outdoor dramas, Dr. Kermit Hunter, Brighthope recounts the settlement of the area around Brierfield. It also tells of the establishment of an ironworks that played an important part during the Civil War.

The drama was produced for the first time last year by the University of Montevallo but it was not able to be staged this summer due to a lack of funds.

Everse, who was recently appointed park director, feels that the historic drama is the park's main attraction. After assuming his post, one of his first actions was to initiate Brighthope '80, a fund raising drive to get the play in production again next summer.

"We're about the only state in the south that doesn't have an outdoor drama," Everse remarked. He noted that North Carolina has five or six, which he said "does wonders for the local economy."

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"Does God Authorize Voting on Prospective Church Members?"

Some religionists teach that candidates for salvation should be voted on by the congregation before their being baptized. What do the Scriptures teach?

When the eunuch requested to be baptized, Philip did not request that he return to Jerusalem so that the church there could vote on him. (Acts 8:36-39) The jailer was baptized the same hour of the night in which he was taught the truth, but the church did not vote upon him. (Acts 16:30-34) The church did not vote upon Saul of Tarsus when he was baptized, washing away his sins. (Acts 22:16)

One might object that Peter said, "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized?" (Acts 10:47) However, that does not authorize voting, for it is a rhetorical question--that is, a question which carries its own answer. (For example, Paul said, "Am I not an apostle?" I Corinthians 9:1) If those Jewish Christians with Peter had voted against baptizing Cornelius and his house, they would have been withstanding God. (Acts 11:17)

If voting were authorized, a negative vote of the church could keep a person from being saved, for water baptism places the penitent believer into Christ, where salvation is. (Romans 6:3; II Timothy 2:10) If voting were authorized, a negative vote of the church could keep a person away from the blood of Christ, for one must enter Christ's church in order to benefit from the blood of Christ which purchased the church. (Acts 20:28) If voting were authorized, a negative vote of the church could keep a penitent believer from becoming a member of God's family, or church. (I Timothy 3:15) If voting were authorized, a negative vote could keep a person in his sins, for water baptism is "for the remission of sins." (Acts 2:38) However, voting on people before baptizing them is not authorized by God; thus it cannot be practiced with God's approval.

Columbiana Troop

Busload of Scouts tours Northeast

by Lisa Sims

Sixteen boys traveled 5,430 miles in 26 days--in a converted 1950's school bus.

Boy Scout Troop No. 560 of Columbiana and Scoutmaster Robert Hume, Lt. Col., retired, U.S. Air Force, have just returned this week from a month-long trek through the Northeastern U.S. and the provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and Quebec, Canada.

According to Hume, the troop took a "riding academics lesson" in history, archaeology, geology, science, industry and sociology.

Departing from Columbiana on July 3 at 7 a.m., the troop in their carpeted, remodeled school bus, traveled through Civil War battlegrounds at Harper's Ferry, where abolitionist John Brown fought to conquer slavery, and at Gettysburg, the turning point of the War between the States.

The Columbiana nomads continued up the Connecticut coast and toured the home of the atomic submarine at Groton.

Their first Sunday was spent in the affluent section of Rhode Island, at Newport, touring the homes of the Vanderbilts and Whitneys.

Next the youngsters, Hume included, journeyed to the very tip of Cape Cod, which Hume describes as "just a spit of sand jutting out into the Atlantic." There the boys saw giant sand dunes and skindivers bringing up huge edible clams.

The Shelby County pilgrims ventured on up to Plymouth Rock, an eight foot stone, and now a monument to America's first white settlers.

While in Plymouth, they also toured the Ocean Spray Cranberry fields and factory.

It was then on to the Old Concord Bridge and the Lexington battlefields. A walking tour of Boston included a tour of the USS Constitution, better known as "Old Ironsides."

The troop followed the ride of Paul Revere, saw the Old North Church and Bunker Hill.

In Gloucester, a port city plagued by the gas shortage, the troop was quartered by the city's mayor, Lou I. Alper, who provided all the gasoline they needed.

The boys saw the Hopewell Caves, where the tide is the world's highest. They saw forts, museums, cathedrals, and even toured a coal mine that went six miles under the ocean.

Despite having to hospitalize one boy with tonsilitis, running out of money in Montreal, and the freezing wet weather, the scouts made it home.

The sixteen vagabonds included Todd Nicholson, Russell Walker, Roger and Kevin Vincent, Ervin Tidwell, Jeff Seale, Jeff Jones, John Glenn, Don Phillips, Jason Head, Brandon Blankenship, Kevin Dorough, David Hume, Ramsey Bentley, Chris Benson and Robbie Hunt.

Under the leadership of Hume, the troop has completed five such excursions, produced 17 Eagle Scouts, and has traveled in 39 states and in seven of the ten Canadian provinces.

Oldsters sing praise at new nutrition site

by Lisa Sims

Strains of "How Great Thou Art" echoed Friday from the new nutrition site at the Alabaster depot behind Thompson High School.

Eager oldsters demonstrated their gratitude for the new site as they offered songs of thanks.

The Alabaster depot, fully renovated, was crowded with close to 100 senior citizens and guests celebrating the site's grand opening.

Sue Tedford, director of the Shelby County Program on the Aging, made the welcoming address and gave thanks to those who have helped make the new project a success.

Special recognition was given to the Alabaster Civitan Club, the Alabaster City Council, the Alabaster Motorcycle Club, the American Legion, and the First Bank of Alabaster for their contributions.

Also recognized for their help were Optometrists Dr. Davey Welch and Dr. James Stewart, who have provided free eye tests for the senior citizens in the county. Dr. Brad Hicks of Helena was also thanked for giving free dental checkups.

Speaking at the grand opening were Tom Holmes of the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission's Program on the Aging, and Jim Elrod, director of the RSVP (Retired Senior Volunteer Program) of the Positive Maturity Program.

"It takes a very special kind of person to do what has been done here and Shelby County is very fortunate to have Sue Tedford. She was chosen Employee of the Year out of a staff of 40 people," Holmes said.

He also expressed thanks to the numerous volunteers who work at the nutrition sites.

Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek spoke to the assembly and promised them the support of the Alabaster City Council.

Mrs. Lois Farmer, director of the Shelby County RSVP program was honored as a "Friend in Need of the Aging Program."

Also commended for their volunteer efforts were Mrs. Mandy Hall and Alan Cost.

After the awards were given, the group enjoyed homemade cakes and some cool sherbert punch from their new kitchen.

Church observes Old Fashioned Day

Shiloh kids race

The younger members of the congregation at Shiloh Baptist Church competed in a sack race during Old Fashioned Day activities, Saturday.

by Bert Seaman

A baby quilt made with "stitches of love," and a 100 year old dress were among the items displayed when Shiloh Baptist Church observed Old Fashioned Day Saturday.

Anyone who happened upon the scene unexpectedly might have thought the clock had been turned back as they observed long skirted women in bonnets cooking chicken in an iron kettle over an outdoor fire.

Another suggestion that the happening was taking place in a bygone era was the sight of butter being churned by hand.

Members of the church, which was founded in the 1800's, gathered on the church grounds on County Road 13 in Beat 5 at 10 a.m. to begin their day long festivities.

After the noon meal families played games such as horseshoes, and showed their ability to stay upright in the sack race and three legged race.

When it came time to display the antiques each member had been asked to bring, Sandra Srygley showed off the 100 year old dress she was wearing that had belonged to her grandmother, Lacey Peel.

A tiny bonnet, which she estimated to be 150 years old, was also shown to the group. Another century old item that was held up for the group's inspection, was a toy bank.

Mrs. Florence Jenkins wore her grandmother Tincy Peel's 44 year old dress and exhibited other "Old timey" items which she brought. Among them was a movie projector which used a candle for illumination.

The owner of the baby quilt said her paternal grandmother had made it with what she described as "stitches of love, and I made sure that all my children were covered with it," she added.

Other interesting items viewed by the congregation included a 1914 milk bottle, ice tongs, a handmade rocking horse and a quilt lined with tobacco sacks stitched into a design.

Before the afternoon ended, homemade ice cream and watermelon were served to those who attended the first time event.

According to the church's pastor, Rev. Lynn Thompson, Old Fashioned Day was such a success, the congregation plans to hold one every year.

Reporting that he's only been at the church three months, Thompson said he sees "great potential." He went on to say there were only ten members attending church when he arrived and now the congregation numbers around thirty each Sunday.

Old Fashioned Day spilled over into the worship service the following day with the congregation attending in outfits of a bygone era and listening to some "good old fashioned" preaching.

Home Decorating with Becky

ALL ROOMS SHOULD HAVE SOME KIND OF FOCAL POINT

Almost all professional decorators and furniture experts agree that rooms need a focal point to help achieve beauty and appeal. Even the simplest room can be made more attractive with the right focal point.

So, the question arises: How do you create a focal point in rooms in your home?

There are three basic ways to make sure you have a focal point.

One way is to use--if you have it--a built in focal point such as a fireplace or picture window.

Another way--again if you have it--is to build your decorating around some architectural feature or view in a room.

But the third way is the one that anyone can achieve regardless of what is, or is not, already in your room, and that is to use a piece of furniture, or a major accessory, or a furniture arrangement for your focal point.

Perhaps nothing will make a room more truly beautiful than a special piece of furniture or an exciting setting. All the rest of your furnishings in that room can flow from that focal point and you can maximize the appeal of a room.

Just by starting to think about a special focal point for your rooms can start you on your way to bringing thrilling new beauty to your home. And we're here to help you with selection and ideas.

At Becky's Interiors Main Street, Calera and Becky's Furniture & Design, 2169B Montgomery Highway South.

Ground breaking

Mt. Tabor church builds parsonage

Ground was broken July 1 for the new Mt. Tabor Methodist Church parsonage.

Dr. Paul Doyle, Superintendent of the Sylacauga District of the United Methodist Church, and the pastor, Dan Thrower, assembled with the members and friends of the church for the special ceremony.

According to Thrower, three years have passed since the need for the parsonage was discussed. The first plans were to remodel the present parsonage, built thirty years ago.

But, under the leadership of Tom Alverson, chairman of the church's building committee, including E.R. Elliott, Robert Clark, George Eggler, Harold Rich, Sr., Wade Alverson, and George Walker, the church decided a new parsonage was the answer.

A charge conference was held on June 24. The following Sunday, ground for the new building was broken.

The Sunday following the ground breaking, a special committment service was held. The congregation responded with gifts of $7000 during the service and in the following two weeks.

The church's labor has completed the foundation and is beginning to frame the house.

The members say that the new project would not have been possible without prayers and blessings from God.

Educator saves life

by Lisa Sims

During her first week as a staff member on the Shelby County Board of Education, Dr. Linda Nolen has already saved the life of one county child.

Nolen was touring the Board of Education's facility in Columbiana with Pat Bulger, when Mrs. Bulger's daughter, Mary Elizabeth, pulled over some heavy playground equipment.

When the new staff member saw that the equipment was likely to crush the child, she pushed her out of the way and stepped in front of the falling steel, which caught Dr. Nolen across the neck and knocked her to the floor.

Fortunately, she suffered only minor bruises.

After that exciting first week, Nolen told the Reporter that she is looking forward to an exciting challenge as the Coordinator of Special Education in county schools.

"I hope that all countians will be interested in the special education program and realize its importance. I hope to make this program the best the county has ever had," she said.

As coordinator of special education, Nolen will direct a corps of five supervisors and 70 teachers in county schools.

Nolen received her undergraduate degree at Jacksonville State University in 1970. In 1973 she received her Master's degree from the University of Alabama in Birmingham. She earned her Doctorate from the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa in 1976.

The new county educator is the wife of Thomas Nolen, M.D., who has a practice in Columbiana.

Pelham Acteens

Acteens meet in K.C.

The Acteens from the First Baptist Church of Pelham have been on the road. Eight girls and three adults attended the National Acteens Convention in Kansas City, July 23-29.

The Pelham Acteens, a missions organization, attended Bible study classes, lectures by world-wide missionaries, mission fields and concerts, along with other Acteens from area churches.

They raised the money for their trip by working odd jobs, holding car washes and yard sales and babysitting. They also received contributions from individuals in the church.

The convention, held every five years for girls in grades 7-12, was attended by 15,000 Acteens from across the nation.

In Columbiana

Kindergarten is reality

A public kindergarten will become a reality for the children of Columbiana for the first time this year.

In the past, no room has been available in the Columbiana schools for a kindergarten. But the new elementary school has a room designed for the purpose.

The first kindergarten will have an enrollment of 20 children. Registration is scheduled for Tuesday, August 7, from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. To be eligible children must be five years old on or before October 1.

Birth certificates and blue immunization slips should be brought to registration.

A week after the registration names will be drawn at random to select the 20 children who can attend, since it is expected that more than 20 will register.

Lisa McLeroy Davis, who taught kindergarten last year at Chelsea, will be the teacher. For additional information parents may call Mrs. Davis at 669-7579.

Stroke Club to meet

A meeting of the Jefferson-Shelby Stroke Club will be on Thursday, August 2 at 7:30 p.m. at Spain Rehabilitation Center, 1717 6th Ave. So. on the fifth floor.

The speaker this month will be a representative from the office of Senior Citizens' Activities. The subject of the meeting will be "Available Community Resources for the Elderly and Handicapped."

For further information about the Stroke Club, call the Jefferson-Shelby Heart Association at 592-8363.

As another service for stroke victims, the Downtown YWCA is offering a water exercise class on Mondays and Wednesdays from 6 to 7 p.m. The Positive Maturity van will provide transportation in the evening at a charge of $1 each way. For more information contact Rene Hendrickson at 934-4966.

Skills Center provides training for youths

Shelby County youths who want to prepare for good jobs in the construction industry are being encouraged to enroll at the Youth Skills Center.

Sponsored by the AFL-CIO Appalachian Council, the Center is entering its third year of offering pay while training for jobs in today's job market. The Center is located at 1229 22nd St. North in Birmingham, but arrangements are made for transportation from Shelby County.

Henry Amerine, an instructor in the program, told the Shelby County Reporter that to enroll, a person must be between the ages of 18 and 21, unemployed, unskilled, and from a low income family. Both men and women are eligible. All students accepted will be paid at the rate of $2.90 per hour during the period of their enrollment. Classes are small and no grades are given. Instructors spend a great deal of time with each student.

The AFL-CIO Appalachian Council reports that it has had a very high success ratio in its job placement program. Despite the depressed job market, third quarter figures show that the training facility has enrolled 80 students and secured meaningful employment for 49. Fourth quarter projections indicate that 13 more students will be employed by the expiration date of this year's term.

According to L.A. McCullough, Director of the program, the concept of specialized training for disadvantaged youth was developed at the request of the Central Alabama Building and Construction Trades Council. The Council is an Association of all the construction unions in central Alabama. In an effort to respond to a serious social need they requested the A.F.L.-C.I.O. Appalachian Council to set up a trial program to provide training and to seek funding through the State C.E.T.A. Operations. The initial success was so outstanding that the program was extended for another year and presently is being projected into its third year.

The program is unique in its opportunities for young people. For those who have not completed high school a special course of study is provided. This study course has resulted in 33 G.E.D. certificates being awarded by the Jefferson County Board of Education. Eighty-seven percent of all students enrolling have received their certificates. Prior to being referred to a Union job, all students are enrolled in another phase of training. Here they are taught the proper use of tools, safety, first aid and many other subjects that they will need for a successful career.

Mr. McCullough says that because of this Union sponsored training program, many young people who would have had no opportunity, now have the support of trained instructors and the assurance of a job opportunity.

There are several openings in the school for young people from Shelby County. Mr McCullough suggests that anyone interested in a career in the construction industry or desiring more information call him at Birmingham, 323-1781 or write to P O Box 2813-A, Birmingham, Alabama 35212.

Rotary Club hears Americanism talks

"Did America begin with the Declaration of Independence or the Constitution?"

Dr. John Hamilton, political scientist at the University of Montevallo, asked this question to members of the Montevallo Rotary Club.

Hamilton spoke to the Rotary Club Thursday night on the topic "Constitutionalism."

Hamilton explained that government is an artificial entity created by individuals.

Hamilton said that the natural state of man is represented by the Garden of Eden, where there is total individualism, total freedom. Individuals are self-governing. In having government, we give up rights for order.

Hamilton was the final speaker of the month on the theme of "Americanism".

Other speakers this month included Dr. David Morgan and Dr. Mike Mahan.

Plaintiffs,
vs.
Certain land and John P. Phelan, et als,
Defendants.

In the Circuit Court of Shelby County, Alabama
Civil Action No. CV-79-231(E)

TO: The following described land: The S½ of the SE¼ of NW¼ of Section 5, Township 24, Range 14 East, Shelby County, Alabama; and John P. Phelan, Mrs. Ella Arnslow, L.A. Callaway and W.T. Black, or, if deceased, their heirs or devisees, and all parties who, unknown to plaintiffs claim an interest in or to the above described property.

Take notice that Michael W. Worley, Laura L. Worley, Hugh H. Johnson and Gwendolyn L. Johnson, have this day filed their verified complaint in said Court against the above named defendants and against any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, encumbrance upon the above described real estate or any part thereof or interest therein, and against all other persons, and against said lands for the purpose of establishing the title of said lands in the said Michael W. Worley, Laura L. Worley, Hugh H. Johnson and Gwendolyn L. Johnson and to clear up all doubts and disputes concerning the same and that said suit is now pending in said Court.

Plaintiffs allege in said complaint that the title to said lands stands in the name of the plantiffs on the records in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, and said complaint further alleges that plaintiffs claim title to said lands through and by virtue of deeds dated October 8, 1918, recorded in Deed Book 64, Page 398; dated May 29, 1926, recorded in Deed Book 80, Page 412; dated August 26, 1939, recorded in Deed Book 106, Page 473; dated November 24, 1944, recorded in Deed Book 119, Page 301; dated August 16, 1969, recorded in Deed Book 259, Page 141; dated August 25, 1976 recorded in Deed Book 302, Page 232; dated August 25, 1976, recorded in Deed Book 302, Page 233; and dated March 3, 1977, recorded in Deed Book 304, Page 181, all in the Probate Office of Shelby County, Alabama; that during the time of plaintiffs' ownership, they have been in actual, peaceable, adverse possession of said lands claiming to own the same, and that title to said lands has stood in plaintiffs' names on the records in the Office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, for more than ten years prior to this date. The plaintiffs and their predecessors in title have assessed said real estate in the Office of the Tax Assessor of Shelby County, Alabama, and paid the taxes on said real estate for each year; and that no one else has paid the taxes on said real estate for said period of time except the plaintiffs and their predecessors in title and that no one has been in possession of said lands or any part thereof since 1939, except the plaintiffs and their predecessors in title.

Plaintiffs further allege in said complaint that after making diligent search and inquiry, they were unable to locate John P. Phelan, Mrs. Ella Arnslow, L.A. Callaway and W.T. Black to determine whether or not they are living or dead, and if living, what their ages and addresses are at the present time, and if deceased, the names, ages and addresses of their heirs or devisees, and that the same are unknown to plaintiffs, and that the names, ages and addresses of any other parties who, unknown to plaintiffs, may claim an interest in or to the above described property, are unknown.

It is, therefore, ordered by the undersigned Clerk that publication of this notice be made in the Shelby County Reporter, a newspaper published and having a general circulation in Shelby County, Alabama, once a week for four consecutive weeks, and that all those to whom this notice is addressed and any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, or lien or encumbrance upon, the above described real estate, or any part thereof, or any interest therein, be and they are hereby required to plead, answer or otherwise defend the complaint in this cause within the time required by law, and not later than October 1, 1979.

It is further ordered that a copy of this notice certified by the undersigned Clerk as being correct, shall also be recorded as a lis pendens in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama.

Board of Education fills vacant seat

A former educator received unanimous approval from the Shelby County Board of Education last Wednesday to fill the vacancy on the panel created by the resignation of Ben Howell.

J.H. "Jack" Upchurch was a former principal and teacher at Shelby County High School until retiring from the school system two years ago. He is now manager of the Shelby County office of the Jefferson County Teachers Credit Union.

Taking a job outside the county forced Howell, who joined the panel in January, to leave the post. So Upchurch's term will run until 1984.

Two new employees that the board approved were Dr. Linda Nolen as Special Education Coordinator and Sara Vick, secretary for Transportation and Maintenance.

The panel also agreed to the hiring of five maintenance technicians at an annual salary of $10,000. Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles told the panel that principals in each of the schools had been involved in the selection of the new employees.

"We've moved deliberately," the superintendent remarked, "because of the importance of this position." He noted that the job has not been filled yet at all of the county's schools.

Knowles also brought to the board's attention a matter of what he termed "discrimination" in teachers' pay schedules. He pointed out that supervisory and administrative people receive a $600 per year pay raise when they have an AA certificate and doctorate degree but teachers do not.

The superintendent recommended that all certified employees be given the raise beginning with the next school year's contracts and the board gave their approval.

Members of the panel also agreed to pay three special education supervisors for any extra days they work in helping the new special education coordinator become familiar with the program before school begins.

Resignations were accepted from four elementary school teachers, the librarian at Riverchase and the Pelham Band director.

Stephen L. Pryor took over leadership of the music program at Pelham last year and his resignation leaves the marching band without a director for the upcoming football season.

Rivers sees improvement ahead for Pelham's '79 gridiron squad

by Richard Crosby

Steve Rivers and his players are excited about the upcoming season for the Pelham Panthers. "We're hoping to pickup where we left off in the spring," Rivers said.

Pelham whipped Montevallo in the spring jamboree and the Panthers looked like a fresh cargo of cats compared to some of their earlier performances. "The boys seem to be real excited about it (football)," Rivers told the Reporter. "They're getting themselves in good condition.

"More players are coming out for football than last year and I want to have as many as we can," the new head man at Pelham stated.

Assisting in the Pelham football program will be returning Tony Taylor, Ron Griggs, and Bill Horne. "I'm still looking for another assistant," Rivers said.

Since July 15th the Panthers have been working out in the gym and on the track in a voluntary conditioning program. "We've had an outstanding turnout," Rivers praised. "We've had no fewer than 45 participants since the summer program started. Of course we can't compel the players to attend and we have had no team meetings, but from all signs it looks like we'll have a fine group of young men."

Pelham will be using a variation of the Wing-T offense with multiple sets according to its coach. Coach Rivers and his wife are still house hunting in Shelby County and hope to settle in Pelham or Helena.

About the upcoming season Rivers made no promises but was enthusiast. "We want to play well and improve starting August 6th," the new coach said, "and the wins will come. I've gotten a real positive attitude from parents of our players and they have been real helpful to me since I arrived."

With Pelham's strong showing in the spring and with the improvement that Rivers demands, opponents of the Panthers better be prepared as a new breed of cat takes the field come kickoff.

Coach Steve Rivers confers with his quarterback during the spring game held at Calera. The Panthers defeated Montevallo and provided Pelham fans with what is hoped as a peek into the future.

Columbiana Rec Rap

by Susan Harris

Last week's rain had everyone inside to enjoy fun at the 'rec'. The elementary age group created works of art with cotton balls and also made decorative hanging plates. Our preschoolers practiced writing their names and numbers in crafts along with coloring paper plates. Pin cushions were made by the afternoon group.

Games were played that kept up the excitment. Pin-the-tail on the donkey, Monopoly, ping-pong, chase, duck-duck-goose, and tumbling contests were just a few of these.

All of the children have been working hard for their "Summer Showcase '79." They will be wearing costumes and performing their best talent for their parents and friends. They wish to invite everyone in Columbiana to this for entertainment and refreshments.

Two coaches added to staff at Montevallo High School

by Richard Crosby

Coach Richard Gilliam and principal Cratie Corbet announced last week two new members to the Montevallo coaching staff. David Bailey and Tony Berry will be assisting coach Gilliam and Kurt Pnazek this year.

Coach Bailey will be an assistant football coach working with the defensive secondary, quarterbacks and receivers. Gilliam said of Bailey who for the past two seasons was head coach at Pelham High School, "David is a real fine christian young man and should be real compatable to our system. He has had a good deal of experience both as a head coach at Pelham as an assistant coach on a state championship team." Bailey will be teaching drivers' education at Montevallo.

Tony Berry will be the schools athletic trainer. The Ag. Dept. teacher has eight years of experience in athletic training at Alabama Christian and Auburn. Last year Berry was the Tigers basketball trainer and went with the team on all games.

"Tony is a very important addition to our staff," Gilliam told the Reporter. "We have needed someone with Tony's knowledge and I feel it will make a difference in the number of injuries and the healing time of our players."

Montevallo joins the rest of the county schools with football practice opening August 6th. For the first three days athletes are not allowed to practice in full gear or make contact.

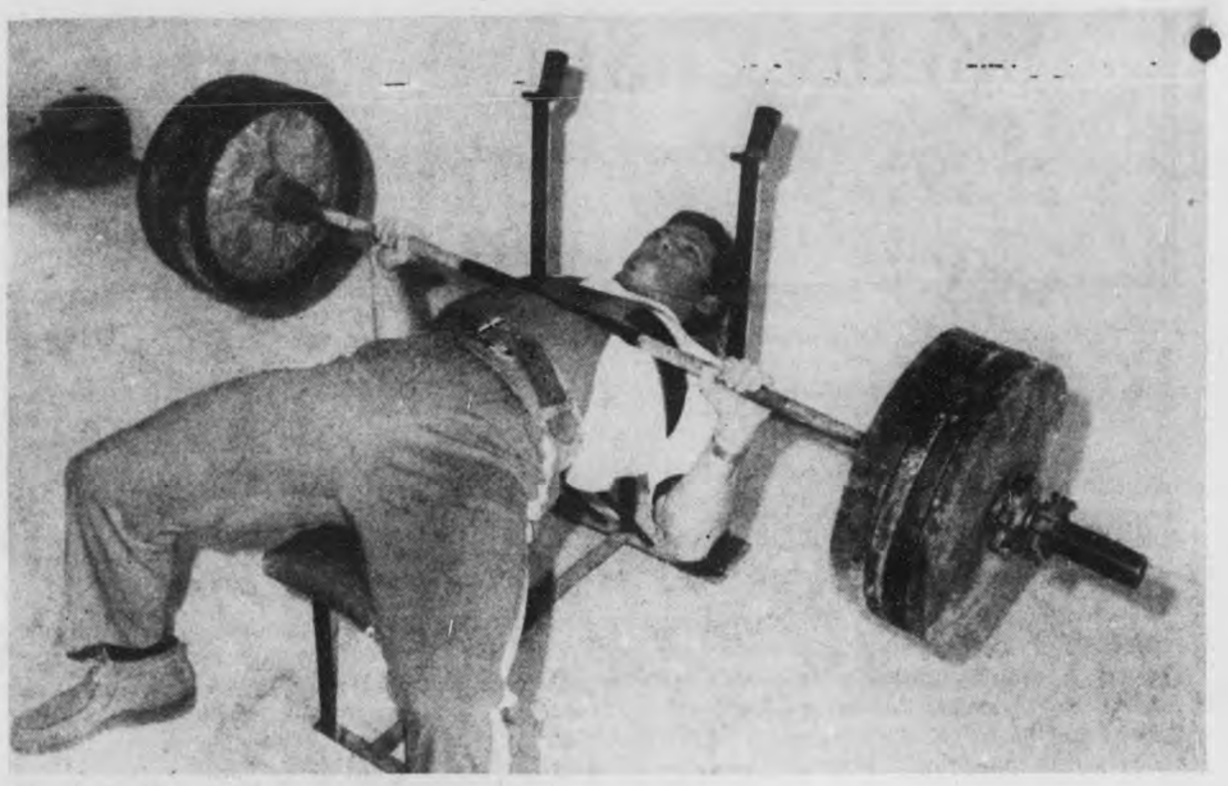
Powerlifting champ

Owens wins regional title

Weightlifter Tom Owen won the Southeast Regional Powerlifting Championship in the heavyweight division last weekend in Dothan. The musclemam who is the Director of King's Ranch in Chelsea lifted a total of 1,640 pounds to claim the top title in the 275 pound classification.

Owen set new state and regional records with his lifts of 410 pounds in the bench press, 620 pounds in the squat and 610 pounds in the dead lift.

The meet is usually held in South Carolina but was moved to Dothan because of scheduling conflicts. Owen is the defending state powerlifting champion and told the Reporter that he would probably not compete again until the state meet next year.



State champ pumps iron

FOR BETTER HUNTING AND FISHING

by Earl Franklin Kennamer

True or false-Alabama ranks below other states in hunting and fishing opportunities? Before giving the answer, let's analyze the picture a little more.

I recently wrote about the fuel shortage effects on outdoor sports as given to the Outdoor Writers Association of America (OWAA) in Albugquerque, N.M., June 16-21. The summary point is that we outdoorsmen will be threatened with vehicle fuel pinches for a possible decade.

My wife and I elected to drive to the meeting partly because I had never been west of Texas by ground conveyance and I wanted to see the changes in plants, animals, soil, terrain, water, air, etc.

Believe me, Alabama has it all over New Mexico in hunting and fishing opportunities. I'm not belittling our western states, but as a biologist, I began to get suspicious when officials began to brainwash us along with other tourists, saying the state abounded in big game and fish. I questioned the population density of such species as deer--the far west has the mule deer, a fine game mammel, but it, hunting wise, ranks below the whitetail, which totals a million head in Alabama. In fact, I believe Ala. is second to Texas in deer numbers.

Driving I-40 after leaving the Texas Panhandle, we saw distant groups of cattle in the "wide open spaces" of N.M. I asked my wife to check to see if there was a waterhole in each vicinity of crowded cattle. In almost every case there was. In the odd cases the clincher was a windmill-fed circular tank. I'm sure these water sources were also focal points for deer, turkey, doves, etc. This is part of the country where "gallinaceous guzzlers"--manmade contraptions to hold water for wildlife have been built.

Clinchers against heavy wildlife populations were sparse annual rainfall--nine inches in Albuquerque and the constant 15 to 25 mph wind that surely hastens evaporation of what little open water is present.

We in Alabama are blessed with six times the Albuquerque annual rainfall--we get around 52 to 54 inches. N.M. has an area of 121,666 sq. mi., which means the 51,609 sq. mi. area of Alabama would fit in N.M. two and 1/6 times. Since I think water is the key to game abundance, growth of cover, wildlife food, etc., Alabama has nine times the potential of game as the same size area in N.M. You have theoretically four times better chance of bagging game than the New Mexican. While you try to figure out this confusing analogy I've concocted, what about free water? N.M. and even the Texas Panhandle have their share of big lakes, but Alabama's 901 sq. mi. of inland waters is almost four times the 254 sq. mi. of inland waters in N.M.

While I was having my car's air conditioning system repaired in a small Texas town, the shop foreman and I compared fishing notes. He said the fishing fraternity in his town fished regularly every week. I asked him where this fishing water was and he answered casually with a gesture, "Oh, about 200 miles or so north." I figured the man must have had too much dust in his system because my wife and I had just driven through three sand storms. Just think, traveling 200 miles every week to go to a fishing hole! Why, in an 80-mile radius from home base, I'm casting distance of four or five large lakes, a dozen state lakes and I'm not counting the 300-acre lake about two miles from my back door.

The hunting and fishing regulations threw me. For instance, the resident fee is $15.50 for general hunting (deer, bear, fall turkey, squirrel, game birds); $21 for general hunting and fishing. As a resident if you want to shoot antelope, you buy an extra $16 fee, elk, $21; Ibex, oryx, Barbary sheep, bighorn sheep, $26 each species! Note some of these species are exotic and were imported from other continents. We in Alabama don't need oddball species, and I've told sportsmen that fact over and over. One bigshot got mad years ago when I said we should not import and stock ringneck pheasants.

My uncle in Homer, Alaska, tells me he has driven a hundred miles to get to decent deer range. He admitted he was envious of Alabama hunters.

I've studied the 50 states and I still consider Alabama No. 1 for the hunter and fisherman.

Welterweight registration set for Montevallo

Registration for the Montevallo Welterweight football program will be held this Saturday from 8 a.m. till 5 p.m. Registration will also be held today, Thursday, from 4 to 6 p.m.

Parents must register their children and bring a copy of their birth certificate. Registration will be held at Orr Park according to Brenda Jarvis and a fee is charged for playing in the league.

Local softball teams head to state tourney

Three teams from Shelby County will participate in this year's Alabama State Tournament for women's slow pitch softball teams.

The tournament is slated for Friday, Saturday and Sunday of this week, August 3, 4, 5 at the Lagoon Softball Complex in Montgomery.

The Montevallo Blue Ladies, SEPCO and the Just-A-Bouts from the Pelham League will represent Shelby County.

The Blue Ladies are seeded number one in District Six. The team is also one of the teams picked on a statewide basis to finish high in the championship games.

SEPCO is the first place team in the Pelham League. SEPCO placed third in the District Four Tournament.

The Just-A-Bouts are considered strong contenders and according to some of their fans are expected to "make it high in the state playoffs".

At press time, brackets for the three day state championship playoffs had not been drawn.

Blue Ladies defeat FOP

For the third year in a row, the Montevallo Blue Ladies Slow Pitch Softball team met "John Law" and took him to task on the baseball diamond.

The fund raising competition, played in Marion this past weekend, saw the Blue Ladies take on the team from the Fraternal Order of Police, Cahawba Lodge Number 53. This year's match saw the team from Montevallo come out victorious 13 to 8.

Divers find four-inch shark's tooth

Westover couple dive for ancient artifacts

by Lisa Sims

Imagine crawling along the ocean floor, breathing steadily from the oxygen tanks strapped across your shoulders.

You feel your way cautiously around underwater caverns and coral reefs.

A smooth shiny stone glistens, partially covered by sand. You beckon for your partner.

A shark's tooth...four inches in length, three inches in width...unbelievable.

According to Gerry Hill, certified scuba diver from Westover, the tooth came from the jaw of a prehistoric shark, and this one is relatively small.

Hill received his SCUBA (Self-Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus) certification in August 1977. His wife, Pam, was certified in 1978.

The couple says that scuba diving is a "natural high," that anyone can learn if they have the desire.

"Pam can't swim a stroke, but she is a certified diver and has been down to depths of up to 60 feet," Hill explained.

The Hills were certified by the Planet Ocean Scuba School in Sylacauga. They dive in U.S. and foreign waters.

One of their most recent trips was an expedition to Cayman Brac Island, 185 miles south of Cuba and 145 miles northwest of Jamaica.

While at the island, the couple explored the Elk Horn Coral Forest.

"Once we were down about 40 feet," said Hill, "the coral loomed over us as tall as pine trees. The coral, a red-brown color, honeycombed all around and we could swim through it," Hill said.

The Westover couple says that they enjoy artifact diving most. And they have a collection of animal teeth, Indian pottery and arrowheads, and Civil War items.

The four inch shark's tooth was discovered in the Chipola River bed in Florida. Hill says that archeaologists estimate the tooth is between seven and ten million years old.

In their tooth collection, the Hills also have bison and alligator teeth. A rare mastodon (prehistoric elephant) tooth was also discovered.

Hill says the Shelby County has several good places to dive for artifacts.

According to Hill, two Indian villages were covered up when the water level was raised on the Coosa River. There, divers have found pottery and arrowheads.

In Shelby, at Kewah Springs, Hill says old ore mining equipment is at the bottom of the spring, but he's never made it to the bottom.

Despite rumors that it's bottomless, Hill says Kewah is only around 85 feet deep. The problem, he explains, is a 15 foot layer of moss and growth that is difficult to swim in and which blocks out the light from above.

"God only knows what all is down there," Hill laughs mysteriously.

In Montevallo, Hill says, the Bulldog Bend, of the Cahaba River has yielded a number of Civil War relics.

Yellowleaf Creek, in the eastern part of the county is reported to contain Indian pottery and arrowheads, he says.

An old grist mill was located on Kelly's Creek in Northeast Shelby County near Sterett, and Hill says that mill gears and items can be found there.

In Vincent, Hill says the "Blue Hole" was an excellent diving spot before nearby construction blocked the bottom. According to the diver, once you were at the bottom of the Vincent hole, the undercurrent caught you and carried you down a beautiful underground stream.

The Hills have also done a first in their field.

They have participated in two underwater radio broadcasts, one in Alabama.

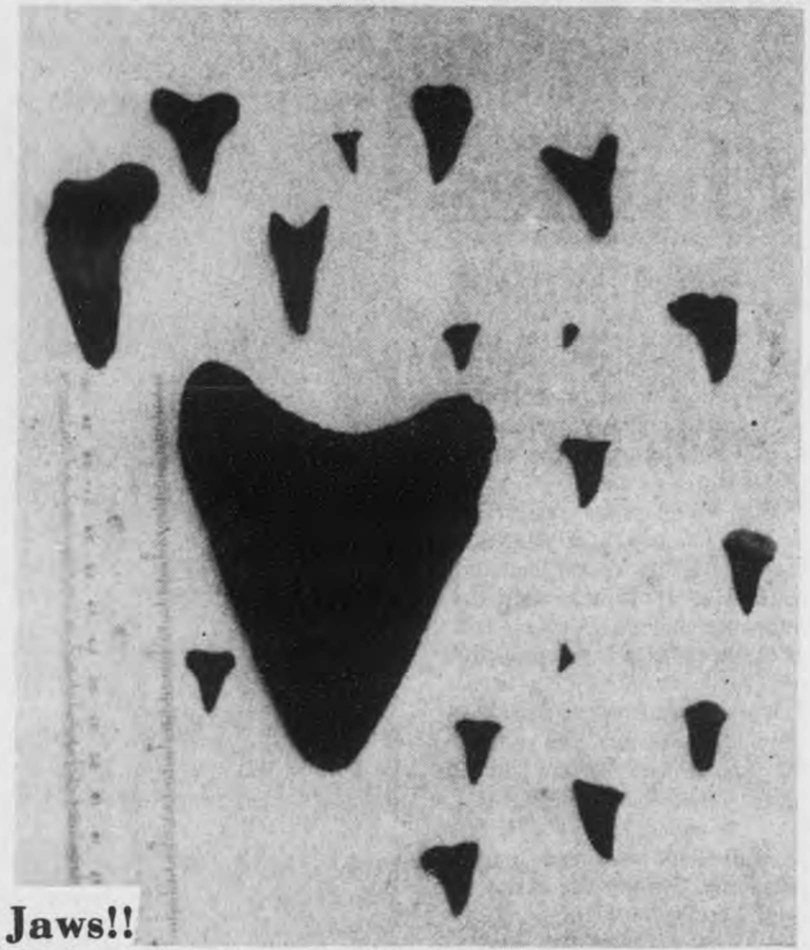
DJ Dennis Carter, of an Alex City radio station, broadcast 48 hours nonstop from the floor of the Still Waters Marina in Dadeville.

"We rigged up a garbage dumpster, so that we could pump air into it, and the DJ was inside the dumpster under water," Hill said.

As to the sharks, Hill concedes he would rather find the teeth than the real thing.

"I've seen a shark a couple of times, and it's a weird feeling--surprise and fear at the same time, but you just have to remain still and calm. Sharks are attracted to movement."

According to Hill, a shark's jaw contains between 2000 and 3000 teeth. Hill predicts that the shark which belonged to the four-inch tooth probably could have "swallowed a transfer truck."



Jaws!!

This four-inch prehistoric shark's tooth and other smaller teeth are in the collection of scuba divers, Gerry and Pam Hill of Westover. The Hills say that they enjoy diving for indian pottery and Civil War relics as well. (Photo by Sims)

Local races rescheduled for Saturday nights

A good crowd turned out for Sunday races at Shelby Speedway only to have to return home when the rains came. Track manager Jerry Handley told the Reporter that rain cancelled the races after only four laps of the first feature race.

Gary Perry of Alabaster was leading the race when the clouds unleashed their payload on the track and spectators. Prior to the rainout though, four races were held.

In the Bomber heat race, Johnny Russell of Calera took the checkered flag with Gary Perry second and Buddy Thomas third. In the Consolation race, Steve Payton of Calera took first place followed by Marvin Booth and Willie Norris.

In the buggy heat, Bennie Brasher of Calera continued his comination. Bobby Carter placed second with Dennis Majors of Brantleyville close behind.

Terry Wesley of Hueytown took first place int he modified heat race. Ronnie Gothard placed second and Bennie Pickett third.

Rain checks for last Sunday's race will be honored at the next race at Shelby Speedway which will be held Saturday night, August 11th. Handley told the Reporter that there will be no Sunday races this week due to the Talladega 500, but the Saturday night racing under the recently installed lights will begin on the 11th and continue for as long as possible.

Gates will open at 5 p.m. with racing starting at 7:30 on Saturday night. Rain checks for last Sunday's races will be honored at this race only and fans are encouraged to attend this newest feature in Shelby County.

Montevallo exec named by company

A Montevallo insurance agent has recently been named to membership in a select group.

Bill Weston, a 26 year veteran with State Farm Insurance has joined other outstanding agents in the Legion of Honor Society.

To qualify for the prestigious group, an agent must demonstrate the ability and knowledge to maintain a quality business.

Being named to the group means that Weston has provided superior service to his clients by meeting their total insurance needs.

At UM this summer

Students analyze fast foods

Some of the 24 high school juniors involved in a eight-week chemistry research and study project at the University of Montevallo are analyzing what most of us frequently eat at our favorite fast-food restaurants.

Others are making antibiotics, said Dr. Aris Merijanian, chairman, UM Chemistry Department, and project director.

Funded by a grant from the National Science Foundation, the summer program gives students a chance for in-depth study of chemistry while they are still in high school and helps prepare them for college level research and study.

"The idea for the project stems from the fact that we (in colleges and universities) get students each September, many of whom are frustrated because they haven't had the chance for some sort of special experience in science," said Dr. Merijanian.

"We're trying to satisfy their scientific curiosity and stimulate them to be good scientists," he said. "We need cracker jack scientists.

"They are the ones who are going to help solve the problems of the world."

Students in the project would work on their own projects or join faculty research projects. The majority opted for their own ideas, Dr. Merijanian said, which also included extracting components from food--components such as vitamins.

During the first four weeks students spent mornings in classes gaining background information and afternoons in labs doing experiments designed to acquaint them with laboratory techniques. During the second four weeks, the students have spent most of their time working on their individual projects.

A Shelby County student working in the project is Sheila Diana Scott from Helena.

District fire station schedules open house

Open house will be held at the North Shelby County Fire and Emergency Medical District Fire Station, August 4 and 5 between the hours of 1 p.m. and 5 p.m.

The station is located on the southside of Valleydale Road approximately 5½ miles east of U.S. Highway 31 and 3½ miles west of U.S. Highway 280.

On behalf of the residents, the Board of Trustees of the District extend to everyone a personal invitation to attend.

Clocks Unlimited

PELHAM, ALABAMA

Time is money these days and it pays to have a clock that keeps sure, accurate time.

Buying a quality clock with a fine West German movement and rich handcrafted wood cabinet is also an investment that will be tomorrow's collector's item.

At Clocks Unlimited in Pelham, you find only quality name clocks, Viking, Hamilton, Herchede, Colonial, Howard Miller, and fine import clocks.

CLOCKS, CLOCKS, CLOCKS...

Clock specialist, Margaret Vines takes great care not only to sell fine quality merchandise, but she also tries to teach her customers what makes the clocks "tick," something few people really understand.

The variations in the timepieces are fascinating and Mrs. Vines even sells kits so that curious children and adult youngsters can put the clocks together themselves.

She is also anxious to tell you the history behind the clocks and their beautiful chiming rhythms.

For example, a true story of adventure surrounds the St. Michael's Chime. The original bells, cast in London, were installed in the St. Michael Church steeple in Charleston, S.C. in 1764.

During the revolutionary war, the British took the bells back to England. After the war, a Charleston merchant bought them and sent them back to America. In 1823, when cracks were discovered in them, they were once again sent back to England to be recast.

In 1862, during the Charleston seige, they were moved to Columbia, S.C. for safekeeping, but Sherman's army set fire to the area, and nothing but fragments of the bells remained. These were sent back to London again, where the original molds still stood, and again, recast.

In February, 1867, the eight bells were reinstated in the St. Michael's steeple and on March 21 they rang out joyously, seeming to say: "Home again, home again, from a foreign land!"

Mrs. Vines carries clocks that ring the famous St. Michael's Chimes, as well as others including Westminister, Winchester, and Whittington chimes. She can tell you the story behind each beautiful tune.

When you go by Clocks Unlimited, make sure you're there when the clocks strike the hour in unison. You'll hear the big bass voices of grandfather clocks, the rich chimes of wall and mantle clocks, and the tinkling scales of beautiful anniversary clocks.

And if you already have a favorite heirloom clock you need to have repaired, Clocks Unlimited keeps a full line of components, dials, keys, glass, batteries--everything you need to get your clock back in accurate time-keeping order.

If you want to keep up with everything that's timely go by and see Mrs. Vines at Clocks Unlimited...it's time you did!

Clock specialist, Margaret Vines is waiting to show you her unlimited stock of clocks. Ask her to explain the workings of this beautiful grandfather timepiece.

Diet tips

Becky Goodwin, who is instructing the program on dealing with diabetes now underway in Columbiana, shows some information on the subject to several members of the class.

Diabetics study diet

Knowing how to deal with a problem is often half the battle. And anyone with diabetes or who has a diabetic in the family can benefit from a knowledge of diet requirements.

A program now underway in Columbiana teaches participants how to use exchange lists in meal planning and food preparation and how to handle eating out, among other things.

The first session of Project HELP began July 25 and will continue through Aug. 22. Interested persons meet in the Conference Room of the Shelby County Library on Wednesdays at 10 a.m.

A total of six hours will be spent in group and individual diet instruction. Other topics that will be covered during the sessions are eating when ill and use of convenience foods.

Becky Goodwin, Nutrition Education Coordinator, is conducting the course which is sponsored by the UAB Medical Center, the State Department of Public Health, and the Cooperative Extension Service at Auburn University.

Old fashioned Day planned

Shady Grove Baptist Church will be having an "Old Fashioned" day, Sunday, August 5, 1979.

Guest singers are the Redemptions Quartet from Clanton. The church is located on Shelby County road No. 41, just off Highway 280 on Double Oak Mountain.

UM Theatre presents students in musical revue

A musical revue, "Happiness is a Rhupbatkc (SIC)," will be presented by the University of Montevallo Theatre Department, Monday and Tuesday, August 6 and 7, at 8 p.m. in UM's Reynolds Studio Theatre.

The revue, developed and directed by UM students Chuck Brasher of Huntsville and Thomas Pope of Attalla, features selections from a broad range of Broadway shows, from "Showboat" to "Gypsy" to "Godspell" to "On the Twentieth Century."

According to Brasher, "The theme of the show is light, We're focusing on entertainment and versatility. We have everything from magic tricks to ballet."

Alabaster family takes vacation to work

Willie Langner of Alabaster took a vacation this summer--to WORK.

A working vacation is not most people's idea of fun and relaxation, but Lagner, a "Camper on Mission," does just that.

"Campers on Mission" are a non-denominational group of Christian campers who spend their vacations helping someone else.

Langner and his family, along with seven other Alabama "mission" families journeyed to Eagle Butte, South Dakota last month to build an educational wing for the Baptist Church.

The group of families came from towns and cities all over Alabama. They spend a week in the field, another week or more in travel time. Each family has its own travel trailer and they each pay their own expenses.

There are about 45 families in Alabama connected with "Campers on Mission" and about 175 families nationwide.

They get their assignments through the Christian Service Corps of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Covention, then travel wherever they are assigned, all across the nation.

Langner is a retired auto parts manager for NAPA, but proved his carpentry skills while in Eagle Butte.

The educational wing for the church, which sprung up quickly as the campers worked, is 24'x50' and before the mission week was out the shell of the building was up, complete with shingles, siding and a sub-floor, and most of the wiring was roughed in.

While the men were building the women taught bible schools at Bear Creek and Thunder Butte Indian communities on the Cheyenne River Reservation.

er tax hits county residents through legislative maneuver

by Marcia M. Sears

Beer drinkers in Shelby County will be paying more for five popular brands of beer unless the Attorney General and the courts knock down a law recently passed by the State Legislature.

The law is the result of internal politics in Talladega County and provides for a one cent tax on beer on the floor at the distribution warehouses in Talladega County.

This affects Shelby County beer drinkers because the distributors that service Shelby County for the five brands are located in Talladega County. The tax would be collected on all beer sent out from Talladega County distributors regardless of which county it is going to.

These distributors also service Coosa and Cleburne Counties.

Probate Judge Jasper Fielding of Coosa County has already asked Attorney General Charles Graddick to rule on the constitutionality of the new law. Because the law as passed differs from the proposed bill when it was advertised, Fielding hopes the Attorney General will say it is unconstitutional.

All proceeds of the tax would go to recreation, education and the retarded citizens' programs in Talladega County only. Fielding maintains it would cost Coosa County citizens about $25,000 per year and it would cost Shelby County citizens some $75,000 to $85,000 per year, yet none of the proceeds would benefit those counties.

The Shelby County Commission early in this year's legislative session, had suggested to the Shelby County legislative delegation that an additional one cent tax be imposed on beer and cigarettes in Shelby County, but the local delegation had refused to impose those taxes, agreeing instead only to introducing a one-cent sales tax subject to a vote of the people.

But the Talladega County action means Shelby Countians would be indirectly paying the Helena dislikes annexation

by Lisa Sims

The possible annexation of Riverchase by Hoover is causing some uneasiness among the Helena Town Council.

At the council's Monda" night meeting, Mayor Charles . enhale urged the council members to "watch this thing closely."

Penhale said his main concern was about the new Riverchase School.

"I understand one side of this thing," Penhale said, "It will relieve the county of the maintenance of the roads. But I'm worried about the school. We wanted a new school in Helena and they built the one in Riverchase. I'm afraid the school may eventually be a Hoover city school. This is something you need to do some thinking about," Penhale told the council.

In other action Monday night, the council agreed to buy a police motorcycle from Honda Central at a price of $3,595 and a radio from Chapman Communications.

The council also discussed with future resident, Don Smith, the possibility of his moving two houses onto property within the city limits to sell.

Molly McGregor, of the Shelby County YMCA, sent a request to use the town's tennis courts for a benefit tournament, August 17-19. The council opposed, saying that weekends were the only time the townspeople could use the courts. They decided to ask McGregor if the tourney could be held during the week.

Penhale told the council that vandals last week had pushed over 13 tombstones in the cemetery and the town was in the process of cleaning up.

Another discussion arose over the town's dog ordinance. The ordinance says that a written complaint must be filed in the town hall for dogs without tags.

"We're going to have to get someone to get out and catch them (the dogs)," Penhale stressed.

The council took no action concerning F.E. Cox's request to be allowed to move a trailer into the city limits. Penhale said the council was awaiting the decision on another comparable case.

Ugh--what a load!

Micah Hamilton, the four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Hamilton of Montevallo wanted to learn to fish. Equipped with the $2 rod and reel his dad bought him, the youngster had his first lesson in a family owned pond last week and the result is shown above.

How will you vote on the 1¢ sales tax?

Will you vote for a one cent county-wide sales tax? This was the question posed by Shelby County Reporter writers Bert Seaman, David Moore and Lisa Sims to a random sampling of county residents they encountered at various places throughout the county this week.

The election date for the proposed tax has not yet been set, but it will be held at the same time as the next regular election, according to Probate Judge Tommy Snowden.

Talladega drop-out

The roar of the engines at the Talladega 500 race Sunday did not faze this youngster, who grew bored with it all midway in the race and fell asleep under the bench where his mother was sitting. Plenty of the 80,000 adults who attended the race were wishing they could find a shady spot like this in the 100-degree heat. (Photo by Marcia Sears)

Alabaster sewer system granted go-ahead

by Bert Seaman

Some residents of Alabaster are going to benefit from a mistake that was made by the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission several years ago.

According to Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek, the extension of sewer lines to residents in the southeast section of the city should get underway around the first of September.

The work will be done with money the city is being required to pay back to HUD.

It seems that the city received a $100,000 grant for a sewer expansion project from the federal agency for which they were ineligible. But when they found that out, the money had already been spent. ($8,000 went to BR-PC for writing the grant).

HUD didn't want the money back if the city would use if for an improvement project - hence, the additional sewer expansion.

When asked Monday night by Councilwoman Mayo Taylor what the holdup on the project was, the Mayor explained that the only thing lacking before bids could be let, was getting a rate schedule from HUD's Atlanta office.

Sales tax comments

E.L. HANCOCK
Pelham

"Municipalities and counties can't operate with inflation this way. The word tax always carries a sour note. But the tax is needed and I would vote for it."

ANONYMOUS

"No. I wouldn't have anything to do with it."

ANONYMOUS

"It would all depend on how the 1¢ sales tax is used and to the extent that we're now economizing what we now have to spend.

ANONYMOUS

"Anytime there's a tax that goes on anything, I don't support it. Everytime you turn around they're adding something to gas and groceries."

ANONYMOUS

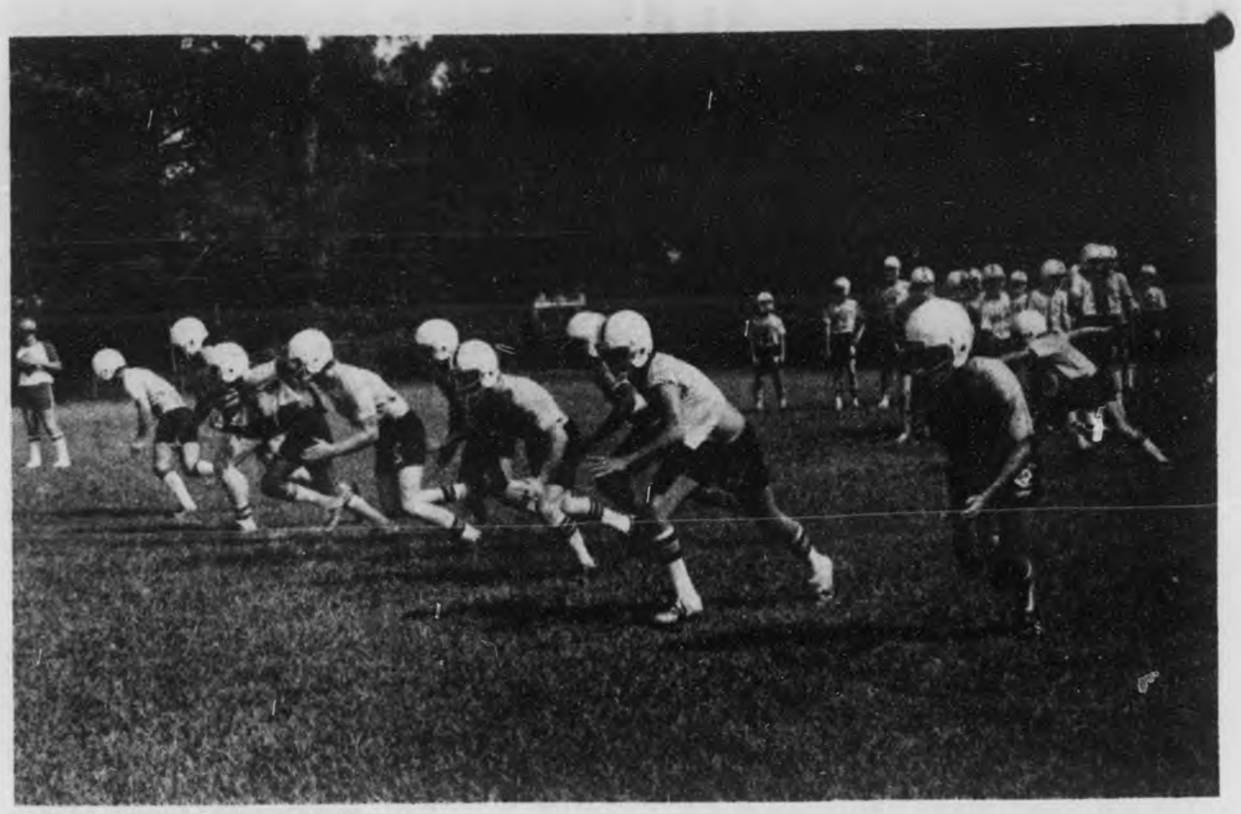
"I don't know nothin' about it. I don't watch TV. I don't listen to the radio. And I don't read the papers.

TOMMY THRASHER
Alabaster

"I haven't really heard anything about it. But they are going to have to do something. Personally, I wouldn't mind paying a few more cents if it went in the general fund."

JANET THRASHER
Alabaster

"I don't vote, but I would vote for (the tax). Anything to help everybody get out of the bind we're in."



And they're off!!

Members of the Shelby County High School football team run full steam ahead into the new season. Coach Mark Bradley enters his second year at the helm of the squad which last year only won two games. This year the results should be different if determination has anything to do with success.

Ballpark purchase okayed by Alabaster

by Bert Seaman

Alabaster youngsters have been playing ball on Phillips Field, better known as Buck Creek Field, for the past 20 years. However, the land has been leased.

But Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek told members of the city council Monday night that the 14¾ acres can now be purchased for $59,000.

After an assessment of finances, the panel gave the Mayor the go ahead to start purchase arrangements.

Zuiderhoek pointed out that it was almost certain that a grant from the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation could be obtained that would cover half of the cost.

And noting that $10,000 was still left in the grant that had been obtained to make improvements on the city's new ballfield, the mayor said the city would only have to "dig up" $4,000 of the purchase price.

The only dissenting vote to the proposal came from Councilwoman Mayo Taylor.

Although the city had grant money five years ago and sought to buy the field at that time, the owners refused to sell. However, now that the Siluria mill has been sold, Canton Textile Mills, Inc., is anxious to sell the property, Zuiderhoek reported.

An Alabaster resident, interested in helping the city improve recreational facilities, appeared at the meeting to offer assistance from her organization.

Mrs. Betty Carter, president of the Veteran of Foreign Wars Womens' Auxiliary, said that her group had money available that they wanted to donate for recreational needs.

Councilman Gene Glasgow informed her of a meeting of the Park and Recreation Board in the Depot Thursday evening and invited her to attend.

Riverchase case sets precedent

by David Moore

The Alabama Ethics Commission has ruled that it is a conflict of interest for a principal to hire his or her spouse as general office help or bookkeeper. The opinion was delivered last Thursday in Montgomery as the result of the Commission's investigation of Riverchase principal Dr. Bobby Anderson hiring his wife to keep the school's books for a portion of last year.

Ethics Commissioner Melvin Cooper told the Reporter that the ruling was delivered as a "cease and desist opinion, more than anything else."

According to Cooper, Anderson has agreed that hiring his wife was in violation of the state's nepotism laws. Cooper pointed out, however, that Anderson proved he had been given the authority to do so by the Shelby County Board of Education.

The Commission has ruled that Anderson must repay the school's account some $600 which his wife earned during the end of February and the month of March.

"We weren't as concerned with Anderson as much as we were with the overall view of nepotism," Cooper said, addind that the decision would go a long way toward preventing similar incidents in the future.

Cooper pointed out the fact that it is unusual for a board to delegate hiring and firing authority to principals, and the Shelby County position on allowing this is exceptional. Most boards of education exercise that authority themselves, he said.

The advisory opinion issued by the Ethics Commission was reviewed and approved by the office of the Attorney General, and unless contested in court, it carries the force and effect of law.

Cooper said he delivered the opinion to Dr. Anderson, assistant school superintendent Vern Davis and their attorneys on July 25. Cooper added that Anderson was very cooperative.

Judge defends salary raise

Letter to the Editor

I do not understand why you allow letters to the Editor be printed when you know that the contents are untrue. I am referring to the letter from Mrs. E. T. Martin, Rt. 19, Box 210, Birmingham, Alabama 35244, which you printed in the August 2nd issue of the Reporter. Apparently Mrs. Martin doesn't keep up with the news and doesn't understand County government, otherwise she would not have written the letter.

The Probate Judge or the County Commission doesn't have the authority or power to tell the sheriff how to run his department or who to place on patrol duty, etc. We cannot tell him who to hire or fire or how to schedule his personnel. That is strictly up to the sheriff.

As for the raise given the Probate Judge-the one just received is the first one given to me. There have been many attempts to give the Probate Judge a raise, even before I took office, but all failed.

As to the debts of the County-the County was over four and a half (4½) million dollars in debt when I took office. Since I took office we have repaid over one million dollars off this total indebtness. Repaying these prior debts is one of the reasons why we are short of money today.

Other major expenses that have occured since I took office is the additional cost of the reappraisal program, cost of operating the new jail (the two million dollar "white elephant" which was designed and contracted before I took office). The Insurance cost have skyrocketed due to so many sheriff cars being wrecked and increased coverage on County buildings. The coal severance tax fell far short of the revenues that we expected. Inflation has also hurt the budget. These are but a few reason for the shortage of money in the County coffers.

If Mrs. Martin had been keeping up with the news she would know that I have already stated that I would request and support legislation to give the voters of Shelby County the opportunity to decide whether or not they would separate the office of the Probate Judge and the Chairmanship of the County Commission with the chairmanship being an elective office.

Mrs. Martin must remember that the former Probate Judge did not have to ask for a raise during his tenure in office as he was on the very lucrative fee system until 1971 when the office of Probate Judge was placed on a salary (which salary was set by the legislature in 1965). I am sure that if he or anyone else were holding this office today that they would have also asked for an increase in salary. Other elected officials have received sizeable increases so why not the Probate Judge? In fact, if I had not gotten my raise, that would have made my salary the lowest of any elected official in the Courthouse and don't you think that would seem strange since it is the highest elective office in the county.

My desire and intention is to serve all of the people of Shelby County in the best way possible. I will continue to work hard for the people of this great County but I need the full support of all its citizens in order that we might make it a better place in which to live and that more and better services may be provided at less cost to the taxpayer.

Sincerely,
Thomas A. Snowden, Jr.

Writer believes

Close look justifies pay hikes

Letter to the Editor:

Dear Editor:

I would like to comment on the letter in the issue of August 2, 1979, signed by Mrs. E. T. Martin. I personally doubt that she, as implied, is voicing the opinion of any sizeable segment of the population in "North Shelby County" since I can't believe most people in that area would share her attitude. She obviously has some inaccurate facts and seems to be more concerned with personalities than fact.

The Probate Judge nor the County Commissioners have anything to do with the assignments of the Sheriff's personnel. This is entirely the responsibility of the County Sheriff, as it should be. I'm sure Sheriff Glasgow is doing what he considers the best for the entire county under the circumstances. Certainly we need more law enforcement personnel in this county and not just because some professor says so. I think most people will agree with this and I'm sure the Judge and Commissioners share this opinion. The sad truth is, there is just not enough money available to hire all you want or really need. This is due to a multitude of reasons, only one of which is the fancy new jail, which requires more manpower to operate. Also, when the State Legislature mandates that a certain salary must be paid to law enforcement personnel and there is a certain amount of money available to pay law enforcement personnel, then is it simple arithmetic which dictates how many can be hired. I don't think you would get any volunteers to work full time on the force with no pay (even if you could, there is probably some regulation against it). It is true that the deputies put their lives on the line when they are on duty and so also do firemen, city policemen, coal miners, armed forces personnel, and many others.

I think the entire pay structure of the county employees should be overhauled and put more in perspective. The Probate Judge/Chairman of the Commission is the highest government official in the county and since he is an elected official does not get a raise each time the "county employees" get one. He has not had a raise since his election, much less two. The County Commission does not grant the raises of elected officials, this is done by the State Legislature and raises were recently granted the Probate Judge/Chairman of the County Commission, the Tax Collector and the Tax Assessor by them. The state also recently granted large raises to Judges, the District Attorney and others in the judicial system. Prior to this raise, the Tax Collector and Tax Assessor were making the same salary as the new school "maintenance technicians" were paid as a starting salary. When the Tax Collector and Assessor are responsible for and handle millions of dollars of our money this sounds rather ridiculous to me. The highest official of this county with our 56,000 citizens was being paid less than some of the deputies and a good bit less than many other county employees. This doesn't seem at all consistent with our American way of life. The county school superintendent also got a large raise and he was already making as much as the Probate Judge is now making after his raise. Elected officials do not have a union to negotiate for them (an exception may be the Bar Association for the judiciary).

As I remember, the campaign promise of Judge Snowden when he was running was to attempt to separate the jobs of Probate Judge and Chairman of the County Commission if the people desired this and he would attempt to establish a branch office of the courthouse in the northern part of the county as a convenience to the citizens up there. He can not do this himself. It takes an act of the legislature to allow the citizens to vote whether they want this or not. To date, each attempt to get enabling legislature for a vote on splitting the courthouse offices has failed at Montgomery. I have not heard of anyone requesting an act to separate the Probate Judge and Chairman of the Commission, but I believe Judge Snowden would submit it if such ever happens.

The financial status of our county is not something that suddenly developed this year or last year, or even the year before that. Many of the obligations of today are from actions taken over the past 10 years and not always by county officials. The population has almost doubled over the past 10 years and this requires more services and manpower and equipment to perform these services. We have a big, modern, fancy new jail. Bonds sold in the past are still being paid off. Interest on past debts is catching up with us. The state has mandated more expenditures from county budgets, the federal government has imposed many new regulations and things such as property reappraisal which costs the county money. Cities and towns can levy new taxes but the county can not and has not levied a tax increase in a long time. This is just some of the reasons, and who doesn't know about inflation.

The question as to how many raises Judge Fowler got is not pertinent to the present situation as far as I can see. Whether he was the best Probate Judge the county ever had or whether he kept the county debt free and whether he was worth more or less than Judge Snowden seems to me to be a matter of opinion of each individual. Votes are usually the result of individual opinions.

I hope this might help to answer some of your questions Mrs. Martin and you most certainly have the right to know what is going on in the county government. The Commission meets at 9:00 a.m. at the County Courthouse Annex every 2nd and 4th Monday of each month. Every citizen is entitled to attend these meetings and is invited to do so. Perhaps your letter will induce more people to become interested and find out what really goes on. I'm glad you intend to exercise your right to vote at the next election just as I do.

Sincerely,
Laura A. Tucker

Snowden slammed

Curb on costs urged

Letter to the Editor:

Dear Editor:

The people of Shelby County have really been taken in by our county leader (??). Last week we read in the county papers how three of the county officials had the legislature vote them a very large salary increase. Probate Judge Snowden's salary was doubled. Imagine! And during his first term in office. Is this legal? If so, it surely must be unethical as he knew the amount of his salary when he ran for office. Maybe he does not want another term or he knows he could not win another one. Could that be it? How will the county pay these huge increases when they are already borrowing money to meet everyday expenses?

Now this week we read of Judge Snowden pushing a bill to divide the probate office and commission office. If this works he will be paid double for only half the work he wanted so badly during the last election. How much of this foolishness will the people of Shelby County take?

Then also at this time of financial crisis, he is pushing for another courthouse--more and more expense and employees. We have more working in the courthouse now than are needed. When and where will this all end? How many people have been promised employment? Can we afford more and more taxes to pay these bills? I believe I remember reading several years ago that all business in the courthouse can be handled by mail except to secure driver's license. If this is true, why is another courthouse needed? Everyone can go to Columbiana once every few years. Maybe the bill now being considered to put North Shelby County in Jefferson County will solve this problem. Then they can all go downtown to Birmingham--it does not seem to be to far away.

Let us wake up before we find ourselves under a new tax to pay for salary increases and the convenience of a few people. Everyone lives a long way from the county seat except those who live right in Columbiana. Are we going to have 10 or more courthouses so no one will have to travel more than ten miles? Everyone should be treated equally--remember the Golden Rule?

Mary Miller
Rt. 1
Sterrett, Alabama

EDITOR'S NOTE: The probate judge's salary was increased from $17,000 to $26,000 by the recent law. On the matter of the second courthouse, Judge Snowden has been suggesting it for some time, beginning with his campaign for office, not just in recent weeks.

Snowden critic urged to meet him

Letter to the Editor:

I would like to comment on the letter that was published in your paper last week.

I wonder if this reader had done any research on what she has said or if she has been listening to idle gossip, has she been to the commission meetings? Has she contacted Judge Snowden with her complaints and is she familiar with the debts that he acquired with his office.

I have been lucky enough to work with Judge Snowden in the past and have never met a more conscientious, dedicated and hard working elected official, we need many more just like him.

Both him and the commissioners have my admiration and respect for what they are trying to do for me, a Shelby Countian.

Give these people a chance, lady, and meet with them, I guarantee that you will come away with a different point of view, and will be a strong Snowden supporter in the next election.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

We had been in the berry patch for two hours, Herman Strong and I, in a little hollow that hadn't felt a breeze since last March, and under a sun that must have been a first cousin to a depot stove in February. There had been some talk of snakes when we first got there, and a peculiar noise or two back in the bushes, but that had all passed and we were on our way out, crippling down a little trail that ran from the patch to the road.

It was on this road that we met Mrs. Matilda Goosegreen. She had driven up in a big, shiny car and had said she was from Birmingham but had come, with her family, to spend a week in a cabin on the river. She looked at us and, seeing how hot we were, took out a clean white handkerchief from her pocket and made a couple of passes at her face. And then wondered, out loud, if Herman would be interested in picking some berries for pay.

"What would you charge?" she added, taking another peek inside Herman's basket.

"If I did it," Herman said, "it would cost a person two dollars a berry, green ones and all." He put his basket down and took out his handkerchief and whiped at his face. "But there's one other thing," he added. "That's the price if you pick 'em at the patch. I wouldn't deliver 'em for that."

Charlie Starnes and I were in the lobby at Shelby Memorial Hospital. His wife was in room 249 and Pauline Pearson, my sister-in-law, was in room 216. So while the ladies in white looked after their needs, Charlie and I sat out there and talked. This wasn't the first time I have talked with Charlie Starnes. The first time I talked with him, I remember, we were running Indians out of the Kingdom, all the way to Summerhill, five miles down the Calera road.

The talk got around to planting a garden. Something Charlie and I have been doing for years. Charlie plants a big garden and raises a lot of stuff and I plant a little garden and turn up with just enough stuff for Leona and me. But if you've been planting one long enough, size doesn't make too much difference. It's wear and tear on the old bones and muscles that counts.

So when we got around to planting butterbeans, Charlie said: "Let whoever wants to plant the bush beans. But for me, I'll plant the running kind and stick every one."

A fellow came by and asked for a match and we told him we didn't tote 'em and he sauntered on, whistling a little tune as he went.

"For folks like me and you," Charlie went on, "squatting and picking butterbeans is over and done with."

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

Have you ever been handed a bulletin as you entered church by an usher whose hair was so wet it was almost dripping?

Well, it happened at my church Sunday and the usher was me. I don't know if women ushering at church is a widely accepted practice, but we've started doing it. I must admit, though, it still seems a little unnatural to me.

But as to the condition of my hair, I waited, as usual until the last possible second to get ready and after a hurried shampoo found someone had swiped the hair dryer. Well, not swiped really, my daughter had just gone off with it for the weekend.

I hadn't left the house with my hair wet since portable dryers went on the market, but now that I was going to be in full view of a church full of people, here I was, looking as though I'd just come in from an undersea expedition.

Leaving the car windows down to speed up the drying process, I made a mad dash for the church, hoping I'd arrive in time to get some instruction on my first time assignment.

However, the opening chords of the prelude sounded before I found out everything I wanted to know about my duties. I asked about something else that was on my mind.

The volume of the music had increased, so he didn't hear me. So I whispered a little louder, but catching a glimpse of his wife, I cut off my question in mid sentence. Her look clearly said I was making too much noise.

As the service got underway, I noticed a lady on the back row motioning to me. "Would you count how many are here?" she asked. "I don't think I've fixed enough trays for communion."

Thinking my male counterpart could probably make a quicker assessment of the congregation, I asked him if he'd count the number of people present.

"What's that?" he asked after I whispered my request as loudly as I dared. I repeated it two or three times and he finally informed me he didn't hear too well.

By using sign language and elaborately mouthing the work COUNT a few times, I finally got the message across. When I delivered the total he came up with to the lady, she decided all was well.

When another question about procedure popped to my mind, I decided to forget about it until I heard footsteps outside the door. Peeking out, I saw that the late arrival was a friend who had ushered for many years.

So I slipped out, and motioned the somewhat startled man into the nearby elevator. I figured I could ask my question there without creating any further disturbance inside the auditorium.

Before the offering was to be taken, we had a few fearful moments when the man who was to hand out the plates mentioned that he couldn't see them. Following his nervous glance, I noted that they certainly weren't anywhere in sight.

If they're not there when we go forward, will we have to stand at the altar while someone dashes out to look for them, I wondered? If they couldn't be found, I could just picture us walking up and down the aisle with cupped hands.

However, our dilemma was resolved when the minister invited everyone to shake hands. I immediately rushed to greet some friends on the opposite side of the church where I could get a clear view of the spot where the plates should be.

I guess the people wondered why I was looking someplace else as I spoke to them. But there were the plates, much to my relief.

So scattering "Good to see you's," along the way, I rushed back to my station to report the good news.

Well, I think I have the duties of an usher down pat now. But I have a sneaking suspicion I may never be asked to serve in that capacity again.

Walkers for charity risk injury

Letter to the Editor:

Dear Editor:

On numerous occasions different groups have sponsored Walk-A-Thons along the busy highways of Shelby County. The efforts of these persons walking is to be commended and the benevolent cause is certainly worthwhile. However, this practice creates a traffic hazard and certainly endangers the lives of those participating in the walk. Usually at least one law enforcement vehicle and personnel is tied up trying to warn traffic to avoid danger to the participants.

It seems more feasible to me for such a group to march around the park such as the Montevallo Park. The distance could be measured and the total number of miles walked could be recorded. We do not declare a day for cars to drive on the sidewalks and it certainly impedes traffic and endangers lives for persons to walk down the highway which is intended for vehicular traffic. Surely a better means can be found to pledging our support to worthy causes.

Sincerely,
John C. Draper

Helena seeks land for ballparks

by Lisa Sims

Close to twenty little league parents crowded into the small chamber where the Helena Town Council met Monday night.

Chairs had to be brought in for the women, and the men stood throughout the discussion, which lasted for over an hour.

The parent group, led by Randall Johnston, went to the meeting to urge the council to act on the construction of new baseball fields in Helena.

According to Johnston, Helena had close to ten teams this year and estimated the town would have 14 teams next year.

To date, several of the Helena teams have been allowed to play games on Pelham and Alabaster fields, Johnston explained.

"We only have one field and the teams are growing," he said.

"But, first, we have to come up with a location for the fields," Mayor Charles Penhale told the parents.

According to Penhale, there are two possibilities for the fields, neither of them particularly promising.

He said that U.S. Steel had previously agreed to lease the league some of its land at a minimal charge, but the Mayor said that a policy change at USS would probably bar the property for the use of little league fields.

As to the USS property, located on Bessemer Road, Johnston expressed concern over the possibility of vandalism and theft, to costly equipment and concession stand materials.

The other alternative, land donated by Plantation Pipeline, was equally discouraging.

Although the league has promised to design the field so that noise is kept to a minimum and to create a "buffer zone" using the tree line, residents who own property violently oppose the ball park construction.

According to Councilman Paul Cribbs, seven families in the area have fought the issue.

Cribbs recommended another possible solution. His suggestion was to utilize land in Joe Tucker Park, where the present field is located, to build two more fields.

Two problems arose from Cribbs' suggestion. Several persons present mentioned there would be little picnic and grassy areas remaining and the fields would need separate lighting, seating, announcing, and concession areas, adding to expenses.

Penhale explained with a sketch, how the fields could be built in a pie-shape setup, so as to utilize only one set of lighting, etc.

But still, there is no land readily available, he said.

Councilman Charles Harpst advised the parents to talk to the opposing residents who live adjacent to the Plantation Pipeline land.

"I have to live with those people. Don't get me wrong. I want baseball diamonds, but as long as those people are opposed. I can't be for it,"Harpst said.

"You bring us a petition with those other people's (those opposing) names and we'll do it," he continued.

Cribbs said that he knew the lawyer the opposition had on their side and that they intended to take the issue to court if necessary.

"If this goes to court, the land could be tied up for three to five years, and you need the fields next spring," he stressed.

Johnston said that he would begin Tuesday morning by going around to the opposing families and requesting that they go along with the plan.

"I'll bring you a petition with a list of names for and against," he said.

Penhale told the assembly that no matter what is decided, there will always be opposition.

"When I decided to build that park (Joe Tucker Park), I was called everything, and it was said that I was trying to make Helena another Washington, D.C. You'll always have opposition," he concluded.

The mayor told parents that if they did get the opposition to support the fields and sign a petition, he would call a meeting that day and take immediate action.

Penhale also said that he had written Montgomery to request state funds for the little league project.

He estimated the fields would cost $70,000 and the state, he said, has agreed to supply $35,000. The other half of the money would come from the city.

"We're going to need all the help we can get. When you take $35,000 out of a budget, especially one as small as ours, it hurts," Penhale explained.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"Eternal Punishment of the Lost"

The Lord would have "all to be saved, and to come to a knowledge of the truth" (I Timothy 2:4); however, the Lord will not force any to be saved. What will be the eternal destiny of the lost?

First, Paul the Apostle urges us to "Behold the goodness and the severity of God: on them which fell, severity." (Romans 11:22) "God is love" (I John 4:8), but he is also "a consuming fire." (Hebrews 12:29)

Second, Christ is the "author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him" (Hebrews 5:8,9), but what will happen to the lost on judgment day? The lost will be raised from the dead, for the Apostle Paul said there will be a resurrection of both the just and the unjust. (Acts 24:15) And, everyone, good and evil, shall "appear before the judgment seat of Christ." (Matthew 25:31, 32; II Corinthians 5:10) Paul stated, "And as it is appointed to man once to die, but after this the judgement." (Hebrews 9:27)

Third, the lost will suffer "eternal punishment." (Matthew 25:46) The wicked will "go away into eternal punishment, but the righteous into eternal life." Thus, the punishment is as long as the eternal life.

Dear Reader, to become a Christian you must hear the word (Romans 10:17), believe (Hebrews 11:6), repent (Luke 13:3), confess Christ (Romans 10:9, 10), and be baptized for the remission of sins. (Acts 2:38; Mark 16:16; Acts 22:16)

You will receive a cordial welcome at the Columbiana Church of Christ, Hwy. 25 By-Pass.

Fluffy entertains

Jeff Todhunter and his puppet Fluffy were one of the reasons youngsters enjoyed Vacation Bible School at Pelham United Methodist Church. Watching the puppets perform are Mary Martin (l), Carol Fogle, and Rev. David Wallace.

Puppets make point

Participants in Vacation Bible School at Pelham United Methodist Church concluded their week-long session with a service of praise Sunday evening.

But that's not going to be the end of the program which had as its theme, "The Good Shepherd - I'm His and He's Mine." According to Jean Pryor, a leader in the school, portions of the daily sessions will be put together to form a meaningful program which can be put on for various groups.

One of the highlights of the daily assembly program was a puppet enactment on some aspect of the theme. Jeff Todhunter directed the puppet theatre whose main character was a lamb named Fluffy.

Youngsters who attended the school also had a chance to see and pet a live lamb which was brought from Oak Mountain State Park by Ranger Talmadge Butler.

Another enjoyable feature of the school was an end of the week outing to Fogle-Martin Lake on County Road 13 for a picnic and swimming.

At their service of praise, each class either sang or gave a recitation of something they had learned during the week. Solos were sung by Angie Wilson and David Pryor who accompanied himself on the autoharp.

Diannah Garrett and Destiny White assisted with the puppet presentation and Scott Pullium was narrator. Music during the week was under the direction of Jackie Buck.

Pastor David Wallace assisted with the teaching and in the daily assembly sessions. Mary Martin served as director of the school and Carol Fogle was her assistant.

Carrie Sue Hinds was in charge of the Arts and Crafts program.

Columbiana studies Center St. problems

by Bert Seaman

All the patching that has been done on Center Street hasn't provided any permanent solution to the problem, Columbiana Street Superintendent James Palmer told the city council Thursday night.

The council was reminded that the street had been torn up when a new gas line was installed. But it seems the ditch where the street was cut has created a depression which allows water to collect.

"We've tried patching it, but that hasn't worked," Palmer declared. "It just has to be paved," he said.

Councilman Frank Owens agreed that the street was in bad shape and that the City ought to fix it.

The panel was agreeable to Mayor Robert Bolton's suggestion that Palmer and the city street crew do as much as possible of the repair work, and "let the Gas Board pay the remainder of the cost of fixing the street."

When the matter of a petition protesting the construction of a church on Shelby Road was brought up again, Councilman Harold McCord reported he had learned the congregation had no intention of building.

Several families living in the area had submitted the petition several weeks ago. But McCord related that the property, located between the cemetery and Mooney Road, didn't contain enough acreage for a church building and parking lot.

It was reported that one homeowner in the area had said they didn't want to live between a cemetery and a church.

A request to have a fire hydrant installed on Cates Mountain where a home is to be built was tabled.

It was agreed that the area be investigated to see if a hydrant hadn't already been installed within 1,000 feet of the location of the proposed home site.

In other business, it was announced that August 6-10 would be Dog Detention Week in the city.

Any dogs found running loose during that period will be picked up and taken to the Animal Shelter.

Republicans to organize

Plans were announced today for a major organizational effort by Republicans in Shelby County. A special meeting has been planned for Monday, August 13 at Pelham City Hall at 7:00 p.m.

County Republican Chairman Ray Ledbetter of Dunnavant said the meeting has been planned to begin "to seriously cultivate the growth of a competitive Republican Party in Shelby County. In 1976 President Ford carried the county by 1800 votes and some local candidates polled 40% of the vote. In 1978 Jim Martin carried the county. In 1980 we hope to do even better."

Ledbetter said the meeting is for anyone interested in helping establish a party organization in the county. He added that the recruitment of serious candidates for county office should also be considered.

In addition to planning county activities, Ledbetter said that information about state party plans, the March 1980 presidential primary and presidential candidate schedules will be presented. Party rules for the 1980 primary and delegate selection process will also be discussed.

OPEN HOUSE

Everyone is cordially invited to attend open house at the new facility of the Columbiana Church of the Nazarene August 12 from 2 until 5 p.m.

UM to fill post

University of Montevallo officials plan to name an acting dean of its College of Arts and Sciences this week, following the death of Dean John B. Walters, Jr., last week. The search for a permanent dean will begin this fall.

Dr. Russell Warren, vice president for academic affairs, said he had consulted with department chairmen and faculty members from Arts and Sciences.

"From that, I'll ascertain the general consensus," Dr. Warren said, "and based on their recommendations and my thoughts, I'll make an appointment."

"It is important that the acting dean have the support of the faculty, and therefore I am attempting to involve them in a significant way in the selection process," Warren added.

Dr. Walters, 67, died last week in a Nashville, Tenn., hospital. He came to UM as professor of history and chairman of the Division of Social Sciences in 1956 when UM, then Alabama College, first admitted men students. In 1957, he became UM's first dean of men, and in 1959, became academic dean of Alabama College. He became dean of UM's College of Arts and Sciences in 1969, when the academic programs were divided among on-campus colleges.

Rotarians learn facts on stress

Montevallo Rotarians initiated a series of programs on health last Thursday night with a lecture-demonstration on "dealing with stress" by UM professor of education Sanford Colley.

Stress, he said, is an inevitable part of life and affects physical health dramatically--most frequently via muscular tension.

"Stress can be controlled," Professor Colley stated, showing some relaxation techniques useful in accomplishing that result. Borrowing ideas from Herbert Benson's book, "The Relaxation Response," he outlined a half-dozen ideas: sitting quietly, closing one's eyes, progressively relaxing the body's muscles, breathing through the nose, freeing the mind of distracting thoughts by repeating one word over and over and continuing the above for 10 to 20 minutes.

same tax yet none of the revenue would benefit Shelby County. Probate Judge Tommy Snowden told the Reporter he thinks it is unfair, and is joining Fielding and the probate judge of Cleburne County in protesting the legislative act.

It is not at all clear that the Talladega County legislative delegation realized the turmoil their bill would create in the three other counties. According to State Representative Wallace Shoemaker of Childersburg, the delegation had first proposed to levy a one cent tax on beer that was sold in Talladega County retail stores, with the proceeds going to the Talladega County general fund. This would not have affected beer sold in other counties.

But, he said, the members of the Talladega County Commission did not want to take the politically unpopular step of raising any taxes.

Shoemaker said the Talladega lawmakers were trying to help out the tight financial situation in Talladega County by proposing the first tax, but because of the opposition from their own Commission, they changed the bill to impose the tax at the distributor level and changed the beneficiaries of the revenue from the Talladega general fund to the specific programs mentioned above.

But it was the first proposed bill that appeared in advertisements in the Talladega Daily Home, and not the revised bill. It is on this point that the judges of the three other counties hope the Attorney General will say is unconstitutional.

However, an Attorney General's opinion is not law, and the matter may be taken to the courts to decide.

Fire district shows off new station house

by David Moore

The North Shelby County Fire District's ten months of service culminated in the grand opening of a new fire hall last weekend.

The station encloses 4500 square feet and was built at a cost of over $170,000, excluding equipment and appliances, and a $25,000 two-acre lot was donated to the district. The station is located on Valleydale Road.

An estimated 600 people attended the open house Saturday and Sunday.

The North Shelby County Fire District went into service October 1, 1978 with one pumper and a tin shed located in Inverness. Around the first of the year, the fire company moved to another temporary shed and house trailer at their present location.

The new station entered service in July.

"Our growth's been fantastic," NSCFD chief Winston Boutwell said Saturday at the grand opening. "To start out 10 months ago with nothing and have all this so soon is great."

Chief Boutwell attributed the district's growth spurt to the backing of the people and the board of trustees. "Our support's been great," he said.

"We hope to keep improving until we're second to none in the state--in the United States," the chief added.

As of August 5, the NSCFD had answered 238 fire and medical calls.

The new station contains a three-bay garage designed to accomodate a ladder truck in the future which will be required for the several high-rise buildings planned for North Shelby County.

The district has also applied for a grant to purchase a rescue vehicle.

Currently the fire district is equipped with a 100-gallon pumper, a 750-gallon pumper, a "jaws of life" an Ajax extraction unit, a life-pak 5, and a Laerdal suction unit.

The district has six paid firefighters, one chief, and 20 active volunteers.

According to Riverchase Fire Chief Doug Sprouse who visited the new facility Saturday, "The growth and professionalism (of the NSCFD) is unprecedented in Shelby County. The people of this fire district are definitely getting their money's worth."

Facilities for firefighters at the new station include seven bunks, showers, modern kitchen facilities, a washer/dryer and a large den area.

The NSCFD board of trustees is composed of Martha Geyer, John Pruett, Larry Dillard, John van Pelt and chairman Steve Wright.

The business phone number for the NSCFD is 969-0767. The emergency number is 663-6300.

Defendant wins jury decision

It took the jury a little over two hours to arrive at a verdict in favor of the defendant in a civil case tried in Circuit Court here Monday and Tuesday.

The jury decision let Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Alabama off the hook. In their verdict, the jurors stated that they found the physical condition of the plantiff pre-existed (before the claim was filed), and therefore the plantiff was not entitled to recover from the defendant.

Calera attorney Eason Mitchell represented the plantiffs, Linnie M. and Jimmy H. Vernon of Rt. 2, Montevallo.

Retired Judge Dave Archer from Huntsville was appointed to preside at the trial.

The following Shelby County residents served on the jury: Kathy Carter, foreman; John Michael Galloway, Wilda Jackson, Wyletta Humber, Joann Shaw Holcomb, Bobbie Jean Epperson.

Eunice J. Vance, Leroy Robert Greenawalt. Linda Ruth Hutchinson, John Louis Landers, Lynn Charles Kuhn, Carolyn Loyd Lucas.

You'll log for less with Thompson.

Like David Mickle of Opelika, Alabama does.

"I bought two Caterpillar 518 skidders from Thompson for a number of reasons.

First, the machine. It's built to last longer. I'll get five years from these machines, where I could expect maybe three from other skidders around.

It'll outdo all others in the woods. I don't know another skidder to stay with it.

Second, because of the resale value. I'll get my money back on a Caterpillar. Look around at the used skidder prices. It's smart to buy a machine that'll be worth something when trade-in time comes.

And because of Thompson Tractor. Their branch in Opelika is important to me. I get any part in less than 24 hours. And their field service is there when I need it.

Looking at the whole picture, you just save money when you buy a Caterpillar 518 skidder with Thompson."

The Riverchase Baptist Church a mission begun in February 1978, has recently called its first full time pastor, Dr. Charles Clark.

Dr. Clark comes to Riverchase from Bluff Springs Baptist Church in Ashford, and is a former pastor for the Pratt City First Baptist Church in Birmingham.

Clark received his B.A. degree from Mobile College, his Master of Divinty degree from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky and his Doctor of Ministry from Luther Rice Seminary in Jacksonville, Florida.

He and his wife, the former Virginia Nations, are the parents of four sons.

Under his leadership, the mission is seeking to constitute as a Southern Baptist Church on September 16 of this year, and to then make building plans.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Yeager, pictured above with their daughter Patricia, were one of the families selected for Family of the Year title at Pelham United Methodist Church. The other family was Mr. and Mrs. Bill Currie.

Families tie for title

When votes cast by members of the Pelham United Methodist Church were counted, there was a tie for the Family of the Year title.

One of the couples named has been active in the church for many years while the others jumped feet first into church life when they arrived in the community several years ago.

Between them, former Pelham Mayor Paul Yeager and his wife Willie have held most of the major offices in the church. Yeager was Chairman of the Administrative Board for many years. And now Dover and Bill Currie are taking their turn at filling some of those same responsibilities.

The younger couple is serving in a number of areas, but Mrs. Currie's major responsibility is church treasurer and her husband's main role is that of lay leader.

A family night supper was held at the church last Sunday to honor the two couples and their families. This is the second year that the observance has been held.

Names of the two families selected for recognition will be added on the plaque which hangs in the church.

Towering tomatoes

With a jump and a stretch, Tommy Goolsby, 15, can almost reach the top of this eight-foot tomato plant. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Goolsby of Pelham, Tommy says keeping the dirt mounded around the roots, the stalks tied down and weeds out of the garden helped make this plant such a giant. Perfect attendance record rewarded

by David Moore

The word is dedication. The person it fits is Mrs. Ruby Grimes of Helena.

Mrs. Grimes, a member of Indian Springs First Baptist Church (formerly New Hope Baptist), holds the distinction of attending Sunday School for 624 consecutive Sundays--that figures out to be a total of 12 years without missing a day!

She was presented a 12-year pin at the church's service last Sunday by Hubert Joiner, Sunday School superintendent. She also received a special certificate of recognition, several letters and cards from church friends, a special poster made for her by church youth.

The congregation gave Mrs. Grimes a standing ovation after the presentation.

A member of Indian Springs First Baptist Church for 19 years, Mrs. Grimes has been active in preparing refreshments for Bible Schoolers for the past ten summers. She has also served as president of her Sunday School class for ten years.

Even at age 67, Ruby Grimes appears to be still going strong. Currently she is involved with the church's outreach program for the elderly, sick and shut-ins.

According to her daughter, Willadean Liner, Mrs. Grimes says she is taking life a year at a time, and the Lord willing, she'll make her record 13 years of perfect attendance next August.

Mrs. Grimes, who has lived at her same residence in Helena for 34 years, is the widow of Murphy Grimes. She has nine children, 13 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Michael W. Worley, Laura L. Worley, Hugh H. Johnson and Gwendolyn L. Johnson, Plaintiffs,
vs.
Certain land and John P. Phelan, et als,
Defendants.

In the Circuit Court of Shelby County, Alabama
Civil Action No. CV-79-231 (E)

TO: The following described land: The S½ of the SE¼ of NW¼ of Section 5, Township 24, Range 14 East, Shelby County, Alabama; and John P. Phelan, Mrs. Ella Arnslow, L.A. Callaway and W.T. Black, or, if deceased, their heirs or devisees, and all parties who, unknown to plaintiffs claim an interest in or to the above described property.

Take notice that Michael W. Worley, Laura L. Worley, Hugh H. Johnson and Gwendolyn L. Johnson, have this day filed their verified complaint in said Court against the above named defendants and against any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, encumbrance upon the above described real estate or any part thereof or interest therein, and against all other persons, and against said lands for the purpose of establishing the title of said lands in the said Michael W. Worley, Laura L. Worley, Hugh H. Johnson and Gwendolyn L. Johnson and to clear up all doubts and disputes concerning the same and that said suit is now pending in said Court.

Plaintiffs allege in said complaint that the title to said lands stands in the name of the plantiffs on the records in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, and said complaint further alleges that plaintiffs claim title to said lands through and by virtue of deeds dated October 8, 1918, recorded in Deed Book 64, Page 398; dated May 29, 1926, recorded in Deed Book 80, Page 412; dated August 26, 1939, recorded in Deed Book 106, Page 473; dated November 24, 1944, recorded in Deed Book 119, Page 301; dated August 16, 1969, recorded in Deed Book 259, Page 141; dated August 25, 1976 recorded in Deed Book 302, Page 232; dated August 25, 1976, recorded in Deed Book 302, Page 233; and dated March 3, 1977, recorded in Deed Book 304, Page 181, all in the Probate Office of Shelby County, Alabama; that during the time of plaintiffs' ownership, they have been in actual, peaceable, adverse possession of said lands claiming to own the same, and that title to said lands has stood in plaintiffs' names on the records in the Office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, for more than ten years prior to this date. The plaintiffs and their predecessors in title have assessed said real estate in the Office of the Tax Assessor of Shelby County, Alabama, and paid the taxes on said real estate for each year; and that no one else has paid the taxes on said real estate for said period of time except the plaintiffs and their predecessors in title and that no one has been in possession of said lands or any part thereof since 1939, except the plaintiffs and their predecessors in title.

Plaintiffs further allege in said complaint that after making diligent search and inquiry, they were unable to locate John P. Phelan, Mrs. Ella Arnslow, L.A. Callaway and W.T. Black to determine whether or not they are living or dead, and if living, what their ages and addresses are at the present time, and if deceased, the names, ages and addresses of their heirs or devisees, and that the same are unknown to plaintiffs, and that the names, ages and addresses of any other parties who, unknown to plaintiffs, may claim an interest in or to the above described property, are unknown.

It is, therefore, ordered by the undersigned Clerk that publication of this notice be made in the Shelby County Reporter, a newspaper published and having a general circulation in Shelby County, Alabama, once a week for four consecutive weeks, and that all those to whom this notice is addressed and any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, or lien or encumbrance upon, the above described real estate, or any part thereof, or any interest therein, be and they are hereby required to plead, answer or otherwise defend the complaint in this cause within the time required by law, and not later than October 1, 1979.

It is further ordered that a copy of this notice certified by the undersigned Clerk as being correct, shall also be recorded as a lis pendens in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama.

Further Per Gallon

by David Moore

One simple step everyone can take to improve gas mileage is to keep their tires inflated to the proper pressure. The natural law in affect here is that round things (amazingly enough) roll better than objects with flat sides on them.

Monroe Chance, who works at Pelham tire puts it this way: "It takes more effort for you to push a car with a flat tire than it does to push a car with good tires on it. Tires that are up will naturally roll better."

Substituting your car's engine for muscle power, you get the same thing. When your tires are not inflated properly it takes more effort for the engine to build up RPM's and move the car. The result is that you will burn more of that expensive liquid you pump in your tank at the service station.

According to Chance and other experts, badly worn tires also cut down on mileage because they are flimsy and tend to flop against the pavement, thus making the engine work harder and burn more gas.

"Radial tires would help mileage about 5%," Chance adds, but points out that you have to keep them in good shape, too.

Recommended tire pressures are stamped by the manufacturer on the sides of tires. Note your recommended pressure and make it a point to check your tires every few stops you make for gas.

As a result, your car will roll a little bit further on every tank of gas you buy. And at today's prices, every little bit helps us all.

Auto maintenance classes offered

Training sessions in how to perform maintenance on your automobile will be open to the general public.

Auto maintenance sessions will be held at the Columbiana Area Vocational School, Tuesday and Wednesday August 14 and 15. A third session may also be held on Monday, August 20. These sessions will be held from 8:00 to 10:30 a.m.

Lessons will include changing oil, filters, belts, hoses, antifreeze, tires, general maintenance, recognizing trouble noises, etc.

Call Marian Cotney, County Agent - Home Economics to make reservations at 669-6763. Enrollment will be limited.

Pelham Council decision

Liquor license denied

by David Moore

The applicant for a Pelham liquor license was left high and dry by the city council Monday night.

Returning after her request had been tabled at the last meeting three weeks ago, Connie Schultz presented the Pelham Council with a tentative floor plan for her proposed restuarant/lounge, along with a list of changes she said she would make to comply with the fire code.

Ms. Schultz's original request had been tabled until the fire department could inspect the location of the planned business located in the basement of the Green Valley Realty building at 2105 Old Montgomery Highway. PFD Lt. Terry Ray spent three days inspecting the facility and instructing Ms. Schultz on the changes needed for compliance with the fire code.

Ms. Schultz pointed out to the council that the establishment, to be called The Caller would not play loud music, would have a dress code in effect and not be a "hang-out for teenagers."

After a long whispering session among the three council members present, Mayor Burk Dunaway asked for comments from the floor.

Two negative and one positive comments were heard from residents of Indian Hills, as well as one motion from the floor for the license not to be granted. The Mayor said the council would not accept such motions from the floor.

Councilman Willard Payne, in the form of a motion not to grant a liquor license to Ms. Schultz, said he had heard noting but negative responses from area residents concerning the proposed restaurant/lounge.

Councilman Roy Jowers seconded the motion. Councilman Ray Hamilton abstained from voting, and Councilman John Tanner was absent. The request was defeated 2-0.

City Clerk Willie May Dennis announced that Roy Martin Construction Company had been awarded the bid for the second Pelham fire station. The bid was made at $126,000 with the provision that the new fire hall be built within 90 days.

Ed Craig of Helena addressed the council and visitors concerning the Shelby County Attention Home, of which he has been director since January.

Explaining that he was trying to make countians more aware of the LEPA (Law Enforcement Project Agency) funded program, Craig pointed out that giving attention to "troubled children" during their teens, often saved tax money that might have to be spent rehabilitating serious offenders in the future.

Craig invited everyone to visit the facilities located on Hwy. 26 south of Thompson High School.

A resident of Deer Springs asked the Mayor what the status of annexation was for that area into Pelham. Mayor Dunaway explained that the city was still waiting until after a new fire insurance rating inspection had been made.

The Mayor said the fire inspector was tentatively expected on August 13.

Chief D. O. Watson reported that Pelham police issued 300 citations for the month of July. The department investigated 26 accidents, four grand larcenies, five petty larcenies, four assaults, one burglary, six auto burglaries, and recovered one stolen auto and one stolen motorcycle.

Chief William Bryars reported that the fire department answered 52 alarms for the month of July. Thirty-six manhours were spent on 17 fire calls and 33 manhours were spent on 35 rescue calls. The department spent 96 manhours on drills and training.

Jefferson County takes Shelby County road

by Marcia M. Sears

The state legislature moved the Shelby County boundary line last month, and in so doing gave an unpaved road to Jefferson County.

The dirt road in question leads to a subdivision generally referred to as "Coshatt Subdivision" which is in Jefferson County. Residents of the subdivision had earlier requested the Shelby County Commission to pave the road, but because of budget problems, Shelby County was unable to do so.

So they asked the Jefferson County delegation to move the boundary line and take in the roadway. This is what was done, without local advertising or advance notice.

Probate Judge Tommy Snowden of Shelby County thinks it was not right to do this, and he had earlier protested to Jefferson County officials. The land on both sides of the road remains in Shelby County, where the Heatherwood subdivision is being developed.

Snowden notes that the Alabama constitution allows the movement of county boundaries by a two-thirds vote of both houses of the legislature, without notifying the people of either county involved.

He has since expressed the thought that "they" may try to take other land out of Shelby County and annex it to Jefferson. According to the constitution, boundaries may be changed, as long as 600 square miles remain in any county. Snowden pointed out to the Reporter that Shelby has 800 square miles, and if people are not watchful, outside forces may try to take another 200 square miles out of the county.

Registration held at Pelham High

Registration for all new students and old students of Pelham High School who did not register in the spring will be held on August 15, 16, and 17, between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Thompson Youth Football registers Aug. 15-17

Thompson Youth Football will hold late registration Saturday, August 11, from 10-4 at the Alabaster city park depot.

Thompson Youth Football has recently become affiliated with the Alabama Youth Football League, making the addition of four more teams a possibility.

Age and weight categories for teams are as follows: 6-7 year olds--65 pounds, 8 year olds--75 pounds, 9 year olds--85 pounds, 11 year olds--105 pounds.

The league announced that if 24 players sign up for the 14 year old--130 pounders, a team will be possible for that category, too.

Registration fees are $30 for the first child and $20 each for additional children from the same family. A $3 per child fee is charged for concession stand workers.

Beginning Friday, team members will be selling raffles for a 1979 Dodge D 100 pickup truck donated to the league by Car World of Pelham.

Home Decorating with

Becky

TEXTURE APPLIES TO MORE THAN JUST FABRIC

In making sure that you have a beautifully decorated home, it's important that you consider the impact of textures--and, although textures are often spoken of only in fabrics--the truth is that textures also apply to woods and walls and ALL the materials used in furnishing a home.

Oddly enough, many people forget about textures when they decorate their homes--yet, textures have a very important effect on the final appearance of a room.

For example, should a particular chair have a smooth, silky material or a rough, tweedy one? Should a chest have highly polished wood or a duller, open-grained wood? Should walls be smooth or have a textured material on them? Should the carpet be soft or shaggy?

These things should be considered. When people don't give enough consideration to textures (and many don't), they're often unhappy with their furnishings later without really knowing why.

Texture is a useful tool in making rooms more interesting and more beautiful, and we can help you use it. For decorating suggestions, and for any of your furnishing needs, stop in and see us.

Some surprises in store for fans

Football kicks off!!!

by Richard Crosby

Shelby County schools around the county began football practice in earnest Monday. The long awaited start of the 1979 season is now only three weeks away and from all indications this year should be another exciting one for football fans.

Shelby County High School got to work at 8 a.m. Monday along with Pelham, Montevallo, Calera, Vincent, Shelby Academy, Coosa Valley, Briarwood, and Thompson. Chelsea practices only in the evening during the first days of practice because many of the players have jobs.

The beginning of football practice brought some surprises also. The biggest was the presence of Arthur Johnson at Shelby County High School. The Calera native switched schools in the past two weeks after his parents decided to move to Shelby. At this time Johnson's parents are arranging for the moving of their mobile home to its new location.

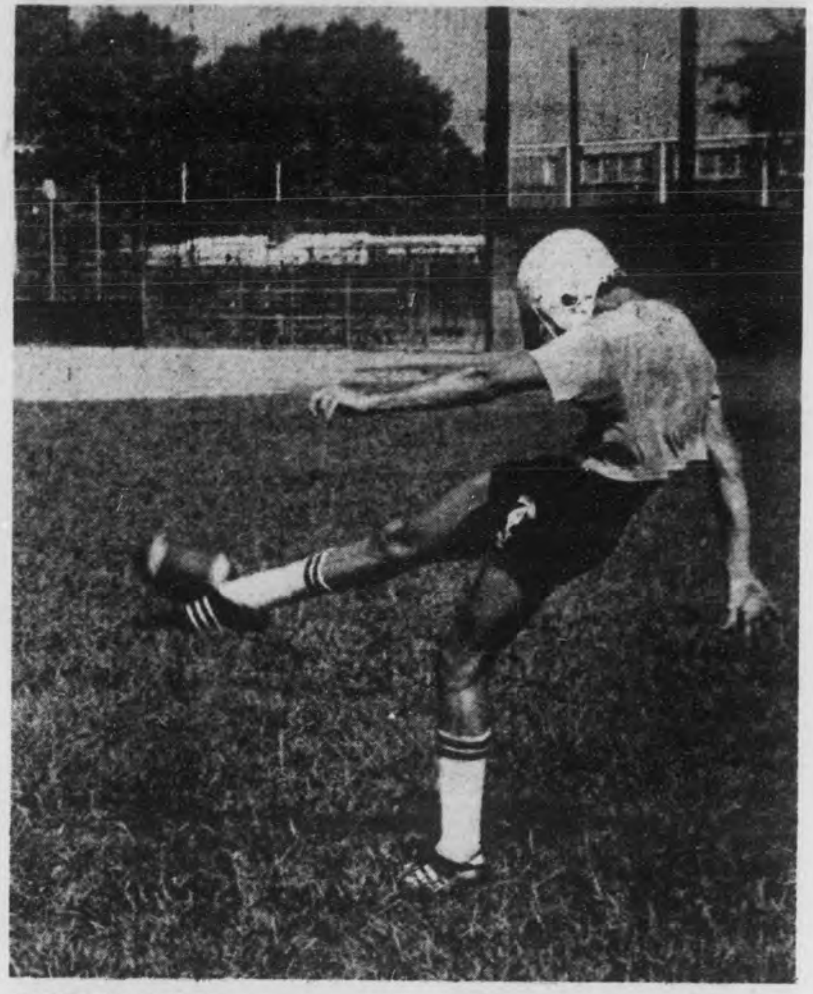
At Calera, Johnson starred on both offense and defense and fills a needed position for the Wildcats at linebacker. Johnson will be entering the ninth grade this fall.

At Montevallo, four new faces have taken to the field for the Bulldogs and all are from Shelby Academy. Last year's Shelby County Reporter Lineman of the Year, Jeff Hall along with Clay Cardone, Bo Winslett and Scott Lightfoot made the switch from private to public school.

Other news to the fields are the new coaches at Montevallo, Coosa Valley, Shelby Academy, Pelham and Calera. The new coaches at all schools except Calera have been announced in earlier issues. The change at Calera is the lack of a coach. Max Busby resigned his coaching duties at the school several weeks ago to pursue private interests. Busby will continue his teaching duties at Calera, according to principal Rick Cairns.

At Pelham, the new faces are not only that of new head coach Steve Rivers, but the new players who have moved in from out of the county and from other states. Each year Pelham experiences changes due to the many transient families that have to be uprooted every few years because of job transfers.

Next week we'll have an up-to-date report on what's happening where as athletes from around the county enter their second week of football practice.



SCHS kicker starts season

A Wildcat kicks off the 1979 football season Monday morning. SCHS like most of the other county schools started off the practice season bright and early Monday.

Blue Ladies fall short of state championship

Montevallo's Blue Ladies softball team placed sixth in the state in last weekend's State Softball Tournament in Montgomery. The Blue Ladies won three games and lost two in a quest for the state championship.

The tournament was played in Montgomery's Lagoon Softball Complex on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The Blue Ladies were the only team from Shelby County that played all three days.

SEPCO lost its first two games in the tourney, losing to the Home Oil 76'ers Friday night and the Disco Ladies of Huntsville Saturday morning.

The Justabouts whipped American Legion of Opelika Friday night, fell to John Crump Toyota Saturday morning and then lost again Saturday afternoon to the Bombers of Florence.

Engel Mortgage, a men's team which played in the men's state tournament held at the same time at Lagoon, lost to the Mean Machine of Fort Payne 1 to 11 Friday night and then lost Saturday morning 7 to 9 to Anniston Bud.

Montevallo's entry in the tournament started off Friday night whipping B & B of Anniston 5 to [illegible] Saturday afternoon the Ladies demolished the Huntsville Stars 22 to 0 in five innings. At eight Saturday night though, the luck faded from the Montevallo team as the Columbus Chargers knocked them from the winners bracket with a 7 to 1 win.

At Midnight Saturday, the Blue Ladies regrouped to whip Superior Roofing 11 to 0, but Sunday morning the nationally ranked Natural Light team ended the tournament for Coach G.D. Jones and his team with a 5 to 2 victory over the Blue Ladies.

Leading hitters for Montevallo in the tournament were Shirley Christemberry with a .705 average, Bed Besey at .600, Hildred Deese .500, Kathy Jones and Betsy Spears with .445 and Sonya Cook with a .400 average.

The tournament marked the end of another year for the Blue Ladies who post a 60 win-15 loss record for the season. Coach Jones said of the tournament, "We just didn't get the breaks. Against Natural Light we had two baserunners called out after they were hit on the legs with a hit ball. Both of those were in the same inning."

"As a team we batted .439 and that's good enough to win any tournament!"

Coach Jones also told the Reporter that his starting pitcher Nellie Nannini didn't play in the tournament due to dislocated fingers suffered in practice the night before the tournament.

For Shelby County teams, the state tournament marked another year of frustration and it will be next year until the teams can again fight for the elusive title of State Champion.

SEPCO dugout calm before loss

Members of SEPCO weren't very tense before the start of their Saturday morning game. The team lost two straight games in the state tournament and headed for Florida.

For Better Hunting & Fishing

by Earl Franklin Kennamer

Should you change fishing line left on your reel from last year? I always thought you should, but experts of DuPont, makers of Stren line, say that line which has been on a reel for many months is not necessarily weak. Their report: line deteriorates only with excessive heat and from exposure to ultra-violet light, such as leaving it out in the sun for days. DuPont officials say nylon monofilament lines absorb about eight percent water. If you have some old "set" or kinky line, simply take it off the reel, roll it on a stick or spool and soak it in water overnight. There's a good chance it will be limp and supple the next day and ready to replace on the reel. Here's something else to tuck away in the tackle box of your mind: lines are rated at "wet" strength, because they're wet when you fish with them. When dry, the tensile (test) strength of line is 10 to 15 percent less. Also, it's no secret that most monofilament lines are a little stronger, when new at least, than the listed test strength. Mono lines are limper when wet and will stretch considerably more then when dry. Keep this in mind: mono lines lose some of their strength--maybe 10 to 15 percent normally-at knot points. Therefore, I've always cut off cleanly about two or three feet of the lure end of the line each new fishing trip, because I changed lure after lure and this portion of the line gets the most exercise. Did you ever lose a fish with the line breaking 50 feet from the lure? Certainly not?

* * * * *

Earlier this year there was a big hullabaloo about East Lake in Birmingham. This comparatively small body of water--I don't recall the size but I would guess it's less than 40 acres--was doomed from the time it was constructed because every Tom, Dick and Harry was apparently free to fish the lake.

In the early 50's, the Jefferson county agent summoned me for an evaluation of the lake and of its finny population. I seine-checked the reproduction of bass and bluegills and found--as I remember--a poorly balanced bass population. There was no evidence of bass reproduction and the bream were badly overcrowded. I suggested partial poisoning with rotenone and restocking with 50 bass fingerlings per surface acre.

"But," I admonished the city official who accompanied me. "This is only a partial answer. This small lake is surrounded by several thousand homes and is located near schools and shopping areas. It cannot be managed properly because an unlimited numer of anglers will take out too many bass in the first year. I personally think you should limit angling to girl and boy scouts in the area and make sure their fishing is supervised. Or else stop all angling and declare the lake an aesthetic center of the park."

I don't know what course of action was taken, but earlier this year I heard the lake had been drained for complete renovation. Then the story erupted that divers decided to capture live large fish remaining in the drainage puddle at the upper end of the drain pipe in the dam and transport these fish to Lake Purdy, possible 25 miles or so away. The thought was commendable, but to me, this action was a waste and a costly expense.

The weather turned cold, so rescuers endured chilling hours of grasping for fish in what I'm sure was throughly muddied water. (I've been there many times in the past!) The expense of capturing and transporting the fish that were still alive to Lake Purdy was bound to be much more than the cost of growing fish to that size in a hatchery. The fish should have been removed, cleaned and eaten.

This may shake your faith, but stocking "adult" strange fish from one environment into an already established fish population is bound to bring on stress problems to the native fish population. You might get the same effect by dropping several hundred foreigners in a well established suburban home area. Like humans, fish establish a home territory, just as deer, or turkey, or even wild mice, which may live their entire life span on an area a few yards in size.

The trouble with many of us humans is that we can't leave well enough alone!

32 lb. catfish

Fred Mills of Pleasant Grove hauled this 32 pound catfish aboard his boat last week when the monster took the bait on his trot line. It is the biggest he's ever landed.

Harpersville couple makes haul

This is what this Harpersville couple calls having fun on a spring morning on Martin Lake. 139 fish were caught in all, by Cotton and Grace Sherrell of Harpersville and Sarah Bechtel and Sue Graham.

Fishingdom falsehoods

Many of the falsehoods about nature arose through ignorance, It is easy to blame natural occurences when better explanations are not available.

An example of this is the notion that toads cause warts.

They don't, but toads do secrete a slimy, smelly--and probably bad tasting--liquid that wards of potential predators.

It's easy to see how this could be associated with skin growths on youngsters who are fascinated with toads.

Nature's true oddities are just as fascinating as the fanciful tales.

Quite the opposite from the toad that doesn't cause warts is a small South American tree frog that can kill you simply by touching you.

Again, a skin secretion is to blame, only this time it's highly poisonous.

And then there is the doting mother cavefish of the midwest who carries her live young in her mouth and gills until they are four to five months old, only to later eat them if she has a chance.

Or bees which become intoxicated when collecting nectar from fermented fruit.

And raccoons which eat the same fruit and live high for a while.

All these and many more are the truthful oddities about nature which make the outdoor world so fascinating.

Speedway begins Saturday night racing

Shelby Speedway begins Saturday night racing this weekend with a full schedule of feature races for the fans. Track manager Jerry Handley told the Reporter that the change from Sunday afternoon to Saturday night should result in better racing conditions for the drivers and more comfortable weather for the crowd.

Since the beginning of the racetrack last year, the speedway has enjoyed success not only in the box office but on the track also. The addition of lights on the track will be another first for the county's newest recreation attraction.

The gates open at 5 p.m. with racing starting at 7 p.m. This Saturday at least three 25 lap feature races will be run. Persons with rain checks from the rained-out July 29th race will be admitted free this Saturday night only.

Columbiana Rec Rap

Just one more week of fun and excitement at the rec. I hope everyone has enjoyed the activities offered.

The movie last week was "Kid from Boreno" featuring the Little Rascals. The children really seemed to enjoy this one because they acted out the best parts.

Costumes are being made for the children for their Summer Showcase '79 on August the 16th. This event will be at 8 p.m. and will present alot of young talent. Friends are invited to attend this spectacular event.

Games played this week were softball, soccer, monopoly and relay games. Bingo winners were John Denny, Karl Williams, Frank Stevens and Ben Roberts. Congratulations to these people.

Everyone has enjoyed working on their parts for the showcase. Tumbling was practiced along with the songs and dances.

I hope to see everyone next week at the showcase. Until then... Susan Harris

Thompson cheerleaders attend national clinic

Cheerleaders at Thompson High School have been commended for their spirit-building abilities.

The Thompson varsity cheerleaders and their sponsor, Mrs. Freda Williams attended the National Cheerleaders Association clinic at the University of Tennessee, July 22-26.

While attending the camp, they were instructed in chants, cheers, pom pom routines, pyramids and gymnastics.

The Thompson squad received all superior ribbons, a spirit stick, and was chosen as one of the top ten squads out of 64 squads attending.

Falcons sign pitcher for 1980 squad

Brad Edlefsen, a hard-throwing righthander from Minneapolis, Minnesota, has signed a baseball scholarship with the University of Montevallo for the 1980 season.

The 6'5", 215-pound hurler joins the Falcons from the program at the University of Wisconsin--Madison. Edlefsen was there two years, lettering in 1978 with a 2-2 record, but appeared infrequently during the past season.

"I think a lot of people around here will be real impressed with Brad," remarked Montevallo coach Bob Riesener in discussing his latest signee. "This kid really throws hard, and he's got pretty good control. He's been highly recommended by a number of scouts, and he should be a very valuable member of our pitching staff next year."

Old courthouse restoration project gets boost with Gulf States' donation

The first phase of restoration work on the old Shelby County Courthouse has almost been completed. And the $15,000 check that the organization received last week started the wheels rolling to get the second phase of the project underway.

A cedar shingle roof like the original one on the 1850's building nearly covers the top of the building now, and the donation from the David Warner Foundation in Tuscaloosa will enable exterior renovation to get underway in the near future.

Commenting on the check, Society President Miriam Fowler said the local organization will now be able to apply for a second matching funds grant from the Department of the Interior.

The outside work, she explained, will consist of stripping off the white paint which now covers the building to expose the original brick. She noted that chemicals would be used rather than the usual sandblasting process so as not to damage the slave made brick.

As he presented the check from the foundation, Jack Warner, President and Chairman of the Board of Gulf States Paper Corporation said he believed in preserving and maintaining the heritage of the past through such projects as the courthouse restoration.

He emphasized that the contribution was well merited as Gulf States is a major land holder in the county.

The foundation, which was created in 1936 by Mr. and Mrs. H.D. Warner in memory of their son, David, supports various charitable, religious and educational endeavors.

Preservation advocate

Gulf States President Jack Warner presents a $15,000 check to Shelby County Historical Society president Miriam Fowler for the courthouse restoration project in Columbiana.

Music highlights cookout

Steak, homemade fix'uns and a bountiful supply of blue grass music is on tap for Saturday night when Shelby County Cattlemen and CowBelles get together for an annual field day.

The affair will begin at 5 p.m. at the Ludwig family's Matterhorn Farms on Hwy. 31 near Alabaster.

One of the entertaining features of the evening will be provided by Dr. Richard Karrasch of Sterrett. The audience will see how Karrasch's Border Collies perform the exacting task of herding sheep.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

"Houses that were once built from the ground up are going to be a lost breed," says Allen Lee, Housing America representative.

Housing America, a division of the Vindale Corporation, specializes in modular homes that are predicted to replace homes built from the ground up, because of rising material and construction costs.

Unlike the familiar "pre-fab" houses, Housing America homes are completely constructed inside the plant, then divided into modules and shipped.

The houses are less expensive than on-the-spot buildings, but Lee says it's because production costs are so low, not because the homes are of poorer quality.

In fact, Lee stresses that the homes are probably of higher quality than those built on the site. "At the Vindale plant, which can hold up to seven houses under construction at the same time, there are specialists in every phase of building, from flooring to roofing."

Other reasons Lee gives for the lower price of the Housing America homes include, no down time during production due to inclement weather, materials can be bought in large quantities, and labor can be supervised more closely at the plant than at on-site constructions.

Variety is no problem, either, Lee explains.

"We offer a number of house plans to choose from and the variations of each plan result in an unlimited selection of styles and plans."

Vindale Corporation builds their homes using the finest quality exterior materials, as well as beautiful indoor paneling, carpeting, bath and kitchen fixtures, and even fireplaces.

Wallpaper, tile, carpet, and countertops are available in a wide range of decorator colors and textures.

Lee also told the Reporter that most every plan is offered with several elevation levels, including split level, standard, and with a full basement.

Vindale homes are best known for their energy efficiency, he says.

Insulation in the homes is much better than the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development requires. Exteriors are formed from 2'x6' studs rather than the normal 2'x4's. Houses come with double insulated glass windows, energy efficient heat pumps (which heat and cool) and optional steel thermal doors to assure low energy bills.

Model homes are open for you to tour 9 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Monday-Saturday and from 1-5 p.m. Sunday. The models are located on Hwy. 31 So. in Pelham across from Moore-Handley.

Riverchase turmoil sparks hearings

by Bert Seaman

A hearing on the proposed termination of the contract of Riverchase teacher Odessa Jackson may have opened another hornet's nest at the school.

The hearing, which board members anticipated would be concluded in one day, was still going strong after a second full day of testimony, Tuesday.

Ruth Stephens, who recently resigned as assistant principal at the school, was questioned about rumors circulating around the school concerning a deal to get rid of eight unwanted teachers who had been transferred from Pelham.

Stephens admitted that she had heard the subject discussed by parents, students and teachers. Jackson's attorney, Troy Massey, also asked the former supervisor if she had any knowledge of the teachers' files which are now missing.

She denied knowing who took them, but indicated she had an idea who it was. On more than one occasion, she said she had observed people in her office when she arrived at school in the morning.

Riverchase principal Bobby Anderson, who recommended the termination of the contracts of Jackson and Willie Johnson, testified from 9:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. Monday.

He was also called in briefly the following day and reaffirmed his statement that her performance as a teacher was unsatisfactory.

Some testimony heard Tuesday afternoon also alleged that Jackson wasn't "warming" enough to the children.

The Board of Education's attorney Karl Harrison finished his presentation of the board's position Tuesday at noon.

During the afternoon session, the name of Pelham High's controversial former principal Dr. Ernest Douglas was brought up when Riverchase trustee Dick Mace was questioned.

Massey delved into Douglas' recommendation that the eight teachers be fired and asked Mace if he supported him. The Riverchase trustee chairman replied that he was simply going along with parents in the community who objected to the teachers being transferred to the new middle school.

The reasons given by Anderson for the termination of the 7th grade math teacher's contract were: 1. incompetence 2. neglect of duty 3. no participation in PTO or extra curricular activities 4. inadequate lesson plans after in-service assistance, individual evaluation and conferences.

In addtion to Dr. Anderson, those testifying for the board were: Assistant Superintendent of Education Vern Davis, Dr. Robert Leigh and Dr. John Hall, both of whom did evaluations of Jackson.

The first witness for Jackson was Dr. John Gibson from Alabama State University who heads the graduate program there and is an expert on evaluation techniques.

New SMH chief assumes duties

by David Moore

Shelby Memorial Hospital added the 445th employee to its staff this week: a new administrator. R. Roland Bradford moved into his office and assumed his duties as hospital administrator Monday morning.

During an interview with the Reporter, Bradford indicated that communication, both with his staff and the community at large was important to him. He also made a conscious effort to direct his words and thinking on the hospital in a positive direction.

"(Shelby Memorial Hospital) is a great place," Bradford said. "It's my job to make the community aware of the kind of institution they have, and to listen to complaints, to know problems exist and to correct them."

When asked if the now vacant office of public relations director would be filled, Bradford said he was under the impression that it probably would be and that he would be responsible for hiring the person.

"PR is not the right name," he said, going on to describe the position as one which "should help the administrator identify problem areas and keep lines of communication open so these problems can be solved to the satisfaction of everyone concerned."

The new administrator said that so far he was not aware of any problems at the hospital.

Bradford said it would take him a while to find out what the community wants the hospital to be, and added that he felt strongly about Shelby Memorial being a community hospital.

"I would not have taken the job if this wasn't a community hospital," the administrator said. "I have no interest in the selling of the hospital. I hope it's a dead issue."

Bradford's first step as administrator is to become involved in the day to day management of the hospital.

Monday morning he met the hospital's third shift as it concluded its work. During the day he met staff members working the first shift and said he would meet the evening shift before he left.

Bradford attended a meeting of head nurses Monday and said he was extremely impressed with their attitude toward patient care.

"People choose a hospital for service," Bradford said. "I put it on a personal basis. I want a hospital well staffed and equipped when and if I need it." He then applied those standards to the community as a whole.

Besides the day-to-day running of the hospital and keeping lines of communication open, Bradford explained that he was keenly interested in SMH's $7.5 million expansion program.

He said he enjoys working with architects and construction programs such as the work he did in 1972 as assistant to the president during the construction of Brookwood Medical Center. Bradford added that in the past he has built and subcontracted several houses himself.

The administrator indicated that he felt the hospital's new construction program would strengthen community feelings about SMH.

As for the hospital's Board of Directors, Bradford said he has had little contact with them thus far, but from the way in which they conducted his interview he is impressed with them and thinks they will be good to work with.

Buses ready to roll

by Bert Seaman

What have we been missing on the roads all summer? Why school buses, of course.

But in just two weeks, nearly 100 of the big yellow vehicles will be rumbling down the county's highways and biways, picking up children and transporting them to classes.

According to the Education Department's Transportation Supervisor William Carter, the county's 106 buses, eight of which are spares, are ready to roll.

Mentioning that school bus drivers will begin picking up their young charges around 7 a.m. in most areas, Carter advised motorists on the road at that hour to start being more alert.

He noted that youngsters in the Shelby Shores area have to be out even half an hour earlier in order to get to school on time.

When school begins August 27, Carter said that buses would be traveling the same routes. But he noted that some routes may be extended.

He is now in the process, Carter explained, of checking out 10 areas, mostly in new subdivisions, where the route may be varied somewhat.

County buys dozer after long debate

by Marcia M. Sears

To buy the tractor or not to buy the tractor?

The County Commission debated the question with hot words flying from the audience for two hours Monday. But the Commissioners were unanimous when they cast their vote in favor of buying a second tractor in three weeks for the county landfill operations.

The Joe Money firm in Birmingham was low bidder on the second tractor (also called a dozer) just as it had been on the first.

Other companies that entered bids were Thompson Tractor Company and Tractor & Equipment Co.

Money's bid was in the amount of $93,125, less $7,000 for trade-ins on two pieces of old machinery, making the cost to the county of $86,125.

A trade-in of about $5,000 for the county's old bulldozer was offered from all companies as part of their bids. Commissioner Ned Bearden said, "If three different companies come so close on the bid on that old bulldozer, and only offer around $5,000, then it must not be worth much of anything. I would have thought it would be worth more than that in scrap." It is currently in use.

Sherman Holland, Jr., an Alabaster automobile dealer had indicated he would bid on a Caterpillar machine , but in the end did not submit a bid. However, he attended the Monday meeting and addressed the Commission at length on economics in general. He told the Commissioners they could not legally buy anything when they did not have the money on hand to pay for it.

Holland and County Engineer James Ray had a heated exchange of words when Holland challenged Ray's figures on the costs of operating the landfills.

Ray also read some figures from a newspaper (not the Reporter) which he said were inaccurate and threw the Commission in a bad light. Ray said the newspaper had told him the Loss of miniatures creates loss of taxes

by Reporter Staff

Doing away with miniature liquor bottles will cost Shelby County about $20,000 a year.

This was the report made by Solly Perkins, county license inspector, to the County Commission Monday morning.

Perkins says that since the state law changed on July 1 which allows bars to pour mixed drinks from big bottles instead of miniatures, most of the bars in Shelby County have stopped buying miniatures.

The reason this cuts county revenue, is because 10 cents county tax used to be assessed for every miniature sold in the county, but there is not county tax on big bottles of liquor.

Perkins reported that only three of the county's lounges and bars have purchased miniatures this month. The 11 others have started pouring drinks from quart or fifth size bottles.

The cost of mixed drinks in the lounges has come down, Perkins indicated. When lounges were required to serve from miniatures the price per drink in the county was about $1.75 he said. The miniatures contain 1.6 ounces of liquor. With pouring from the big bottles, the price of each drink is about $1.50 and the quantity of liquor poured into the drink is about one to 1.3 ounces, he said.

The Commission asked the county attorney to investigate, agreeing with Perkins that it seemed unfair for the state to change a law that takes money away from the county without making any provisions for replacing that revenue.

Aging head wins award

Susan Tedford was recently selected the 1979 Employee of the Year by the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission area Agency on Aging. Mrs. Tedford has been the Coordinator of the Shelby County Program on Aging since October, 1978.

The Program on Aging provides a variety of services for the older residents of Shelby County, including transportation, senior centers and information and referral. The Birmingham Regional Planning Commission is the regional sponsor for the program.

Fleet's ready

School is just around the corner and the county's fleet of 98 school buses are ready to roll. Even though the buses are in good operating condition, there are eight additional backup buses just in case problems arise. The county's transportation vehicles will be traveling the same routes and children will be climbing aboard buses bearing the same number as those they rode last year.

Shelby County Republicans organize for coming elections

by David Moore

The Shelby County Republican Party began cranking up its machine at its organizational meeting Monday night. Twenty-seven people attended the two and a half hour meeting at Pelham City Hall.

County chairman Ray Ledbetter said he considered the turnout good since half of those attending were new residents to the county.

"I'm real optimistic about the new people. We've got 15 or 20 Republicans that'll always come, but we're hoping these new people will help us build," Ledbetter said after the meeting.

Ledbetter explained to the group that in respect to Presidential elections, Shelby County was one of the most Republican counties in the state. He pointed out, however, that until the Republicans filled some of the elected positions within the county, that this would not help too much.

The county chairman reported that the state executive committee, to which he is a delegate, voted recently in Guntersville that any presidential candidate receiving at least 15% of the votes will now receive a proportionate part of the state's 27 delegate votes.

Plans were made Monday night for another meeting to be held September 18 at 7:30 at the Pelham City Hall. That meeting will be to elect a new county executive committee and officers, and for planning campaigns for the coming elections.

At a fund raising dinner planned for October or November, the Shelby County Republican Party hopes to have a Presiden-aspirant as a speaker. If this is not possible, a state congressman will speak, Ledbetter said.

County budgets curtailed

All department heads who operate under the Shelby County Commission will be asked to submit detailed budgets this year.

The Commission, faced with financial problems, agreed Monday to ask the department heads to operate under the amount they had in their last budget.

The Commission will not know for a couple of weeks just how much the newly revised ad valorem taxes will bring into the county treasury, but predictions are on the pessimistic side.

The biggest unknown is what the elimination of taxes on business inventories will do the county's income. In the past, various taxes on industries and business accounted for a large part of the total revenue. But the legislature exempted or lowered many of these taxes a year ago and this will be the first time the results are felt.

The reappraisal of county property is expected to result in an increase, because many new buildings have been built in recent years and will be going on the tax rolls for the first time. But the county tax assessor and the County Commission do not foresee any major increase in income. Shelby County may fare better than other counties, because of the continued real estate development, however.

When the amount of income is known, the Commission can consider raising the ad valorem millage on a one-time basis, according to state law. In light of the county's debt and current high expenses, it is assumed the Commission will raise the millage.

McMillan addresses UM grads

Stay in Alabama, Lt. Gov. George McMillian told University of Montevallo's Summer Commencement degree candidates Friday night.

"Continue to live in Alabama, or at least in the Southeast," he said. "There is much to be said for our Southern heritage."

He said he doubted the accuracy of a recent Alabama Development Office report that predicted slow growth for the Birmingham area and for Alabama during the next 20 years compared to other so-called Sunbelt states. "I doubt the ability of anyone to measure and predict what will happen," McMillan said. "The human factor is the unpredictable factor."

The Alabama lieutenant governor predicted unprecedented growth for the state that could result from changing leadership in state government--the human factor.

"You'll have a unique opportunity and a real responsibility to stay here and help shape that growth," he added.

McMillan also told the 176 degree candidates, including 115 graduate level degree candidates, that they should be involved in government. "At least be an education participant in the electoral process.

He also urged them to be mindful of two characteristics they should have as educated persons: respect for the complexities of decisions and a problem-solving attitude.

Abex workers strike

The strike by members of the United Steel Workers at the Abex plant in Calera last week brought to three the number of strikes now afflicting Shelby County industries.

Members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers are striking at the Montevallo Westinghouse plant, as part of the nationwide Westinghouse strike.

The strike by members of the International Moulders Union at Brown Moulding in Montevallo is going into its fifth month.

United Steel Workers local president Carl Wooten told the Reporter that working conditions are the reason for the strike at Abex, not economic considerations.

JULIA MAE KELLY

Calcis student wins national scholarship

Julia May Kelly of Calcis was selected as the national winner of a scholarship contest sponsored by Gamma Phi Delta Sorority. She was selected from a field of contestants from throughout the United States.

Announcement of Miss Kelly's honor was made at the sorority's national convention held in Nassau, Bahama Islands the first week of August.

Miss Kelly was valedictorian of her graduating class at Vincent High School this May.

She was sponsored by the Alpha Phi Chapter of the sorority, and is the second national scholarship winner from Shelby County. Miss Roxanne Rutledge of Montevallo won the honor in 1972.

Alpha Pi Chapter was represented at the convention by Niola Huff, Kathlyn Boyd, Onnie D. Fluker, Junnie W. Craig and Addie T. Lacey. The Rev. G.D. Craig, Mrs. Craig's husband, accompanied the group.

Mrs. Niola Huff is Basileus of Alpha Pi Chapter in Montevallo.

Record set in land case

A land condemnation case that was settled Tuesday prior to being tried has resulted in the largest cash award ever made in Shelby County.

Harbert Equitable Joint Venture received $482,500 for 31.2 acres of land needed for the I-65 project east of Riverchase along Valleydale Road.

The state's first offer for the land had been $70,000. But the probate award was for $560,000, and the state appealed the case.

In his ruling this week, Judge James Sharbutt also ordered the plantiff to pay accrued interest on the $482,500. It would run from January 1977 when the probate award was made to the present date.

figures came from an interview with Holland.

At this point, Commission J. Alph Lowe asked Holland, "Why are you trying to cut the Commission so much?"

Holland responded, "Do you think I am?" and then denied that that was his intention.

When the atmosphere cooled down, solid waste supervisor Carlton Franks said he still forsees that the new fee system at the landfills will bring in at least $100,000 the first year of operation.

It was on this estimate that the County Commissioners went ahead with plans to purchase the new dozer. Two other strong arguments favored the purchase.

As Jimmie "Jake" Morris pointed out, "The law requires tractors at landfills."

The other factor was the continuing high cost of repairing the old equipment. Engineer Ray says the undercarriage of the 1956 dozer the county is using "is in terrible shape. You'll spend more in parts than the payments on a new one." To rent a dozer of suitable size would cost $4,000 to $5,000 per month, Ray said.

Franks told the story that when two inspectors from the State Health Department arrived to inspect the Westover landfill, they found the dozer operator having to drive in circles to compact the trash, because only high gear would operate on the ancient machine. The gears were repaired in a short time by county highway maintenance men, but only by taking old parts from a broken down machine Ray is saving for that purpose.

Vandiver-Sterrett men request night deputy

by Marcia M. Sears

Marion Watson and Pat Bailey from Sterrett appeared at the County Commission meeting Monday asking for more police protection in the Vandiver-Sterrett area.

Their request was accompanied by petitions with 105 signatures.

Watson said it took almost an hour to get a deputy the other night because he had to come from Alabaster.

Commission Chairman Tommy Snowden said the Commission could do nothing about the way the sheriff assigned his staff.

Watson said he had first presented his petitions to the sheriff, but was told the Commission had let five of his men go, so there was no way he could give more protection in the Vandiver-Sterrett area. Watson quoted the sheriff as saying there is only one deputy on duty after midnight in the entire county.

Commissioner J.A. Lowe told Watson that the five persons dropped were former CETA workers, and the government grant for their salaries ran out in January. The county had paid them for several months, but finally could no longer afford them.

Of those five, Lowe told Watson, four were matrons. Because of the drop in matrons, the sheriff had arranged with Jefferson County to handle women prisoners, so there was not as much need for matrons any more.

Commissioner Jake Morris pointed out the sheriff has 39 persons on the payroll.

Watson and Bailey agreed that there seemed to be enough protection in their area during daylight hours, but requested the Commission to use its influence in persuading the sheriff to assign more men to the night shift.

Leaks in jail roof lead to county lawsuit

Continued leaks in the roof of the $2 million Shelby County jail have inspired a lawsuit this month.

The Shelby County Commission filed a suit against the contractor of the jail, Conner Brothers Construction Company of Auburn. The jail was turned over to the county last September with one year's grace period for correcting minor problems.

Repeated attempts have been made by the Commission through the Alabaster architectural firm of Dampier and Harris to force Conner Brothers to repair the roof and to improve the locking of doors during the year. The contractors have made repairs during the year, but the roof continues to leak in various places according to the Sheriff.

County payscale leads to discontent; some beginners earn $300; others $507

by Marcia M. Sears

Many Shelby County deputies earn $596 every two weeks.

Matrons in the sheriff's department earn $476 every two weeks.

Most office help in the courthouse earns $362 every two weeks.

Men with several years of experience in the maintenance division of the county highway department earn salaries in the $350 to $370 range. Engineers in the highway department earn about $473-485, and a beginning engineer takes home just $362.

Sometimes there are very small differences in the training and experience of the persons who fill the various jobs in county government.

Salaries in the sheriff's department, as everyone must know by now, were put at their present level, not by the county government, but by the county's legislative delegation, when they tied salaries to those of state troopers several years ago.

The County Commission protested the action, even taking it to the Alabam Supreme Court on the basis that the county could not afford such salaries. But the Court ruled the county was obligated to pay the salaries.

Although morale is usually high in the county highway department, the inequities in pay among county workers are beginning to take a toll on the department, which has won national awards as one of the best in the nation.

The salaries quoted above are the salaries that most of the persons in each category earn. Most deputies, for instance are in steps 5-7. A beginning deputy with no experience earns $507, but there are few in that category in Shelby County.

It does not help morale to know that starting salaries for matrons in the sheriff's department are $389 bi-weekly, but are $300 biweekly in the courthouse offices. Beginning engineers, starting at $362 biweekly, come in below any of the beginner salaries in the sheriff's departmment.

(The Reporter did not have time to run down the salaries for clerical workers in the court system. They are on salary schedules determined by the state, but they are also paid by the state, not the county.)

Editor's Note: This story was inspired by an anonymous letter to the editor received this week. The Reporter does not print unsigned letters, but on checking, we found that many of the complaints in the letter were true. A few quotes from that letter follow:

"Did you know that a clerk in the probate judge's office makes more than a highway department employee who has been with the county 20 or more years?

To me, this is sort of degrading, for a man who has spent the better part of his life, and who is skilled at his work to make less than a recently hired office clerk.

"And what is more, when a man retires now, no one is hired to replace him. (All this is due to the county's tight budget, they say). That leaves everybody left with a much larger work load."

Reader protests Pelham voting

Dear Editor:

You learn a lot by attending city council meetings and some of what you learn can be disturbing.

My husband and I try to catch meetings of Pelham council occasionally and we were at the August 7 session when a license to serve liquor at a restaurant planned for the Green Valley Building was denied.

Now I am about the least likely person in these parts to champion the cause of liquor. If every drop of the stuff were zapped from the face of the earth, I wouldn't miss it one bit. However, I did speak up in defense of the lady applying for the license because its denial seemed inconsistant, in view of the fact that a pouring license has already been granted in the city.

Some residents of our area (Indian Hills) expressed the opinion that a restaurant which served mixed drinks should not be located near a residential development. Personally, I consider this a moot point, because most homes there are high on those hills and far removed from the basement of the building in question.

Much more disturbing to me than the decision itself, however, was the manner in which it was reached. As was noted in David Moore's coverage of the meeting, two council members, not five, made the decision and this just doesn't seem right.

Pelham has been short one councilman for some months, ever since Leslie Todhunter resigned and moved to Alabaster. Councilman John Tanner was absent from the meeting, leaving three persons to ponder the fate of the request.

Then, when Willard Payne's motion to deny the license was brought to a vote, one councilman, Ray Hamilton, abstained. (Granted, after Payne and Roy Jowers had voted in favor of the motion, a negative vote would have been futile.) But it doesn't look good for two members of a five man body to make decisions that should reflect the thinking of the entire group.

City officials seem in no hurry to fill the vacancy on council. Mayor Burk Dunaway said after the meeting that an appointment will "probably" be made. But if this isn't done, Pelham will have a four-man council until city elections are held in late 1980.

In my opinion, this could lead to two less-than-satisfactory situations; it could give the mayor a lot of voting power in instances when the four members are split in their decisions and it could, at times when one member is absent, result in far-reaching decisions being made by only three persons. No matter how capable these persons may be, it just isn't a good idea.

Sincerely,
Nancy M. Duncan

Search-rescue efforts praised

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

My family has been living in the Chelsea area for approximately twelve years, and I have heard many pros and cons concerning the Shelby County Sheriff's Department. Now, we would like to express to the public our appreciation for the entire staff of our Sheriff's Department. We have been affiliated with many types of law enforcement agencies, and they are all good. However, in our opinion, the Shelby County Sheriff's Department is rated as one of the highest for their sympathy, and for the splendid job they do in their line of duty, as well as their thoughtfulness to human beings. During our tragedy of the past week, they worked faithfully around the clock, by ground force and by plane, in a continued search for our wife and mother who was missing. Department personnel also kept in close personal contact with the family during this time. We feel that if every resident of Shelby County would show our Sheriff's Department more appreciation, it would certainly help it to become an even greater department in serving the people of our county.

We also want to thank the Lay Lake Rescue Squad for every effort they put forth in working with the Sheriff's Department in this matter. We can truthfully say that they are tops in coming to the aid of anyone in their lines of duty. It matters not, rain or shine, they have no rainy days. Neither does the weather get too cold for them to perform their duties in helping people.

Our Chelsea Volunteer Fire Department, which has been organized approximately two years, has come a long way through the goodness of our volunteer firemen of the Chelsea community. They are always standing by, ready to render their services 24 hours a day, seven days a week. To them, also, we wish to express our appreciation.

We just praise the Lord for such a fine community as this in which we live in the Chelsea area, and for such a fine neighboring people, who have shown us so much thoughtfulness and concern, and who stood by us so faithfully. We thank them for their care and for the fine food that was brought into our home. A special thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Archie Norris, who chartered a helicopter to help in the search, and to Chief Deputy Jones and Investigator Reid Smith, who were assigned to head the investigation. We want to thank each and everyone for everything and every effort that was rendered unto us during this time of need. We also want to thank each and every church and every individual for every prayer that was prayed. We certainly know that God has heard and answered prayers in this situation.

We have learned that if a person is ever in need at any time, day or night, he can certainly call upon the Shelby County Sheriff's Department, the Lay Lake Rescue Squad, and this community for any assistance needed, and certainly we all have the privilege of calling upon the Lord at any hour.

Sincerely,
James A. Lee

Juror angered that others complain about low salaries

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

The members of our courts complain about the amount of money they make! What do you think about a juror who travels 128 miles for less than 1¢ per mile, my time is important too.

For driving 128 miles I get $1.00 car expense, nothing for meals. The minimum wage is $2.90 per hour. The minimum wage for that time is $17.46. They pay $10.00.

Mrs. Glenda Bird
Rt. 1, Box 41-A
Shelby, Alabama

EDITOR'S NOTE: Title II, Section 98, Code of Alabama 1940, authorizes jurors to receive .05 cents for each mile traveled going to and from court.

The Attorney General has interpreted this to mean for only one round trip no matter how many times the juror has to return to court.

Act 1205, Regular Session 1975, increased the amount of pay jurors receive to $10 for every day they are in court.

Court cases settled

One case tried in Circuit Court last week ended with a settlement on the second day of the trial and the jury found for the the defendant in another case that was heard.

A damages suit brought by Leonard M. King III and Robert Glenn Growder against John Kevin Peirce was brought to a conclusion when both parties dropped claims.

In another damages suit in which a horse owned by Earl Button kicked the plaintiff Ron Davenport and broke his leg, the jury ruled in favor of Burton.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

Moments I'd Like to Live Over: She had worried with mites for three summers...and that's a mighty long time to worry with anything...especially mites...so she built a fire in each hen nest and the nests caught the henhouse on fire and the henhouse caught the big house on fire and it took a dozen of us the better part of two hours to put the thing out before it burned her house down...I went back up to Mrs. John Johnson's house today and found the exact spot where the chicken house was...a little grassy spot between two houses that weren't there before...and though I looked for close to an hour, with my new specs all polished and shined, I didn't see a mite...

We broke his wing on the honeysuckle ditch behind the school...on the edge of Mr. Bruton Pitts' fields where he planted his cotton and corn and watermelons...and though we looked for the bobwhite every day for a whole winter, we didn't find him...and this is to tell Sid that I went back up there today...where there are only big new hoses and paved streets and a ditch as clean as a baby's leg...to take one more look for that bobwhite...but I didn't have any better luck than we had that winter over fifty years ago...

Some gink had written a book, a lot of books, about another gink who lived with the apes in some far off place...I guess that's why, on the old fence between Tinney Branch and Hub Gould's house on the curve, we'd play Tarzan...diving through the honeysuckle and swinging from the hickory saplings that had grown up through the vines...

I guess he had the prettiest plum trees around...three of 'em and all of 'em loaded with plums around the middle of July every summer...but somehow we never quite got brave enough to slip in Mr. Will Holcomb's side yard and get any...out on the Wilsonville road just this side of the wash-hole in Cates' pasture...

The tent meeting was in the side yard at the public school...under a big tent with chairs in rows all the way from the rostrum to the back of the tent...they came in the back way and marched up one aisle and down the other and left some money on the altar...I can still see them in their long white robes and white hoods, marching one behind the other in the hot August night...

It had rained all night and was still raining the next morning...a long, noisy shower that reached all the way from Granny's house on the hill to Walksie creek the other side of the Price house and the Bearden house and the rail road and the poor house and Uncle Hardie's house on the long hill...and though we didn't catch too many yellow catfish in the swift, muddy water, I can still taste that egg and cheese mixture Granny fixed for us...putting it between two cold biscuits....

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

Why is it, that when you're in a hurry, about a 1,000 more cars than usual seem to be on the highway?

I don't think I have ever seen as much traffic moving along Hwy. 31 as I did Friday night.

When I finally reached my driveway I only had about 30 minutes to dress and get to my son's college graduation so I bore down on the gas pedal.

Now there's only one blind spot on the long drive and just as I reached it so did my son coming from the other direction. Fortunately we were able to avoid a collision and I assured him I would be right along.

A frantic plea to "Hurry up!" were the first words I heard as I entered the house. Jumping in and out of the shower almost without getting wet, I dressed and was ready in record time and off we went.

We managed to arrive before the grand entrance, so while the rest of the family went to find a seat, I waited at the door of the auditorium to snap a picture.

Although my children have never been eager subjects, they've at least become resigned to being photographed. I certainly would not have expected any of them to be startled by a flash going off in their face.

However, my son must have been preoccupied as his turn came to enter the auditorium and walk down the aisle. He looked very solemn and dignified in the procession, but when I snapped his picture he dropped his program and his cap fell off.

I decided right then I had better dispense with the traditional receiving the diploma photo. It would have been difficult anyway since I couldn't find the rest of the family and had to sit in the balcony.

Returning to the lobby at the conclusion of the program I was greeted by the president of the university. When he remarked he hadn't known my son was graduating, my snappy comeback was, "It surprised us too!"

We both chuckled and he moved on. Of course, I hadn't meant we doubted my son's ability to finish college, but it had just seemed to take forever because of a stint in the army.

Other members of the faculty spoke as they passed by but I'm still wondering about the professor who carried his umbrella with him into the ceremony.

I don't remember the weather forecast that evening, but it must have been for rain. And maybe, like me, when he puts something down, he forgets about it.

We wound up the evening with a little celebration at home. It's funny about what memories will come back at such an occasion.

My children suddenly started talking about the mud log trucks they learned to make when we were having a basement dug under our old house.

The men who were doing the work used mules to carry the dirt out from under the house - I do remember that. But I'm sure I never saw a mud log truck.

Astounded that I couldn't remember anything so important, my son recounted how two of the workmen's boys had shown him and his sisters how to make the trucks from the gooey red clay mud.

Ah yes, as they say, those were the good old days. Probably nothing will ever equal the thrill of learning how to create a little truck out of nothing more than a clump of mud.

Shovel used again

Members of the building and finance committees participated in ground-breaking ceremonies at Vincent's Calvary Baptist Church Sunday. They are: Alph Lowe, Archie Heard, Gretchen Hinds, Tommy Garrett, Frances Elliott, Judge James Sharbutt, Jake Waller, Yvonne Clinkscales, Hal Stewart, Mae Smith, Virginia Sharbutt and Rev. Winston Brooks.

Calvary Baptist breaks ground

by Bert Seaman

Using the same shovel that turned over the first clump of earth 18 years ago, members of the Calvary Baptist Church in Vincent broke ground Sunday for a new sanctuary.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the shovel was presented to Judge James Sharbutt who is serving as finance chairman for the new construction.

Work on the 54 by 107 foot building is expected to begin in a few weeks and according to the church's pastor, Winston Brooks, it should be ready for occupancy in about six months.

The new sanctuary will seat approximately 350 people related building committee chairman Alph Lowe. He also pointed out that the congregation will be able to put up the building for $125,000 by donating their labor to the project.

There is now $22,000 in the building fund and $100,000 has been borrowed.

When the first sanctuary was built, Lowe's wife, Evelyn recalled that the women in the church brought food to the men who worked during the evening and sometimes into the early morning hours to put up the building.

There are 66 charter members of the church which first held services in a vacant theatre building. Forty three people have been added to the membership rolls of the church since Rev. Brooks assumed the pastorate, bringing the church membership to 265.

During the groundbreaking ceremony, Rev. Brooks mentioned that Mrs. Lowe's mother, Mrs. Myrtie Carter, is the oldest charter member; 87 year old Mrs. Daisy York is the oldest member and six year old Stacie Cox is the youngest member.

Some verses from Psalms 126 were read by Lowe during the brief observance and the congregation joined in singing Blest be the Tie that Binds, the hymn that was sung at the first groundbreaking.

Second time around

The congregation joined hands to sing Blest Be the Tie that Binds, the same hymn that was sung during the church's first groundbreaking ceremony 18 years earlier.

United Way sets high goal

The 1979-80 fund raising goal of the United Way of Jefferson, Shelby & Walker Counties is $8,071,729. The figure, up 11% from last year's goal of $7,229,000, is the highest goal ever set for the tri-county United Way.

In announcing the 1979-80 campaign goal, Mrs. Katherine McTyeire expressed confidence the goal would be met by stating, "In 56 years we have never failed to meet our goal. This year will make 57."

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"The Blessing of Hope"

The Bible is inspired of God and is able to prepare us to spend eternity with God in Heaven. All men have an appointment with death; from this appointment we cannot escape. The ratio is the same it has always been--one death for one life.

The following are dying words of infidels, who failed to prepare for eternity.

Ingersoll stated in 1899, "O, God, if there be a God, save my soul if I have a soul."

Voltaire stated in 1778, "I am abandoned by God and man. I will give you half of what I am worth if you will give me six months' life." When Dr. Frochin told him it could not be, Voltaire replied, "Then I shall go to hell, and you will go with me."

Gambetta said in 1882, "I am lost, and there is no use to deny it."

Hobbs observed in 1679, "I say again, if I had the whole world to dispose of, I would give it to live one day. I am about to take a leap in the dark."

Gibbon stated in 1794, "All is now lost, finally, irrevocably lost. All is dark and doubtful."

Thomas Paine said in 1809, "O, Lord, help me. O God, what have I done to suffer so much? What will become of me hereafter? Stay with me because I cannot bear to be left alone. Send even a child to play with me." The Bible Teaches, 1973.

Dear reader, only Christ can lead us to heaven. "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life; no one cometh unto the Father but by me." (John 14:6) To become a Christian you must hear the Word (Romans 10:17), believe (Hebrews 11:6), repent (Luke 13:3), confess (Matthew 10:32, 33), and be baptized in water for the remission of sins. (Acts 2:38; Acts 10:47, 48; Acts 22:16; Romans 6:3, 4; I Peter 3:21)

Retirement system available to Montevallo city employees

Montevallo city employees will have a retirement system available to them beginning October 1.

The city's governing body passed a resolution by unanimous vote Monday night, formally authorizing the city to participate in the Alabama State Retirement System. The program will go into effect beginning with the 1979-80 fiscal year, October 1.

Under the plan all full time municipal employees will contribute 5% of their monthly earnings into the system. This amount will be matched by the city. The city will contribute an additional $18 thousand to bring all current employees up to date.

In other action, the city council opened bids for a new sanitation department garbage truck. A contract for the new vehicle was awarded to Sherman Holland Ford of Alabaster. Cost of the new 20 cubic yard packer truck is $27,362.39. The city's present 10 year old truck is equipped with a 16 yard packer body.

City Clerk Don Hughes told council members that the present garbage truck will be kept by the city and converted to use by the street department in conjunction with the city's recently acquired leaf vacuum unit.

The new vehicle is expected to be delivered to the city within thirty days.

Other firms bidding on the new truck were Ingram Equipment Company, $26,949.80 and Summit Ford of Birmingham, $27,940. All three bids were for Ford chassis. The bid from Ingram Equipment Company was for a 1978 model. The successful bid from Sherman Holland Ford is for a 1979 model Ford chassis equipped with a Heil packer body.

Other discussion Monday night centered about a proposed ordinance to regulate parking on city streets surrounding the University of Montevallo campus. The ordinance, now being drafted, would permit property owners and residents facing streets near the campus to park on these streets but would prohibit all others from parking on these streets.

Mayor Ralph Sears questioned the constitutionality of such an ordinance, but was told that the city of Charlottesville, Virginia has such an ordinance and that its validity has been upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Sears said he would call a special meeting of the council to adopt the ordinance to enable the city to have the new regulations ready for the opening of the fall semester at UM.

After a discussion regarding the city's natural gas distribution system, council members authorized City Clerk Don Hughes to terminate the city's present contract with Control, Inc., as engineers for the system. They also authorized Hughes to begin a search for a new engineering firm.

An unusual way of fund raising recently crossed the Reporter's desk by way of a story from Chatawa, Mississippi, where the Sunshine Mountain Home for Special Children is being constructed by the Seventh Day Baptist Church.

Jack Hays, a minister of the denomination, focused public attention on the home when he decided to go on a diet and accept contributions from persons for every pound he lost.

So far he has collected $6700.

His weight had reached 435 pounds on September 24, 1978, but after 10 months on a diet of green vegetables and white meat, he had dropped to 232 pounds for a weight loss of 203 pounds.

He started on the diet when he could not find a belt big enough for his waistline, and someone told him to get a mule harness strap for a belt. "I told him I was stubborn, but I wasn't a mule," Hayes says.

The Home is for 25 special boys and girls, and 25 retired couples. The retired couples are to act as part-time adoptive grandparents for one special child.

Donations, as well as requests for the Hays diet can be addressed to Sunshine Mountain, P O Box 37, Chatawa, Miss. 39632.

Montevallo C of C changes meeting time

The August 9 luncheon meeting of the Montevallo Chamber of Commerce was so sparsely attended that the group decided to move its meetings back to evenings--the next one to be at 7:45 p.m. September 13 at the city hall.

The chamber then voted to endorse the recommendations their officers had made earlier that day regarding fraternity noise and parking abuses.

Stressing the "role of both good citizenship on the one hand and tolerance on the other," the Chamber proposed, first, to promote quarterly meetings with Chamber officers, the mayor and city council, University officials, and fraternity and sorority officers.

Second, an Annual Citizens' Banquet was proposed, to give an award to the best fraternal or sorority citizen for the past year.

Third and last, cooperative involvement in special days between the University and the city was urged.

The continuing efforts to attract a Green Front store to Montevallo were discussed, with the report that two more property owners had offered their land as potential sites.

A letter from Marty Everse, Brighthope Park director, was read, stating that a repetition of the Brighthope play was planned for 1980, with the cost expected to be $30,000.

Although the bulk of that is being picked up by UM, the Chamber decided to donate $200, and also take out ads in Birmingham newspapers promoting the event. Some concern was voiced over the park's failure to negotiate the check given as a contribution for the last event there, a bluegrass festival.

Girl Scout Council seeks new leaders

August is adult recruitment month for the Cahaba Girl Scout Council. Elaine Huckleberry, the Field Executive for this area, states that while there are Girl Scouts in our area many more girls are on the waiting list to join.

These girls cannot be a part of Girl Scouting because of the lack of adult volunteers. Women, men, college students, and senior citizens are needed to fill the positions of leaders, troop organizers and service area members. Some adults work directly with girls, others work with leaders and others with the community.

To be a Girl Scout volunteer you need not have special skills. You do need a belief in the Girl Scout program and a desire to help a girl grow and learn. Leaders must be at least 19 years of age.

Training by the Cahaba Council is available for every adult position. For example, the New Leader Training is a 12 hour course which covers Girl Scout history and program, suggestions on planning meetings, advice on working with girls and a sampling of crafts, songs and games. Upon completion a new leader has the tools necessary to begin the troop. Throughout the year the Council also offers specialized training in a wide range of subjects including outdoor skills, age level workshops, music and dance, troop camping and arts and crafts. Leaders also attend montly meetings to receive current information and ideas.

The Girl Scout program is based on the Promise and Law which includes a belief in God, service, citizenship, high ideals of character and conduct and an appreciation for others. This framework allows for flexibility needed to meet the changing times with compromising principle. To enable those who work to be active in Girl Scouting some troops are meeting in the evening or on Saturdays. Fathers are also joining in order to be involved with their daughters. College students find that working with a troop is excellent experience for careers in education, health and social services.

To be needed is a great feeling and the girls of Shelby County need willing adults to help with Girl Scouting. Those interested may contact the Cahaba Council office (323-4541), 3600 8th Avenue South, Birmingham, Al 35222.

Member honored

The committee from the Pelham United Methodist Church that planned the day to honor Miss Alice Butler stands with the longtime member. They are: Lily Powers, Fay Dunaway, Bonnie Sorrell, Clara Dunaway, Rev. David Wallace. Not pictured is Jean Pryor.

Pelham church member honored for service

"When I think of the Pelham United Methodist Church, I always think of Miss Alice, she's always been such a part of it."

That was just one of the tributes paid to 90 year old Alice Butler as members of the congregation gathered for a luncheon to honor her Sunday.

Among the gifts presented to the longtime member was a money tree from the Womens' Sunday School class and an autographed picture of Jim Nabors. The photograph of the famed Alabamian was presented by his cousin Pete Nabors who now belongs to the church.

Referring to the recognition being given Miss Alice, Nabors said, "From what I've heard about her, this should have happened long ago."

From the praise heaped upon her at the occasion, it was clear that the woman being honored had been an inspiration to the entire congregation.

Jean Pryor, who presided at the luncheon, remarked on the elderly woman's disposition. "She's one of the happiest people I've ever met," she said, adding, "She always has something good to say about anything you do."

Other accolades penned by members of the congregation and read by Pryor were: She has led more children to Christ than anyone I know - She is one of the best Christians I have ever met - She's a remarkable and great lady; her life has been an inspiration to us all.

After their home near Montevallo was blown away in a tornado, Miss Alice and her family moved to Pelham in 1909. "And I've been living in the same house ever since," she declared.

In addition to her church work, which included teaching both teenagers and adults, Miss Alice also worked for many years as a practice nurse.

Attention home turns understanding ears to problems of children needing supervision

by Lisa Sims

Criminal!

Juvenile deliquency is a problem in Shelby County as it is all over the nation, but there is a thin line separating delinquents from children who simply need special attention and care.

Imagine the terror felt by a child who runs from an unhappy home only to be turned in to a probation officer and labeled a criminal, or possibly thrown back into the same unhappy homelife.

The Shelby County Attention Home South of Alabaster serves juveniles who fall into the category of Children in Need of Supervison (CHINS).

According to District Judge Robert R. Armstrong, Jr., these children fall between the classifications of dependents and delinquents.

"Dependents are children who, for some reason, are just not being taken care of at home," Armstrong explains.

These children, he says, are usually placed in foster or group homes. If the parents are found to be incapable of caring for them, often the courts take away all parental rights and the children are put up for adoption.

"On the other hand, delinquents are those who have committed adult-type crimes and have done so repeatedly," Armstrong says.

CHINS, according to the judge, are usually referred to the county attention home by juvenile probation officers or by the Department of Pensions and Security. Usually, he adds, the courts have little or nothing to dowith these referrals, because children often go to the home willingly.

The attention home, supervised by houseparents, Bob and Claire Turberville, and director, Ed Craig, has been in existence for 18 months.

Turberville has a masters degree in Public Administration with emphasis in criminal justice. His wife has her masters in criminal justice.

Turberville says that people often confuse the terms "attention home" and "detention home." According to Turberville, detention homes are a juvenile "lock-up" while attention homes, like the Shelby County home, offer juveniles a home-like atmosphere where discipline and responsibility is taught.

The home's primary purpose is to prevent children from being further involved in the criminal justice system.

The county's attention home is located in region three, including Lowndes, Dallas, Bibb, Chilton, Perry, St. Clair, Blount and Walker Counties as well as Shelby.

The home is totally funded by federal grants, but Turberville stresses that donations and local involvement are necessary for the home to operate effectively.

Turberville says the type child the home takes in is a runaway or a child who refuses to go to school. Never, he stresses, do they get children who have committed serious violations.

The reason for this, he explains, is a clause in the juvenile code that requires CHINS and delinquents to be separated.

Youths at the attention home are those who need a cooling-off period, a place to get a different prospective of home life.

According to Mrs. Turberville, "It is imperative for the juvenile justice system to use the home's resources to alleviate juvenile crime and thereby curb future adult delinquency."

According to District Attorney William Hill, who was instrumental in the founding of the home, the home serves effectively three basic purposes established when the home was built.

"The home provides a safe place during a turbulent time in the child's life. It provides a daily, nutritional hot meal, and most of all, someone who listens and cares," Hill says.

There are at present two children in the home.

Certain land and John P. Phelan, et als,
Defendants.

In the Circuit Court of Shelby County, Alabama
Civil Action No. CV-79-231(E)

TO: The following described land: The S½ of the SE¼ of NW¼ of Section 5, Township 24, Range 14 East, Shelby County, Alabama; and John P. Phelan, Mrs. Ella Arnslow, L.A. Callaway and W.T. Black, or, if deceased, their heirs or devisees, and all parties who, unknown to plaintiffs claim an interest in or to the above described property.

Take notice that Michael W. Worley, Laura L. Worley, Hugh H. Johnson and Gwendolyn L. Worley, Laura L. Worley, Hugh H. Johnson and Gwendolyn L. Johnson and to clear up all doubts and disputes concerning the same and that said suit is now pending in said Court.

Plaintiffs allege in said complaint that the title to said lands stands in the name of the plantiffs on the records in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, and said complaint further alleges that plaintiffs claim title to said lands through and by virtue of deeds dated October 8, 1918, recorded in Deed Book 64, Page 398; dated May 29, 1926, recorded in Deed Book 80, Page 412; dated August 26, 1939, recorded in Deed Book 106, Page 473; dated November 24, 1944, recorded in Deed Book 119, Page 301; dated August 16, 1969, recorded in Deed Book 259, Page 141; dated August 25, 1976 recorded in Deed Book 302, Page 232; dated August 25, 1976, recorded in Deed Book 302, Page 233; and dated March 3, 1977, recorded in Deed Book 304, Page 181, all in the Probate Office of Shelby County, Alabama; that during the time of plaintiffs' ownership, they have been in actual, peaceable, adverse possession of said lands claiming to own the same, and that title to said lands has stood in plaintiffs' names on the records in the Office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, for more than ten years prior to this date. Plaintiffs further allege in said complaint that after making diligent search and inquiry, they were unable to locate John P. Phelan, Mrs. Ella Arnslow, L.A. Callaway and W.T. 9	0 - 16,190	16,191 - 25,250
10	0 - 17,640	17,641 - 27,510

Each Additional Family Member	$1,450	$2,260

Children from families whose income is at or below those shown are eligible for free meals, free milk and/or reduced-price meals. In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 percent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

They may do so by completing the application forms sent home with a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted any time during the school year.

To discourage the possibility of misrepresentation, the application forms contain a statement above the space for signature certifying that all information furnished in the application is true and correct. An additional statement is added to warn that the application is being made in connection with the receipt of Federal funds, that school officials may, for cause, verify the information in the application, and that deliberate misrepresentation of information may subject the applicant to prosecution under applicable State and criminal statutes.

In certain cases, foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has such children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, they should contact the school.

In the operation of child feeding programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, sex, color, or national origin.

Under the provison of the policy the school principal will review the applications and determine eligibility.

If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official he may wish to discuss it in more detail with that official. If a parent wishes to review the ruling further after discussing it with the school, he has a right to a fair hearing. This can be done by making a request either orally or in writing to Patricia Bulger or Charles A. Knowles whose address is P.O. Box 1007, Columbiana, AL 35051.

Hearing procedures are outlined in the policy.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if the family size changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals, free meals or milk if the family income falls at or below the level shown above.

A complete copy of the policy is on file in each school and in the office of the Shelby County Board of Education, where it may be reviewed by any interested party.

Bus donated

Helena Methodist Church donates funds to carry on work at King's Ranch

As he listened to Tom Owens tell about the needs at King's Ranch, Herman Whitfield didn't feel particularly impressed to make a donation.

However, on Monday the Helena Methodist layman presented a check for $1,500 to the Chelsea ranch which will go toward the construction of a shelter care facility.

Whitfield had a change of heart about helping the ranch for youngsters in need of a home a few days after Owens spoke at his church. Waking up around midnight and unable to get back to sleep, the Helena man said that he had the feeling the Lord wanted him to raise money for the ranch.

And that's exactly what he set about doing. When the project was presented to the administrative board of Whitfield's church they accepted the challange and set a $1,000 goal.

Everyone "beat the bushes," Whitfield reported. He related that his grandson even robbed his piggy bank of $2 to give to the fund raising drive.

The shelter care facility where the funds will be used is entirely separate from the ranch home where Owens and his wife literally fulfill the role of parents to the youngsters who come to live with them.

DPS workers say that a shelter care facility is desperately needed for youngsters who have to be removed from their homes and need temporary care.

Such a facility was started at King's Ranch last year and Owens and his wife Linda are anxious for the building to be completed. But even with the recent donation, Owens said that another $20,000 is needed to complete the home which will accomodate 10 youngsters.

"We'll accept any kind of donation," Owens said. The plumbing and concrete work in the new building were donated as well as all the doors and windows. "And we're also being given beds," Owens added.

Mentioning other gifts to the ranch, Owens said there are now six horses for the family to ride. He also noted that the Helena United Methodist Church had thrown in their church bus along with the monetary donation.

Some individuals have given us cars, Owens remarked. Even those that won't run can be sold for junk, he explained.

Speeding is Montevallo's top offense

Speeding zoomed back to the top of the list last month as the most frequent cause for arrests in Montevallo.

During June's reporting period more arrests were made for issuing worthless checks than for any other offense, including traffic violations.

For July, speeding topped the list with 21 arrests. Issuing worthless checks was tied for second with driving while intoxicated. Seven arrests were made for each violation.

Six arrests were made for: driving without a license, failure to observe a stop sign and driving on the wrong side of the road. Three arrests were for reckless driving and disturbing the peace.

Two arrests were made for assault and battery, indecent exposure, driving with a suspended license, destroying private property, littering, improper passing, and driving while license is revoked. A variety of other violations resulted in single arrests.

These statistics were given Montevallo's City Council Monday night by Montevallo Police Chief Troy Kirkland.

Kirkland's monthly report for July also shows members of his department answered 249 complaint calls during July, made a total of 85 arrests and drove 8,603 miles while on patrol duty.

His report also shows that $7,265.50 was collected in fines and costs during the month's two municipal court sessions.

Committee seeks funds for Ryan Cemetery

Because of the increasing cost of maintaining the grounds and the rapid growth of the cemetery, a perpetual care fund is being established for Ryan's Cemetery on County Road 17.

The Ryan Cemetery Committee, which is composed of local citizens and members of Ryan Baptist Church, are asking for contributions from people who are interested in keeping up the appearance of the cemetery.

Without additional financial support, the committee says that the future upkeep of the cemetery will be in jeopardy. They note that donations are tax deductible and will only be used for this purpose.

Anyone who would like to make a donation or who wants further information may write: Ryan Cemetery Fund, Route 1, Box 90, Montevallo, Al 35115.

Information may also be obtained by contacting Monroe Goggins, 663-7362; Jack Brantley, 663-7044; Chester Lovelady, 665-1867; Ray Edwards, 665-7059 or Jerry Brantley, 663-7974.

Congressman tours county

"It is extremely important for a Congressman to stay in touch with the people he serves in Washington."

These are the words used by Congressman Richard Shelby in announcing a series of town meetings to be held next Tuesday in five Shelby County municipalities.

Shelby, who represents Shelby County and eleven other counties making up Alabama's Seventh Congressional Districts, says "I plan to share with the people of the Seventh District my thoughts on government and my actions in their behalf in Congress and I want them to share with me their feelings about what should be done in the future to meet the problems that confront us as a nation."

"Government is a two-way street and contact between citizens and those they elect to serve them must be maintained," he continued.

The meetings will be informal, according to Shelby's office, and are open to one and all.

Tuesday's meetings in Shelby County will begin with a 9 a.m. session in the Pelham City Hall. From Pelham the Congressman will move to Alabaster for a scheduled 10:30 a.m. meeting. Columbiana is next on the Tuesday agenda with a 2 p.m. session set for the Columbiana City Hall.

Calera area citizens are invited to a town meeting scheduled for 4 p.m. in the Calera City Hall. The day long series of meetings will conclude with a session in the Montevallo City Hall beginning at 5:30 p.m.

At each meeting Shelby and members of his staff will be available to discuss problems and opinions.

Grand jury indictments

After hearing testimony in 120 cases last week, the Shelby County grand jury returned 94 indictments.

The 18 jurors asked that first degree murder charges be brought against the man arrested in the shooting death of a Montevallo resident while he was on the job at Allied Products.

Two of the 83 felony indictments were on charges of assualt with intent to murder.

In their report, which was turned in on Friday, the grand jury also issued 17 forgery indictments, nine for burglary, eight for destruction of property in the Shelby County Jail, 23 for drug possession, two for child abuse, one for child molestation and four for carnal knowledge.

The jury report, signed by foreman Larry Woods, also stated that the panel had visited the Shelby County Jail and found it to be in excellent condition although understaffed.

Courthouse offices were also inspected and found to be in good condition with the exception of the tax assessor's office. The jurors described that office as satisfactory and noted that all the offices in the courthouse were overcrowded.

Reporter announces Six Flags winners

The Shelby County Reporter announces the winners of its Six Flags coloring contest which ran in the August 5 edition of the Sunday Special.

After shuffling through our stack of forty-four colorful entries several times, we finally picked the winners. The decision was tough.

Angelique McMillan of Calera, age 10, was chosen as grand winner. The deciding factor was the glitter she used for the border and exploding fireworks. Angelique wins eight (8) tickets to Six Flags over Georgia and a Six Flags t-shirt.

In alphabetical order, the four semifinalists are Heather Anderson of Pelham, age 5, Eric Bearden of Montevallo, age 9, Terence Troy Jews of Vincent, age 11, and Jamie White of Montevallo, age 9.

The semifinalists will each receive four (4) tickets to Six Flags.

Congratulations to these winners. Prizes will be mailed soon from Six Flags.

Have you ever noticed how much "running around" driving you do in your car?

First, you drive Johnny and Mary to school. Later there's a meeting at the church or garden club. Then you realize you missed the mailman and have to take some bills to the post office. That evening you have to "run" down to the store because everyone wants spaghetti and you're out of tomato sauce.

And every time you crank the car you can almost hear it sucking down that expensive gasoline.

Now think how far a little planning would go toward combining some of those trips and saving you gasoline.

All it takes is a few moments to schedule your activities for the day which require driving. By spending a few moments organizing each day, by the end of the week you'll have saved a few dollars you would have otherwise pumped into the gas tank.

State treasurer raises earnings with new collection set-up

State Treasurer Annie Laurie Gunter announced last week that third quarter interest on State deposits have raised earnings for this year to a total so far of $32,723,280.34.

She anticipates a grand total for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1979, to be between thirty-five and forty million dollars. This compares with earnings in 1978 of some $22 million, and in 1977 a little more than $12 million. This year earnings on State deposits account for the second largest source of revenue for the State General Fund, she said.

She has arranged with the State Revenue Department to initiate a system whereby checks of $5,000.00 or more are mailed to a separate post office box and hand delivered to the Treasurer's office the same day. Local banks pick up this money the same afternoon, thereby making the money available for the state's use the next morning.

She added, "We have also initiated one day courier service for our bank deposits in the larger, more active banks, such as Tuscaloosa, Mobile, Dothan, Gadsden, Anniston, etc., because we found the mail takes two days to reach these cities, thereby delaying the availability of the money for investment. These two improvements, plus the purchase of a piece of badly needed check processing equipment, have had a great impact on the large increase in this year's earnings."

Editor upheld in libel case

by Bert Seaman

"Not guilty," was the verdict of a jury after it considered the evidence presented at the trial of a Shelby County newspaperman who had been accused of libel.

While the matter of how much freedom the press should be given in the courtroom is still an issue, the libel trial of Shelby County newspaperman Needham Graham occurred 95 years ago.

According to an account of the event, given by Robert Edwards at the August fifth meeting of the county Historical Society, the newsman's trial was the result of an article he had written about Circuit Court Judge W.L. Whitlock.

His research had revealed, Edwards said, that the newsman's article had accused the Gadsden judge of napping in court and leaving the trial he was presiding over to visit a bar.

After the judge denied the charges and brought the suit against the newsman, Edwards told the audience that Judge Whitlock tried to have the trial set in Etowah County where he normally presided.

Unfolding other details of the event, the speaker said that Calhoun County was selected as a compromise site, and that 50 witnesses from Shelby County appeared in Graham's defense.

The "blistering" article that brought about the trial, Edwards related, appeared in the April 17, 1879 edition of the Shelby Sentinel of which Graham was editor.

An interesting sidelight turned up by his research, Edwards said, was an account of the editor's marriage a few months before his trial.

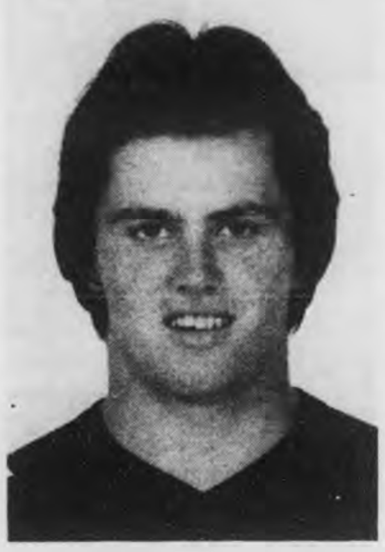
Listening to Edwards read the newspaper article which described the gala reception following the ceremony, the audience learned that it was held at the Columbiana residence of Probate Judge James T. Leeper. The home on Main Street is now owned by Harris M. "Bub" Gordon.

At the conclusion of Edwards' talk, Society members examined some items that have recently been donated for the museum to be established in the old Shelby County courthouse.

Among the memorabilia was a carbide light projector which was given by Mr. and mrs. B.T. Fitzhugh of Montevallo. Other items were an old pair of eyeglasses, a bag of clacker (used for trade in place of money), a pair of shoes and long stockings which had been worn by a small child and a pocket notebook containing the accounts of someone who had taken in washing.

The concluding portion of the meeting ws held in Helena's Joe Tucker Park. Society members were served refreshments and examined the old log cabin from north Alabama which is being reconstructed there.

Alabaster cornerback reports to Troy State



TIM EDMONDSON

Tim Edmondson a freshman corner back from Alabaster will be among the more than 150 candidates who report to Troy State University's pre-season football practice August 18.

The Trojans open their 1979 season at home September 8 against NAIA power Texas A & I, the team TSU defeated for the 1968 NAIA national title.

Troy State posted an 8-2 record last season and was ranked as high as fifth among NCAA Division II teams. The Trojans were pre-season favorites to win this year's Gulf South Conference championship in polls by conference coaches and sports information directors.

Solution sought for UM frats

Some 30 citizens met with Montevallo city and college officials last Thursday evening to discuss off campus student parking and noisy fraternity parties.

The parking situation is worst on Bloch, Plowman, and Moody Streets, and on Highland Avenue, apparently because these areas are closer to student hangouts than University parking lots.

UM president James Vickrey said that "we've never had every parking space on campus filled since I've been here," and there was general agreement that a lack of spaces was not the problem.

To encourage students to utilize available on-campus parking, a permit system was suggested whereby only city residents could purchase window stickers for $1.25 or so, and use them to park in the city. Guest stickers would be available for visitors. Reportedly, the constitutionality of this scheme was recently upheld by the US Supreme Court.

Notices of the new system would be put in the student newspaper at UM, and given out at registration. A $5 fine would be levied on violators.

A potential flaw in the ointment was pointed out as the fact that Montevallo does not have an ordinance permitting the arrest of those failing to pay parking tickets.

The objection that massive violations would be bound to occur weekly at the area's three religious facilities, and during Montevallo High School basketball games, was met by the suggestion that enforcement of the new proposal could be suspended for churchgoers and sports fans.

The noisy party problem occupied the bulk of the meeting's attention.

Apparently arising because of a lack of University policy on the control of fraternities when they were getting started several years ago, the problem is gradually yielding to corrective measures on the part of the present UM administration.

An interfraternity council is now being set up to provide a forum and a moderating influence. "Jawboning" sessions between University officials and fraternity officers were productive last year. A long-range plan calls for setting up a fraternity row out at the college lake, meanwhile providing an outlet by permitting some fraternity parties to be held there.

However, the problem has a long history, the fraternities are entrenched, and it is hard to deal with the problem quickly, Vickrey said.

The fact that the students' constitutional rights must be respected makes an easy solution more difficult, but the recent lowering of the drinking age to 19 makes an effective policy on student drinking virtually impossible.

Much of the meeting was devoted to tales of the outlandish and excessive behaviour the fraternities exhibited in years past, including the fall of 1978.

Mrs. Joanne McGaughy told of Lambda Chi Alpha parties where an estimated 500 attended, where kegs of beer were brought in by the pickup truckfull, where cars were so numerous that Moody Street and Hedgerow Drive were completely blocked, and some hedges destroyed. Unsanitary habits and poor drainage had turned the area into a mosquito haven, she said.

Mrs. McGaughy felt especially hurt because the Lambda Chi property was formerly in her family, and because her eldest son was a Lambda Chi at Birmingham Southern.

Bill Rotenberry assured Mrs. McGaughy that the Pi Kappa Phi's, whose house is near his, were much worse.

For one thing, they started making noise earlier, "at 2 or 3 p.m., when they sober up from the night before."

Rotenberry said that the noise is so loud that it's impossible to converse on his front porch (facing away from the frat house) or to listen to the radio or TV inside with the windows closed.

Turning on fans, and tuning his radio to a place between stations, and pretending the static was the soothing sea were also insufficient, Rotenberry said.

Both complained of strange noises, such as war whoops and dog bark imitations whenever the police would leave after warning the party to quiet down.

Even when the police completely shut down the party, it took another half hour for car doors to quit slamming, Rotenberry complained.

Rotenberry angrily read through an article that appeared in the Shelby County News last year, pointing out various inaccuracies and blaming it for much of the fraternity resurgence last fall.

The article generally left the impression that the problem was minor and already solved, and "immediately, things got much worse," said Rotenberry.

Mrs. Phoebe Wills, also a neighbor of the Pi Kappa's, objected to suspected immorality there, saying she had witnessed young ladies leaving there early in the morning.

Mrs. Wills did say, though, that of the many cars that block her driveway, at least some belong to churchgoers.

Although everyone agreed that there had been some encouraging progress made last spring, Rotenberry maintained that he was planning a lawsuit if the parties flared up again.

Vickrey repeated that the University stood ready to assist the town in enforcing its noice, public drinking, and littering ordinances. However, he warned that it might be a mistake to irritate the students to the point that they got politically active.

To give an additional ray of hope that last spring's successes might be repeated this fall, Councilman Herbie Milstead noted that the Lambda Chi Alpha's have a new advisor this fall, one of their former presidents and lifelong Montevallo Area resident, Tommy Arledge.

Arledge, known and respected by both sides, is in a unique position to end the controversy.

Adds to collection
Jessica Ann Eisenberg added to her trophy and ribbon collection when she participated in the regional 4-H Horse Show last week. She's shown with her pony Wild Turkey and the awards she won at the state show in Montgomery.

If new law takes effect

Outdoor license's cost doubled

It's going to cost you more to buy that new hunting and fishing license. The bill to increase the price of a hunting license to $10 and a fishing license to $6 is now before Governor Fob James and awaiting his signature.

The increase doubles the old price of $5 and $3 respectively and should allow the state to make some advances in not only the quanity of enforcement officers but also the improvement of resources and equipment.

Other prices also increase, including state management hunting licenses, and Non-resident hunting licenses.

The Alabama Wildlife Federation holds its annual convention in Birmingham this weekend. On Saturday, seminars will be held that are free to the public. All seminars start at 2 p.m. with Tom Mann talking about bass fishing tips, Jerry Hill of Harpersville on bowhunting tactics for deer hunting and Bill Wright on turkey hunting.

Saturday evening the Governor's Conservation Achievement Awards Banquet will be held. Conservation officer awards and the Big Buck awards will be presented at that time. The trophy deer killed last season will also be on display.

The AWF convention will be held at the Hyatt House. Tickets will be available for the banquet starting on Friday afternoon.

New coach added at Chelsea H.S.

Chelsea High School added another coach to its roster last week. Head coach Richard Conkle announced that Bob Statum was hired by the school to be head baseball coach, and assistant football and basketball coach.

Statum, 24, is a graduate of the University of Montevallo where he played baseball three years. Prior to UM, Statum played two years at Mississippi State. He is a graduate of Ensley High School in Birmingham where he played football, basketball and baseball for the Yellowjackets.

Statum, in addition to his coaching duties, will be teaching history. The addition of a third coach at Chelsea should lighten the load for coaches Conkle and Mike Sims who have been all alone for the past two years.

Montevallo plans celebration

Montevallo's Park and Recreation Department is sponsoring a Labor Day Celebration at the park. Director Ott Knight told the Reporter that among the activities will be a 12 team softball tournament, a space bounce, blue grass music, disco music and several sponsored events.

The Montevallo Fire Department will hold a greased watermelon contest. The Montevallo High School Athletic Boosters will be serving barbecue all day. The Montevallo High School Band will put on a performance.

There will also be an all day garage sale sponsored by the park. For information about reserving a space, call Ott Knight at 665-7143 or 665-2555. Knight indicated that more activities are on the drawing board and will be announced at a later date.

Racing resumes Friday at Birmingham track

Stock car racing returns to Birmingham International Raceway Friday night with a few extras. There will be the regular show, a feature and two heat races for the Modified Sportsman division, a feature and two heats for the Limited Sportsman cars, and feature races for the Bombers and Baby Grand division.

As an added attraction at no increase in admission, the rained-out portion of last week's show will be held. That will be an extra 20-lap feature for the Modified Sportsman and an extra 15 lapper for the Limited Sportsman. Then big races in all. All children under 12 will be admitted free. Gates open at 6:00, time trials at 7:00 and races at 8:00.

From regional horse show

4-H'ers bring home awards

Competition was tough, but members of the Shelby County 4-H Horse Club who took part in the regional show last week didn't come home empty handed.

Jessica Ann Eisenberg was awarded a blue ribbon in English Type Horses in Hand and then went on to win the Grand Championship in the event.

In the Hunter Type 14.2 and under class, the Shelby County equestrian won a 7th place ribbon.

Cindy Argo, the local horse club's other mounted exhibitor, copped a 4th place ribbon in English Pleasure Arabian Mares.

For thier demonstration on how to perform first aid on equine injuries, Pam Powers and Sandra LeFoy received a 6th place award.

4-H Horse Club members from 13 states participated in the regional event which was held in the coliseum in Jackson, Miss. There was a total of 1,400 entries.

Alabama not affected with shot restrictions

Alabama is not among some 29 states that will be affected by steel shot regulations for the 1979-80 waterfowl hunting season recently issued by the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, says the Alabama Environmental Quality Association.

"Lead poisoning of waterfowl has not been a problem in Alabama," according to Tim Cosby, with the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources' Law Enforcement Division. "We're not under federal control yet, but could come under it possible in the future. We haven't had a problem with lead deposits. The only concentration has been in the Mobile Delta area, where a large part of our hunting activity takes place."

The purpose in requiring waterfowl hunters to use steel shot, says AEQA, is to reduce the incidence of lead poisoning in waterfowl. According to the F & W Service, some 2 million waterfowl are poisoned each year after eating spent lead shot mistaken for seeds or grit. Steel shot is not toxic.

Alabama Game and Fish Division Director Charles Kelley, told AEQA that duck hunting

Alabaster league completes season

A successful church softball league just completed the season at Alabaster. Under the direction of Ellie Glasscox and Larry Simmons, 18 teams from Alabaster, Helena, Pelham and Indian Springs competed in the 20 game regular season schedule.

The season ended in a tie for the first place with both the 1st Assembly of God and 1st Baptist Church of Alabaster with identical records. 1st Assembly of God won the league title in a playoff game. Indian Springs Baptist took third place in the league title in a playoff game. Indian Springs Baptist took third place in the league and Siluria Baptist finished fourth.

After two rain-delays, the post season double-elimination tournament got under way. Siluria Baptist fought back through the loser's bracket to defeat 1st Baptist of Alabaster twice to capture the tournament title. Our Lady of the Valley Catholic Church took third place and Bryan Memorial finished fourth.

Pelham Methodist captured the Sportsmanship trophy for the year.

A ten team open league is now underway in Alabaster involving teams from Alabaster, Columbiana and Montevallo. The park board would like to thank all teams, sponsors and fans for their support, cooperation and sportsmanship displayed during the summer season.

Schedule held Sunday afternoon

Saturday night race rained out

The first Saturday night racing at Shelby Speedway will have to be done this Saturday night. Last Saturday the rains came and the race was rescheduled and run Sunday afternoon. Track Manager Jerry Handley told the Reporter that races will be run every Saturday night unless rained out and then they will be run the next afternoon.

So, despite having to wait an extra 12 hours, racing fans were treated to some of the best racing of the year. Six feature races were held in the afternoon sun with the Bomber Division giving the best show.

Steve Payton of Calera took first place in the first feature Bill Haggerty came in second with Tom Payton third, Mike Huntsinger fourth and Gary Franklin fifth.

In the second feature, Tom Payton took the checkered flag with Haggerty again taking second. Bobby Lucas of Alabaster came in third, Steve Payton fourth and The Alabama Logger (John Lucas) fifth.

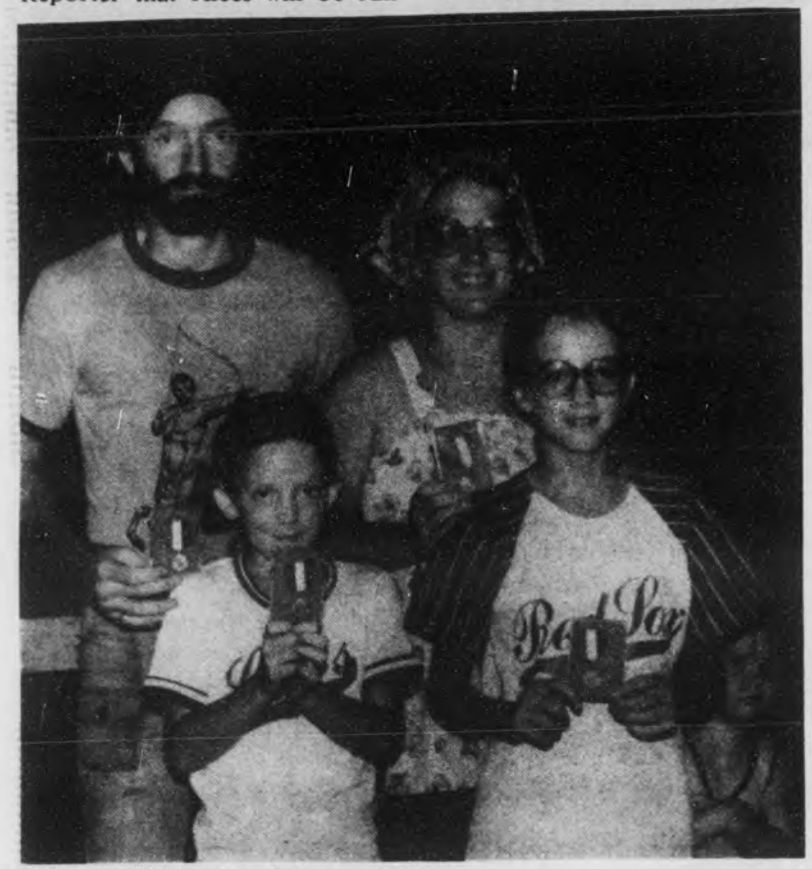
In the Modified feature races, Ronnie Gothard took first place in the first race. Gerald Harris placed second, Benny Pickett third, Paul Walden fourth and Mike Walden fifth.

Benny Pickett claimed first place in the second Modified feature. Gerald Harris again took a steady second with Gothard third, followed by Mike and Paul Walden.

Bennie Brasher of Calera took first place in the second feature of the buggy division. In the first race he couldn't get around Bobby Carter who took first in that race but second in the race which Brasher won. Dennis Majors took third in the first race while Jerry Carter placed third in the second.

One of the highest wrecks took place in the buggy warmups. Rod Henderson came out of the number two turn and somehow hit something that made the car go sailing. According to track officials who witnessed the crash, Henderson and car went about 20 feet into the air, turned a flip and landed upside down. Henderson walked away from the crash, fixes his racer and on the first lap of the first feature again thrilled the crowd with another spectacular feat. On the first lap he went out of control coming out of the number four turn-jumped a retaining mound in the pits-came out the other side-went around the number three and four turn-went out of control again and nailed the retaining wall for a second time but this time didn't drive away. The racer was as wrecked as Henderson must have felt and both retired for the day.

Races are scheduled this Saturday night with the gates opening at 5:30 and racing starting at 8 p.m.



Medallion winners

These members of the Creek Bowhunters won medallions in the club championship shoot held Saturday in pouring rain. The bowhunters are now preparing for the Annual Howard Hill Invitational Shoot which will be held August 25th and 26th at the range in Vincent.

Claiming club championship trophies during the Saturday shoot in Vincent were Pam Wood-women's, R.C. Pate-men's, Kyle Spates-youth boys, Jeff Spates-cub boys, and Paula Wood-girls. More than 100 members of the Creek Bowhunters Club attended the final members shoot of the year.

Chelsea football registration

Young footballers in Chelsea will be interested to know that they can still register for the fall season.

Three teams have been organized by the Chelsea Youth Club for youngsters 6-12 years old. The teams are broken down into 75, 85 and 105-pound categories.

Though practice has already started, registrations will be accepted up until September 1. Call Ann Smith at 678-6991 for more information.

Shot restrictions concentration has been primarily along the Tennessee River and the Mobile Delta area. Why hasn't lead poisoning been a problem in these concentrated hunting areas? "In the delta bottomland," explains Kelley, "when the shot hits the muck, it sinks out of reach of the duck." "With our farmland, the soft soil is replowed. So the shot is not available."

County teams busy in second week of football practice

Shelby County football is in its second week and teams have already put on the pads. With the additional equipment, a fan can get an idea what size of team their school will be fielding.

After looking at the various teams in the county, this observer picks Montevallo as one of the biggest if not the biggest. While Coach Richard Gilliam will play down the size of his Bulldogs, anyone can see from a distance that the team is one of the largest in several years.

Thompson also has good size but seems a little shorter and lighter than Montevallo. Pelham maybe the second largest team with quite a few 'heavies' on the field.

Calera is the same as last year - not to big but full of fight. Shelby Academy has a problem with numbers. There are right at 20 players out for football so far.

Shelby County has average size but makes up for that with quickness. Watch for some breakaway plays this fall.

Haven't had a look at Coosa Valley or Briarwood yet but expect to see them by the time you're reading this.

Chelsea has a few giants but mostly its a regular Hornet squad of tough footballers. Vincent might be the surprise of the season. A lot of familiar faces were seen on the field and that means the Jackets should be as good or better than last year.

Calera is holding its annual football camp this week at the school. Thompson was unable to attend Marion Institute this year because of scheduling conflicts so the Warriors are having dawn to dark practices.

If you get a chance, stop by your school and have a look-see. Then tell us your impression.

Better Hunting & Fishing

by Earl Franklin Kennamer

There is no better way to develop your boy or girl's recreational future than to get that youngster involved in fishing. After you're grown it's often difficult to pick up a rod and reel if you have never felt the pleasure of landing a mess of bream from a bluegill bed or eating a mess of fresh fish right after you've caught them.

Your local civic club could be the local sponsor for a youth fising club. For two years, according to July's Sport Fishing Institute Bulletin, a test program in encouraging youth fishing has proved successful. This program is nationally sponsored by the American Fishing Tackle Manufacturer's Association (AFTMA). Almost 200 new youth fishing clubs have been organized to date, involving more than 5,000 youngsters and adult leaders under the direction of AFTMA's Sport Fishing Educational Foundation.

Available from the national organization is a Leader's Kit for $11.50. The kit includes four sets of instructional material.

1. FISHING FUNDAMENTALS FOR BEGINNING ANGLERS. This is an instructor's manual for teaching casting and angling skills to youngsters, students and beginning adults. Picture sequences show casting techniques in detail, while photo captions underscore important teaching points and provide a checklist of key movements. Also included is instruction on equipment selection, basic concepts in fresh-and-saltwater angling, cleaning and caring for the catch, catch and release, cookery, safety, ecology and conservation, and guidelines on how to organize clinic and school instruction.

2.FISHING FUNDAMENTALS FOR BEGINNING ANGLERS. This is a specially prepared "take home" student's manual for study and use during practice. Like the instructor's guide, the student edition describes drills, games and contests for sharpening casting skills, and provides tips from the experts for improving fishing techniques.

3. LEADER'S GUIDE FOR ORGANIZING GROUP FISHING ACTIVITIES. This gives detailed description of all functions in getting fishing activity groups organized and out to the site. This material is especialy helpful in developing youth fishing clubs or in organizing a fishing activity as part of an ongoing youth recreational program. It provides complete information in such areas as how to get your fising program started, how to promote community support, raise funds and recruit members, how to organize a fishing derby and where to go for additional assistance.

4. ALL ABOUT FISHING EQUIPMENT. This is a ready-reference series of five booklets providing modern-day advances in rods, reels, lures, line and accessories. Information is thorough and complete yet easily understood by the novice angler.

If you order kits in quantity lots, there's a discount. If you buy 25 or more kits, the SFEF will give you a custom identification label of your new youth fishing organization. Just invent a name you would like to give your new youth fishing club!

You'll also receive every two months the National Youth Fishing Program newsletter, NEWS UPDATE. This publication prints tips on fishing, youth organization news, articles written by youngsters themselves and suggested contests and games.

In addition to all this, you as an adult instructor or member of your club's "Youth Fishing Committee," may select from films available appropriate movies to help teach the youngsters the fine points of good fishing, morphology of a fish, types of equipment to use in angling, casting fundamentals. For adult leaders there is a "Suggested Course Outline for Casting and Angling Instruction."

If there is a spark in your mind you or someone in your town or rural community would like to organize a youth fishing club, don't worry about local assistance. Your bankers, sporting goods store managers, agriculturally based farm and forestry agencies, etc. will help with prizes, funds for operation, food for a daily fishing derby lunch on a local pond or lake.

For more details on the Leader's Kit and the youth fishing program, write Robert Bluth at the AFTMA Sport Fishing Educational Foundation, c/o American Fishing Tackle Manufacturers Association, 2625 Clearbrook Drive, Arlington Heights, Illinois 60005.

New coaches in the county

New coaches on the Shelby County scene this year are Chelsea's Bob Statum, Pelham's Steve Rivers and Calera's Mark Lovett. All are new additions since last season. Another change in location only is David Bailey (was at Pelham, now with Montevallo). Another new coach in the county unavailable for the picture above was Montevallo's new Athletic Trainer Tony Berry. (photo by Richard Crosby)

"I bought two Caterpillar 518 skidders from Thompson for a number of reasons.

First, the machine. It's built to last longer. I'll get five years from these machines, where I could expect maybe three from other skidders around.

It'll outdo all others in the woods. I don't know another skidder to stay with it.

Second, because of the resale value. I'll get my money back on a Caterpillar. Look around at the used skidder prices. It's smart to buy a machine that'll be worth something when trade-in time comes.

And because of Thompson Tractor. Their branch in Opelika is important to me. I get any part in less than 24 hours. And their field service is there when I need it.

Looking at the whole picture, you just save money when you buy a Caterpillar 518 skidder with Thompson."

The second Inter-Community Night was held at the Recreation Building Thursday evening when fellow citizens from Vincent, Chelsea, Westover, Dunnavant, Sterrett, Wilsonville, and Harpersville joined in making the night a memorable one.

A talent show featuring Merle Meyers, gifted Ballet dancer and Gary Luttrell, a talented exponent of the Tap Dance, entertained the group.

Square dancing, picture show, and the ever popular Hokey-Pokey and Bunny Hop brought the crowd together in an hour of merriment followed by delectable iced lemonade and cake served with Barney Isbell and Bill Rabren in charge.

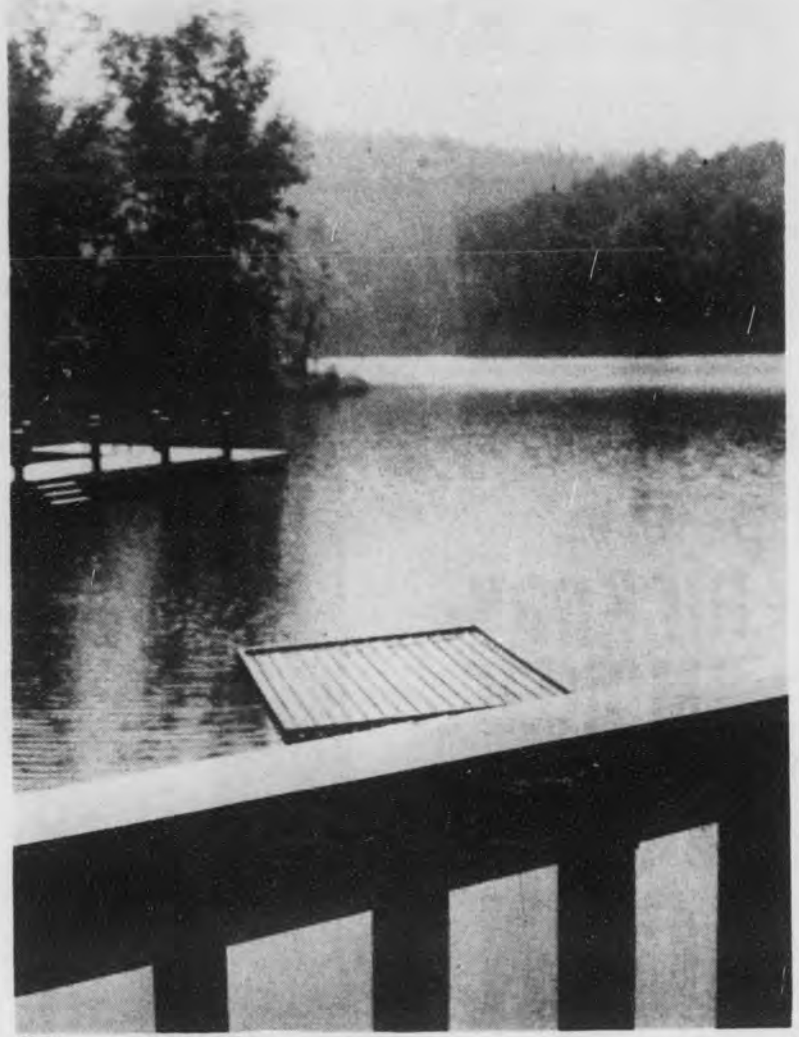
Scout camp launches program



View-ti-ful!

This beautiful view is of the 43-acre lake and pier at the new Girl Scout Program Center in Chelsea. Situated on 580 rolling, wooded acres, the camp was funded by Girl Scout cookie sales.

by Lisa Sims

Buzzzzzzz....your doorbell rings and you open the door to find a wee little beanie-topped girl, her arms full of cookies.

Girl Scout cookies, in five flavors--ever wonder where the proceeds from those edible sweets go?

In Shelby County and throughout the Cahaba Council of the Girl Scouts of America, money from cookie sales has been going into the construction of a new Girl Scout Camp and program center in Chelsea.

For years, the girls have sold cookies to make the new camp possible.

Called the KANAWAHALA PROGRAM CENTER, the camp is situated off Old Highway 280 behind Hargis Christian Retreat.

According to Edna Earl Blackburn of the Cahaba Council, the camp includes 580 acres of wooded land and a beautiful 43 acre lake.

Already, roads have been cut that go miles into the forest and around the lake.

Construction on a modern Ranger House complete with fireplace, kitchen, spiral staircase and sun deck, will be completed in a month to six weeks, Blackburn said.

The camp has its own water supply and system.

A sportsfield, softball-volleyball complex, will also be completed soon.

The first camp session is scheduled for August 13-17, which will be a week-long day camp, because barracks have not yet been constructed.

According to Blackburn, two units for sleeping campers will be constructed next.

A nature center and other program buildings are also part of planned expansion.

For now, Blackburn said, the girls will use the area as a primitive camp, doing alot of hiking, swimming and canoeing.

A pier and a bridge has been built to go out to an island in the lake.

Blackburn stresses that the camp will be an asset for the community as well.

"The area will be available for the public's use with a permit. We want Chelsea and the rest of the county to be able to enjoy it too," Blackburn said.

But ultimately, the camp and program center will belong to all those Brownies and Scouts who have rung countless doorbells and sold boxes and boxes of cookies.

Girl Scout cookie sales made this new Ranger House possible. The house is the first phase of construction at the Cahaba Council's Kanawahala Program Center in Chelsea. The first campers will attend August 13-17. (Photos by Sims)

Children need shots before school starts

The last days of August find parents rushing to buy school clothes and supplies for their children. But the County Health Service urges parents to remember to check their child's immunization record.

Shelby County Health Services Administrator Maxine Smith explains, "Alabama law requires that every child entering public schools for the first time must have a certificate of immunization when he or she registers. If a child does not have proof of immunization, that child cannot be enrolled in school."

Parents may obtain certificates of immunization from their family doctors, or from the Shelby County Health Department.

The required immunizations are three polio vaccines, four diptheria shots, and one for measles, mumps, and rubella.

Mrs. Smith adds, "Realizing that there is likely to be a last minute rush for immunizations, Shelby County has set up special immunization clinics at the Health Department office in Columbiana and at Pelham City Hall."

These clinics will be held on the first day of school, Aug. 27. 11:30 a.m. and 1:30-4 p.m. The Pelham Clinic will operate from 8:30-11:30 a.m. The pre-school immunizations will be free.

The Shelby County Health Department routinely holds immunization clinics each Thursday in Columbiana. Immunization clinics are held each Friday morning at the Alabaster City Hall, and each Friday afternoon at the Montevallo City Hall. All immunizations given at these clinics are free. Smith urges, "Parents should bring a record of immunizations previously given."

Health courses offered

From August to December, Brookwood Medical Center will once again offer a series of free health care courses to the public.

Included on the schedule are morning and evening classes on alcoholism, diabetes, digestive disease, emergency first aid measures, heart disease, mental health, nutrition and respiratory disease.

These courses, which have been met with huge success in the past, are designed to give participants a general understanding of common health problems and preventive measures helpful in caring for themselves and their families. In addition, the courses provide important guidance in recognizing when to seek professional help.

Classes are taught in the hospital auditorium by registered nurses, physicians and other health care specialists in each subject area.

Individuals interested in registering for the classes or receiving a course schedule should contact the public relations office at Brookwood, 877-1833.

Court reform urged

Senator Howell Heflin has called for uniformity in the federal court system.

Addressing the American Bar Association in Dallas, on August 13th, Senator Heflin told the Association that uniformity is the "pole star" of court reform. He said the federal courts could learn something from examining what the states have done in the past ten years to modernize and improve concepts of the administration of justice.

The Alabama Senator returns to Alabama on Tuesday, August 14th for a three-week series of town meetings with the public in 47 cities in 23 Alabama counties.

County students earn UA degrees

Six Shelby Countians were among the 1,076 students who were awarded degrees at the University of Alabama on Sunday.

They are: Joseph Allen Brady, Alabaster, Educational Sepcialist; Herman Dale Palmer, Calera, Bachelor of Arts; Randy Lee Humphries, Columbiana, Master of Business Administration; Lee Rollins Binion, Montevallo, Bachelor of Arts; Stephen Joseph Foley, Montevallo, Bachelor of Science; and John Thomas Murphy, Montevallo, Doctor of Philosophy.

One millionth car built

The one millionth railroad freight car built by Pullman Standard recently was completed in the company's Bessemer plant.

Pullman Standard built its first twelve freight cars for the American railroads in 1881.

The 1,000,000th car, completed August 3, 1979, is a 50-foot, 6-inch boxcar, with the reporting mark, PLCX 31. It is painted Imperial Silver, with Royal Blue signage.

James A. McDivitt, Pullman Standard President, said: "The 50-foot boxcar is the workhorse of the American railroad fleet. The one millionth car symbolizes the past, present, and most especially, the future contributions of the railroads to the American economy and our free enterprise system. We don't expect it to take us 98 years to build our second million cars."

K-C declares dividends

The board of directors of Kimberly-Clark Corporation have declared a regular quarterly dividend of 72 cents per share. The divident is payable October 2, 1979 to stockholders of record September 7, 1979.

Unemployment funds may be taxable

Persons receiving unemployment compensation during calendar year 1979 may be required to pay federal income taxes on their benefits. It is the responsibility of claimants to determine the amount and to pay any taxes due, advises William J. Davis, director of the Alabama Department of Industrial Relations.

The department will not withhold tax from unemployment benefits, Davis pointed out. However, at the end of the year, the department will provide each claimant with a written statement of benefits received. This information will also be provided the Internal Revenue Service.

Changes in the federal income tax law last year make unemployment benefits subject to taxation for the first time. Benefits which may be taxed include payments made under the regular state/federal unemployment compensation programs in addition to trade readjustment assistance (TRA) and disaster unemployment assistance (DUA). Several Shelby County residents have received TRA checks this year because of the closing of Siluria Textiles.

For single persons, the tax may start when income including benefits exceeds $20,000 in a year. For married persons filing a joint income tax return, the tax may start when combined income including benefits exceeds $25,000. Married persons filing separate income tax returns may find that all unemployment benefits are taxable.

More detailed information in included in an Internal Revenue Service pamphlet available from local unemployment compensation claims offices.

Production and inventory seminar held

The Birmingham Chapter of the American Production and Inventory Control Society will sponsor a one-day seminar entitled "Basics of Production and Inventory Control". The seminar will be conducted at the Airport Holiday Inn in Birmingham on August 18 from 8:45 a.m. to 4:45 p.m.

For reservations and further information, contact Randall Wolfe, Seminars Chairman, C/O National Woodworks, Inc., 252-7157, Ext. 44.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Man must no longer envy the birds; Cessna flight school offers lessons

From the day man first used his imagination, he has gazed with envy at the birds in the sky. The fact that he was born without wings never daunted man's dream of flying.

In today's world flying is a reality. But the number of those who actually take the controls of a plane and soar off with the birds is small compared to those who sit in envy, like man of old, and wish they, too, could fly.

The fact of the matter is that you can fly. And it may be easier than you imagined.

Lane Aero Company operates a Cessna Flight School at Shelby County Airport.

With all the daylight left after work, it's not hard for the adventuresome to find an hour or two a week for flying lessons. And, according to Lane Aero President Larry Chapman, "A flight after work is a great way to get your head straight."

You can be licensed to fly in a matter of three of four months, depending on how hard you want to go after it. It takes but 40 hours flying time to qualify to take the Federal Aviation Administration's written and flight tests. Most students, however, usually log about 48 hours before they take the exams.

The first step in obtaining a pilot license is to take a medical exam. (After receiving a license, the FAA requires a medical checkup every 24 months.)

The lessons themselves are divided into two parts: classroom studies and actual flying. After spending an hour in the classroom listening to tapes on a particular aspect of flying, such as landing safely, the student then takes a plane up with an instructor and practices that particular lesson. In this manner, the ground school reinforces what is learned during flight time, and vice versa.

After logging 10-12 hours flying time with an instructor, most students are ready for solo work. One exercise in solo is a flight from Shelby County Airport to Chattanooga, to Columbus, Georgia and back--not a bad way to unwind after a hectic (or dull) day at work.

Before recommending a student for the FAA final exams, the flight instructor reviews the complete course with the person from both the classroom and the cockpit.

The cost for ground school is $135. Solo flights costs $21 an hour for rental of the plane. Flights with one of Lane Aero's experienced instructors cost $31 an hour.

"This is the kind of deal where you pay as you fly," explains Chapman. "If you've got a little extra money in your pocket, you might want to fly three or four hours a week." He adds that a flight student needs at least two hours flying time a week so as not to forget the previous lessons.

Financing for the flight school is available.

For more information, call Lane Aero at 663-4805. Fulfill a dream and learn to fly.

By the time Richard Miller, chief flight instructor, is through with a student, the new pilot knows airplanes from the inside and out.

Book funds reach half way mark

The Montevallo Public Library has reached almost half its goal in funds to replace books that were damaged in the fire of last December.

With a goal of $3,000, the Library Board and Friends of the Library have received contributions totaling $1400 to date, leaving the drive just $1600 short of its goal.

Businesses or individuals who would like to contribute can mail their checks to Judy Morgan, 9 Brookhill Lane, Montevallo 35115.

Checks should be made out to 'Friends of the Montevallo Public Library.'

SOBER drive set for holiday

The National Council on Alcoholism Alabama Division is sponsoring a campaign during the Labor Day weekend, August 31 - September 3, to create a greater public awareness of the dangers of drinking and driving. The S.O.B.E.R. (Slow on the Bottle, Enjoy the Road) campaign mission is to ultimately reduce the incidence of alcohol-related accidents on Alabama highways.

Les Sachs is chairman of the Shelby County campaign.

In Alabama, nearly 60 per cent of all highway traffic fatalities are alcohol-related according to statistics available from the Governor's Office of Highway and Traffic Safety. Nationally, the incidence of alcohol-related highway deaths is approximately 50 per cent.

Alabamians will be encouraged to go "Slow on the Bottle, Enjoy the Road", through billboards, bumper stickers, posters, and buttons, displaying an overturned car along with the message "Bottoms Up" and S.O.B.E.R., "Slow on the Bottle, Enjoy the Road", motto.

FREE STANDING FURNITURE OR A BUILT-IN?

When you're thinking about a wall unit of any kind, or a bookcase, it's good to consider advantages of free standing units as opposed to built-ins for many worthwhile reasons.

Now, we're not saying that built-ins aren't good, too, but free standing units do give you so much. For one thing, because they are not built-in they can be put on different walls whenever you decide to re-decorate or change a room around.

The same applies if you ever move. Built-in shelves usually have to be left behind, but cabinets, bookcases and other wall units can go with you and be used in your new home.

Not only do you have the great versatility with free standing units, but there are so many attractive ones today that are really beautiful pieces of furniture.

Etageres, bookcases and wall units are available--not only to hold and display the things you want them to--but also to "stand on their own" decoratively. And such pieces can be used not only against a wall, but many may also be used, if you wish, as room or area dividers away from the walls. It all adds up to a way of decorating you might consider, and we'll be happy to help you.

Music in the air

Bands all over the county are holding daily practice sessions in preparation for their halftime performances at football contests which will begin next Friday. Here the Marching Southern Sounds from Thompson High School go over one of their new numbers. The band has an outstanding brass section and an expanded color guard. Schools announce county teachers

Shelby County schools open next Monday, August 27.

For the first time in 20 years, the school system will be led by a new superintendent, Charles Knowles. He is starting the year by scheduling a full day's activities on the first day.

In the past teachers have used the first day to register students and have dismissed them within an hour or two. But Knowles has pledged himself to tightening up several phases of operation in the schools and his plans for the first day are in keeping with his philosophy.

Although there are fewer teachers this year than last year, there were still some vacancies at press time. But, they were fast being filled. Except for a few last minute additions, the following is the list of teachers who will teach Shelby County youngsters in the public schools this year.

The first name listed is the principal of the school.

Hope trial underway in Coosa

by David Moore

After a change in venue, the murder trial of Phillip Stanley Hope, of Shelby began Monday in Coosa County.

The change of venue was requested earlier this year by Hope's attorneys Karl Harrison and Sonny Conwill because of publicity surrounding the case. The change of venue was granted by Circuit Judge James H. Sharbutt and the trial was moved from Columbiana to Rockford.

Hope, 24, of Shelby is charged with the murder of Louie Earl Jones, 25, also of Shelby.

Jones' body was found on March 25, 1978, floating in Waxahatchee Creek off Hwy. 145 near the Shelby/Chilton County line.

Prosecuting for the state are District Attorney Billy Hill and Assistant District Attorney Patti Smith.

During the striking of the jurors which occupied Monday's proceeding, Hope sat quietly detatched, staring for the most part out of the window. He wore jeans and a casual shirt.

By Tuesday morning at 10:30 a jury of 12 Coosa County residents was selected to hear the case. Seven of the jurors are women; five are men. All the jurors are black.

Hope is white, and Jones, who he is accused of murdering, was also white.

The prosecution called the first witness to the stand at 10:45.

The jury heard the testimony of J.R. Gadsden and Benjamin Pemberton, the two fishermen who found Jones' body.

Testimony was also heard from Ed Burdett, Shelby County coroner at the time.

By noon recess the jurors had heard evidence as to where and when the body was found, and its condition. A blood-stained shirt found near the scene was also presented.

Hope, dressed in a light suit, listened intently as testimonies were given Tuesday.

Football Cash returns

The Shelby County Reporter's annual FOOTBALL CASH returns for the 1979 season this week for another year of rewarding successful football forecasters. You'll find this week's entry blank on the back page of this section.

The rules are simple - just pick the team you think will win and write that team's name on the appropriate line. The games are numbered and scattered throughout the ads on the page. Then pick the actual scores of the tiebreakers, cut out the entry blank and mail it in.

If you're a winner, you'll be contacted by phone on the weekend following the games played. Remember that the entry must be received at the Reporter's Columbiana or Pelham office no later than noon on the day of the game. This week's entry must be returned by next Thursday because of two games that are played that night.

Good luck this year and we hope to have you pictured as another winner in Shelby County's most successful contest.

United Way goal set at $160,000

A United Way campaign goal of $160,185 for Shelby County was announced recently at an orientation meeting for county campaign leaders at the University of Montevallo.

UM President Jim Vickrey, county United Way chairman, said the 1979 target figure represents a 12 percent increase above the 1978 total.

"This modest goal for the state's fastest growing county represents less than a $4.50 per capital contribution to an agency that annually helps thousands of people, including 4,000 people right here in Shelby County," Dr. Vickrey said. "I am confident that the Shelby County campaign team will exceed the goal given us, and I look forward to working with them."

The approximately 4,000 Shelby Countians were helped by 29 different agencies that are funded by United Way.

Shelby Countians responsible for the 1979 United Way campaign sections are John Lauriello, major account chairman; Hylott Armstrong, Columbiana-Wilsonville section chairman; Don Hughes, Montevallo-Calera section chairman; Rev. Reid Crotty, Alabaster-Helena section chairman; Bobby Reynolds, public employee section chairman; Patsy Johnson, Pelham-Riverchase section chairman; and Steve Sears, professional section chairman.

Board votes to fire Riverchase teacher

A two day hearing came to a conclusion last Tuesday night at 10:30 when the Shelby County Board of Education announced their decision to dismiss Riverchase teacher Odessa Jackson.

The school's principal, Dr. Bobby Anderson, had recommended the termination of contracts of both Jackson, a 7th grade math teacher, and Willie David Johnson, both tenured teachers.

Due to the lengthy hearing for Jackson, Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles said that Johnson's hearing has been set for two weeks after the opening of school.

Until the outcome of the hearing is announced, Johnson will be on suspension with pay, Knowles said.

Claiming that his client was under an unusual amount of pressure in the classroom during the year, Jackson's attorney Troy Massey called attention to the suit which had been filed by Riverchase trustees against the Board of Education.

As a result of the suit, which was filed to keep Jackson and seven other Pelham teachers from being transferred to Riverchase, Judge James Sharbutt ordered reviews to be made during the year of the teachers' performance.

The trustees balked at accepting the teachers whom former Pelham principal Ernest Douglas had termed incompetent, recommending they be dismissed.

After reviewing the case, Judge Sharbutt ruled that the board recognize the trustees, which they had refused to do, but he denied their right to keep the teachers from working at the school.

During his presentation of the board's case, attorney Karl Harrison called as witnesses, two educators who had evaluated Jackson's teaching performance during the year.

Both Dr. Robert Leigh of the University of Alabama and Dr. John Hill from the State Department of Education, termed the math teacher's performance "unsatisfactory."

In his attempt to counteract the claims, the defendant's attorney brought in an expert on evaluation techniques from Alabama State University. Dr. John Gibson termed the yes and no answers on the evaluation forms as an inadequate method of judging a teacher's effectiveness.

When Mrs. Ruth Stephens, who has recently resigned her position as assistant principal testified, she said she had found Jackson to be making satisfactory progress.

It had been mentioned during the hearing that Jackson did not have a good rapport with her students and Harrison brought out the fact that the teacher never smiled.

When she talked to her about her solemn attitude, Stephens reported that the teacher had replied she would have been a hypocrite if she had tried to act otherwise.

"I would prefer a good math teacher to someone who smiled all the time," Stephens declared.

A Riverchase parent who was present at the hearing, admitted that the teacher knew her math, but said she hadn't been able to get it across to her students.

When questioned about files on the teacher, which are missing, Stephens said she did not know where they had gone, but had an idea who had taken them.

The former assistant principal also admitted that she heard rumors around the school that a deal had been made to have the eight teachers fired.

During his examination of Riverchase Trustee Chairman Richard Mace, Massey asked about legal fees in the PTO

Pelham Council denies beer license on 119

"We probably shouldn't have voted on it," remarked Mayor Burk Dunaway after the Pelham Council, for the second time, turned down a beer license for the U-Tote-M store on Hwy. 119.

Explaining his remark, Dunaway said that U-Tote-M was appealing the ABC Board's denial of a license for their store near Indian Springs School.

Since the matter is now in the courts, the Pelham Mayor noted that the council probably should have waited until a decision was reached there before the city took any action.

The Pelham Council chamber was filled Monday night with residents of the Indian Springs area, the attorney for Indian Springs School and the attorney and representatives of U-Tote-M.

Attorney Joe Mays, Jr., represented Indian Springs School at the meeting.

Denny Barrow and B.J. Harris of Harbar Homes, who are developers of the area, were requesting the license. Accompanying them were D.S. Siebold of U-Tote-M of Alabama, Robert House, president of U-Tote-M Corporation, and their attorney, John Clements.

A petition, reportedly containing the names of 1,100 people who are opposed to the store selling beer, was presented to the council.

However, Councilman Ray

Fall injures crew member

A fall from the roof of the new recreation building under construction in Montevallo resulted in the injury of a construction worker at 7:20 Tuesday morning.

Bobby Joe Vinson, a member of the crew of Rawhide Erection Company of Muscle Shoals, was taken to Shelby Memorial Hospital by Shelco Unit One Emergency Rescue. He fell from the roof to the concrete floor of the building, and was reported in serious condition.

The building is about 85% complete, and the workmen were putting the roof on the last half of the building when the accident occurred, according to city clerk Don Hughes. The building is a 4,000 square foot metal building, being built by the city of Montevallo on the site of the former depot in Orr Park.

Rawhide Erection Company is the building contractor for the job.

Leader of young men

The plaque presented to Jim Cowart (l), former Scoutmaster of Troop 5, was inscribed, a leader of young men. The award of appreciation was given to Cowart by troop committee chairman, Dr. Paul Denine.

Troop 5 Scoutmaster honored for service

by Bert Seaman

"Have a dream and go after it." That was the philosophy that Troop 5 Scoutmaster Jim Cowart instilled in members of his troop.

Cowart has given up leadership of the troop. But at a Court of Honor meeting Monday night, a plaque of appreciation for the years he worked with the boys was presented to him by troop committee chairman Dr. Paul Denine.

After mentioning that the former scoutmaster had given unselfishly of his time, energy and resources, Denine said, "I believe he truly loved each of the boys in the troop."

Cowart reported that he would still be working with the troop committee. As he accepted the plaque, the long time scouter remarked that he hoped he had shown the boys how to set goals and work toward them.

The troop's new scoutmaster, Doyle Kernea, presided at the meeting. A humorous musical skit which used the song, "If I Were Not a Boy Scout," was performed by members of the troop, and Dr. Denine spoke briefly on the subject of honor.

During the Court of Honor, First Class awards were presented to Peter Smythe, Michael Neely and David Kernea. Kernea also received his Star award.

Tenderfoot awards were presented to: Jamie Cowart, Terry Driggers, Matthew Denine, David Bryan, Michael Suling, John Wiley, Mark Estridge.

Troop members who earned merit badges were: Mark Estridge, David Kernea, Raymond Kernea, Michael Suling, Matthew Denine, John Denine, Jeff Dumier, Peter Smythe, John Wiley, Scott Swann, Jeff Cowart, and David Bryan.

One car crash kills woman near Alabaster

A 22 year old Hoover woman was killed in Alabaster at 9:52 Monday night in a one car accident.

Linda Beale was apparently on her way to visit her parents, who live in Southwind, when her car went off the road and overturned on County Road 264.

The Alabaster Fire Department responded to the call and the victim was transported to Shelby Memorial Hospital by Fire Chief John Cocharan. She was pronounced dead on arrival.

Alabaster policeman Lloyd Anderson said that a witness had reported seeing the car traveling at a high rate of speed.

Pelham council

Hamilton, who abstained from voting, noted that some of the addresses on the petition were from outside the county and even outside the state.

Pointing out why he had declined to vote, Hamilton said that he wasn't necessairly against the issuance of a beer license but he didn't think it was the city's responsibility to take action on the matter since the store is located outside the city limits.

"We have plenty of business to take care of inside the city," Hamilton exphasized. "I think it's up to the county commission to handle the matter," he added.

The matter was brought before the council because the store is in Pelham's police jurisdiction.

There was no discussion when the application for an on premise liquor license was requested for Brentwood South on Hwy. 31 N. The establishment was formerly a teenage disco spot but the nature of the business is being changed.

The request for an off-premise beer license for Eckerd Drug Co. located in the Shelby Mart, was also approved by the council.

budget. Mace said that $750 had been collected by members of the organization to pay attorney Thomas Ruben Bell who represented the trustees in their suit against the board.

Although Judge Sharbutt still has the case under advisement, a reliable source at the courthouse said that the parties involved are expected to settle the matter without the judge's taking action.

But if this doesn't occur, he added, a hearing will probably be set no later than 60 days from now.

Proposal to adopt one cent sales tax gets lukewarm response in Columbiana

by Bert Seaman

The mention of a one cent sales tax for the city met with only lukewarm response when it was brought up at the Columbiana Council meeting Thursday evening.

However, Finance Chairman Paul Smith insisted that the funds would be badly needed to make ends meet in next year's budget.

He reminded the panel that voters would be going to the polls early next year to decide on a countywide one cent sales tax.

Saying that the city needed to take action before then, Smith reminded council members that Alabaster had already levied a one cent sales tax and that other cities were following suit.

Because Councilman Frank Owens was absent, the panel delayed making any decision about the matter.

With next year's budget on his mind too, Councilman Harold McCord mentioned that it would be more economical to order a new fire engine now due to rising costs.

"It will take 12 months to build," he told the council, "and if we waited till next year it would cost $5,000 more.

McCord suggested that the price of the vehicle, which he estimated will cost around $40,000 could be divided into two year's budgets.

According to the Fire Commissioner, the addition of the 750 gallon per minute pumper should reduce the city's fire insurance rating to a seven.

Another item that will require a capital outlay was brought to the panel's attention by Mayor Bob Bolton. A retirement plan for employees had been discussed earlier in the year, but no action has ever been taken.

Although city employees had expressed a desire for the city to accept the state's retirement plan, the council had decided the cost would be prohibitive.

It was agreed that employees be asked to attend the next council meeting September 6, where Liberty National Life Insurance Company representatives will present their proposal.

Smith recommended that the city contribute an amount equal to 10% of the employee's salary, whatever plan is adopted. He suggested that employees might pay half.

Mentioning the Gaines Farmer house, which now belongs to the city's park and recreation departtment, Mayor Bolton suggested that it be used as a lounge for Shelby County High School football players.

The council went along with the proposal and Bolton said coaches had assured him the boys would keep the building, located adjacent to the stadium, in good condition.

A letter read by City Clerk Mary Largin commended the city for the way garbage pickups are being handled. Columbiana resident Alvin Stinson noted that streets and roads are cleaner and he urged citizens to present a united effort to "keep the town well groomed."

Water quality group to study runoff problems in county

by David Moore

The 208 Water Quality Advisory Group will discuss issues of impact on Shelby County at a public meeting today in Birmingham.

Among items discussed which will affect Shelby County will be the voluntary compliance program for runoff problems in construction areas, such as subdivisions. The program sets standards for contractors to leave vegetation coverage in clearings and build diversion ditches to minimize erosion.

A study on water conservation needs, targeting on the Cahaba River, will be discussed, as will reclamation priorities for abandoned mines in the area.

The 208 Study is a project of the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission. Project Director Ken Layton explains that the 208 Study is designed to aid local governments in developing plans to abate water quality problems caused by municipal and industrial run-offs and discharges.

Layton says that other items of public interest at the Thursday meeting will be discussion of the proposed fiscal year 1980 work plan, and discussion of the Alabama Development Office's population projections for Shelby, Jefferson, St. Clair and Walker Counties.

Eight representatives currently serve Shelby County on the 208 Water Quality and Advisory Group.

Mrs. Arthur Ludwig of Pelham represents the County Commission and Probate Judge Tommy Snowden. George Holcombe represents the County Health Department.

Citizen representatives on the committee are Lee Laechett of Helena, Jack van Pelt of North Shelby County, and Hugh Sims of Inverness.

Ernest McMeans from Alabaster represents public interests on the 208 Study. McMeans is a member of the Sierra Club.

Also representing public interest is Lynn Scarbrough of Alabaster, from the Alabama Environmental Quality Association.

A representative of county economic interests is expected to be appointed in the near future, is a third representative from the category of public offials.

The meeting of the Water Quality Advisory Group is scheduled at 4:30 p.m. in the auditorium of The Botanical Gardens in Birmingham, and is open to the public.

Clinging to edge of king size bed

As I clung to the edge of my bed the other night, I remembered when I had once thought it would be so great to have a king size bed.

But that was before my granddaughter started paying me nightly visits.

It seems as though she's going through a period where she just can't seem to spend the night alone. And my bed is usually where she ends up.

Despite the vast expanse of space in that monstorous bed, my little nighttime companion always seems to wind up crowding me right to the edge of the mattress.

My tatic is usually to get up and move around to the other side where I can spread out for a few brief moments before the little one moves in on me again.

Just as I'm about to drift off to sleep, there's a knee in my side or an arm flung across my face.

But that isn't as bad as rolling over and being jabbed by a horse's hoof. It's a toy horse of course, but it's still uncomfortable.

When the little tyke makes her way to my bed, she usually doesn't come alone. She frequently brings along two or three of her horses.

I'm always relieved when she chooses to bring stuffed animals. However, there was one time when it got to be a little messy.

In the morning I would notice little brown kernels on the sheet after a group of softies had spent the night with us.

One of these creatures, I knew, must be losing his insides. But I couldn't fine a telltale hole in the lamb, the goat, the bear, the kangaroo, the elephant or any of the rabbits.

After awhile, it became evident that the pudgy elephant was beginning to lose his shape. And sure enough, the smallest of slits was finally discovered in one of his seams.

That type of problem is minor though when you compare it to some of the things that can happen when a living breathing animal pays you a nighttime visit.

I remember when some kittens we used to have would wander into our room during the night and settle down quietly on the bed. But when your foot would move, they'd pounce on it as if it were prey.

But thinking about different types of beds I've slept in, one of the smallest was a loaner. You couldn't even turn over.

Some neighbors provided us with cots and other necessities when we moved to Arkansas and our furniture failed to arrive.

For some reason, two of the legs on my sleeping accomodation couldn't seem to make it through the night. By morning, the lower half of my body would be resting on the floor.

Another memorable bed I had was a double decker. Well, in this case it wasn't the bed itself that created such a lasting impression, but its location.

This was my first taste of college life, and although that dorm has been torn down, it will always exist in my memory. Jammed into a tiny room with four other girls, I got the upper deck of a bed that was smack up against a wall with a chimney on the other side.

This was long before the days of fuel shortages and apparently the people in charge of heating started it up on a certain date no matter what the weather was like.

Let me tell you, the fall I started college was hot - very hot! But the furnace was going full blast. I'm surprised we weren't all baked alive.

A water bed is about the only thing I haven't spent the night on, I guess. I'm not quite sure how you drift about in those contraptions, but under the present conditions. I imagine my little nighttime buddy and I would be tossed together in the middle or float off the edge side by side.

Evidence in two cases goes to grand jury

Evidence against two Birmingham men and an Alabaster resident will be presented to the grand jury at their October 1 meeting.

Preliminary hearings were held in district court last Thursday for Eddie Lewis Durham of Alabaster and Charles Edwin Russell and David Crawford Bolden both of Birmingham.

The 27 year old Alabaster man is charged with violation of the Alabama Uniform Controlled Substances Act. It's alleged that on July 5, Durham tried to pass a forged prescription to illegally obtain paregoric at Smitherman's Pharmacy in Montevallo.

Bond for the defendant was reduced to $750 by the court.

Bolden was arrested by Sheriff's deputies on the Fourth of July after an intruder broke into a north Shelby County apartment which was occupied by two teenaged girls.

Bond for the 30 year old defendant was continued at $15,000. He is charged with first degree burglary and assault with intent to murder.

According to testimony presented at the hearing, a man wearing a hood entered the bedroom where the girls were sleeping in the early morning hours.

He reportedly pulled a small derringer pistol and threatened to kill one of them when the girls started screaming.

Bolden was arrested a short while after one of the girls was pursued by the intruder out the front door.

A grand larceny charge was brought against Russell who allegedly stole $285 from the USA Oil Company in Pelham on July 2. Bond for the 37 year old man was continued at $7,500.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

Words That Keep Coming Back: September had borrowed a day from August and re-heated it about two o'clock and dumped it on Hugh McDaniel's corn patch. We got there at five minutes past two, Jack Stone and Tag Elliott and Herman Strong and Garvin Baker and Bub Gordon and I.

There was one shade tree between Hugh's front yard and the top of the mountain across the corn patch, one giant oak tree the wind had blown down two summers before, but was still laying there, its leaves long ago turned brown and fallen off, blown all over ten acres by a little wind.

At five minutes past three, Tag Elliott came in out of the corn field and got an imitation cola drink from Bub Gordon. After three swallows, he looked at Bub with a strange look in his eye, and begged: "Bub, I don't have to drink this, do I?"

* * * *

We had flushed the covey on a little rise fifty yards beyond the graveyard. In a little sage patch where they'd build half a dozen houses later on, and dozens more on the rocky, pine hill beyond, and in the corn fields and cotton patches farther on. They got up wild and most of them flew across the railroad and into a thick pine thicket beyond John Pope's house. One lit on the railroad and we saw him light. Leon Kelley's dog pointed him and Leon said, while we were walking up behind the dog: "That bird's dead and don't know it."

* * * *

There were two men out in the second inning. It was August and you could have fried an egg on the pitcher's mound. There was a little spot of shade behind third base and another behind homeplate. But they might as well have been behind Childersburg and Anniston, so far as doing me any good was concerned.

That morning, about four o'clock, Dr. Eversole and I had got in from Narrow's Inn. I guess we would have still been there except the lovelies went home and the music stopped and some nice old lady's rooster started talking to the breaking dawn out loud. Looking around, with the sweat trickling down my forehead and dripping in my eyes, I counted the men on base.

There was one on first and one on second and one on third. My first pitch had been a strike. Then I threw two balls and then another ball. That's when Rip Cox yanked me. And that's when the boys on the third base line, in the little spot of shade, yelled: "What time did you and Doc get in Skillet. Was it four or five o'clock?"

Brookwood pioneers with new care center

A seven story building designed for the purpose of providing medical treatment at less cost is scheduled to be opened Sunday.

The Ambulatory Care Center adjacent to Brookwood Hospital is pioneering a new concept in the state by treating people with medical needs on an outpatient basis.

Robert J. Zasa has been named administrative and marketing director for the new facility which has been under construction for the past year.

W. Randolph Smith has accepted the position of assistant administrator of operations for the center which marks the completition of the Phase I development of Brookwood Medical Center.

During the 2:30 p.m. dedication ceremony, Pennsylvania's senior senator Richard S. Schweiker will speak on the topic, "Regulation vs. Competition in Health Care."

According to a spokesperson for the hospital, the concept of the Ambulatory Center is to provide a greater number of outpatient health care services as an alternative to more expensive in-hospital care.

Two operating rooms for same day surgery are available on the second floor of the building which will also house expanded radiology facilities and treatment rooms for acute and non-urgent cases.

Three floors of the building will contain office space for 35 physicians and corporate offices for Brookwood Health Services, Inc. will be located on the sixth floor.

The top story of the $11,308,711 building is a 47 room guest hotel for ambulatory patients and their families.

A Pain Management Center has also been included in the new facility and classroom space is available for community education and medical seminars.

Expected savings to the patients and their insurance companies from two programs alone, Same Day Surgery and the Brookwood Medical Inn, should exceed $1.9 million annually within two years.

The idea to include such a center in the total medical complex at Brookwood was part of the Board of Directors' original plan in 1972. Although it was considered a bold concept in those days, it fits squarely with today's economics and public concern--quality health care should not be exhorbitant.

Still another important aspect of the Ambulatory Care Center will be the Brookwood Executive Health Center which is designed to allow business to take a deliberate step toward safeguarding the health of its key personnel. This program is available to provide executive exams and pre-employment physicals. Included in this is stress management, weight control, elimination of smoking and leisure planning, in addition to complete physicals.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"Saints, Bishops, and Deacons"

In Philippians 1:1, 2, Paul stated, "Paul and Timothy, servants of Christ Jesus, to all the saints in Christ Jesus that are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons: Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ." These verses give us some insight into the organization of the First Century church.

First, the members of the church at Philippi were addressed as saints. All true Christians are saints, inasmuch as they have been sanctified or separated from the world. One does not have to be dead for hundreds of years before he can become a saint. Paul also addressed the church at Corinth as "saints"; they were still living. (I Corinthians 1:1, 2)

Second, the church in Philippi had bishops--a plurality of bishops. It was scripturally organized. Paul instructed Titus, "For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shalt set in order the things that wanting, and appoint elders (a plurality of elders) in every city." (Titus 1:5) The necessary implication is that each congregation will have a plurality of bishops if it is scripturally organized. Four terms are used to designate the same office--bishops, elders, overseers, and pastors or shepherds. Each of these terms indicates something about the responsibilities of these men. They are bishops and overseers, for they watch over, superintend, matters of the church. They are elders, for they are older men characterized by widom and experience. They are pastors, for the shepherd or have the responsibility for the spiritual growth and care of every saint in the congregation. Paul, in his list of qualifications necessary for pastors, bishops, is that they must be husband of one wife, no novice, have believing children, etc. Unless an evangelist is also a bishop, or elder, he must not be called a pastor. Note also that the New Testament church had a plurality of pastors, or bishops, in every church.

Third, the church in Philippi had deacons--a plurality of deacons. Deacons are servants; they do not have the rule over a congregation. The deacons had the responsibility of taking care of the physical welfare of the congregation--distributing food and clothing, caring for the building, and other such work.

When people depart from the organization characteristic of the early church, such action demonstrates a lack of respect for the authority of the Word of God. Christ is the head of the church (Colossians 1:18); let us respect His decrees relative to church organization!

Alabaster Jaycees give recognition

Two hard working Jaycees were the recipients of most of the awards that were handed out by the Alabaster chapter last Thursday night.

In addition to being named Jaycee of the Year, James Scoggins also walked off with two other honors. The chapter voted him Officer of the Year and cited him for his work in the community.

Rick Lewis claimed the Key Man award, and his club project was named the most outstanding. He also received one of the Sparkplug awards and was recognized for his contribution to the internal workings of the organization.

President elect Henry Lucas handed out the awards, which included a plaque of appreciation from the Alabaster Jaycees to his predecessor Charlie Hedrick. The past president also received a Sparkplug award.

During the program, which was held in the depot, three year patches were presented to: Scoggins, Lewis, Hedrick, Wayne Lucas and David Phelps.

Fishing closed at Tucker Park

Fishing will be closed at Helena's Joe Tucker Park lake from August 27 until September 3.

Reason for the closing, according to City Councilman Paul Cribbs, is to give time for chemicals to do their work in disposing of the excess scale fish in the lake.

According to a report in Helena's City Council meeting Monday night, fish have not been biting at the lake all summer, because of over-stocking.

The City has asked Ted Benson to work on the problem.

Watch out for fake $20's

The next time someone hands you a $20 bill, take a close look - especially if you're in the Alabaster area.

According to Alabaster police, juveniles are suspected of passing phony $20's which are actually doctored $1 bills.

The Secret Service is working with local police in apprehending those engaged in the cheap method of counterfeiting.

Give someone a chance to see the world through your eyes.

Sight. The most cherished of all the senses. It's the one we're most terrified of losing. The one through which—normally—we learn more than three-fourths of all we know.

It's a gift you can give to others. When you no longer need it for yourself.

With corneal grafts, the donated eyes from one person can restore vision for two.

Other eye tissue is also used for repair.

And for research which can ultimately benefit the hundreds of thousands of persons who suffer from other vision defects and blindness.

The problem is, there aren't enough donors. Not yet. But there could be. If more people plan ahead to donate their eyes at death. Be a donor.

Restored vision is a beautiful sight to see.

Carry an eye donor card from your local eye bank. And for a free booklet about all kinds of anatomical gifts (including a nationally recognized uniform donor card), write Liberty National, Dept. N-E.

When is a mobile home a modular home?

What is the difference between a mobile home and a modular home?

The question has apparently not been settled in the courts, and the Helena City Council is appealing a recent court decision on the subject.

Councilmen learned at Monday night's meeting that the Shelby County Circuit Court recently ruled that a home in the Sunnybrook Subdivision is a modular home, although city fathers had ruled it a mobile home.

Helena's city ordinances forbid mobile homes to be used as residences within the city limits. Councilmen learned that another trailer has been moved into town for the grandson of the property owner. Based on the thought that the issue will come up several more times, the city is seeking the further court ruling to spell out the exact differences between a modular home and a mobile home.

In the past, it was thought that modular homes were pre-built at a factory location and moved to a site where they were placed on permanent foundations, whereas mobile homes were built with wheels of their own for transport.

In other business at Monday's meeting, steps were taken to transfer equipment of the West Shelby Emergency Unit to the Helena Fire Department. The Emergency Unit disbanded recently, and because it was chartered by the state, procedures of inventorying the equipment are now underway.

The question of who the vandals were who desecrated tombstones in the cemetery has still not been solved, according to a report from Police Chief Gary Carter.

The Council discussed the question of the ad valorem tax, which they expect to bring in less revenue this year because of the lid bill and other regulations. Councilmen decided to wait until the appraisals were completed before taking up the question of how much to raise the millage on property within the city.

Congressman faces questions on Bishop Creek in Pelham

by Bert Seaman

A balanced budget, mass transit, and the flood problem along Bishop Creek were some of the issues Congressman Richard Shelby discussed when he visited five Shelby County municipalities Monday.

Saying that he wanted to keep the lines of communications open with his constituents, Shelby scheduled town meetings in Pelham, Alabaster, Columbiana Calera, and Montevallo.

A Pelham Councilman and a resident who suffered heavy losses during Bishop Creek floodings both questioned Shelby about what action could be taken to solve the problem.

"We've done everything we can do," declared Councilman Ray Hamilton.

Upset with the failure of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to arrive at a solution to the problem, Mrs. Marie Oesterling said, "It would help if they would just take a shovel and clean it out!"

Shelby promised that he would inspect the problem area at the earliest opportunity.

When the subject of education was brought up, Shelby said that he would always be willing to work with the Board of Education on any grants that they were eligible to apply for.

Discussing the umemployment situation, Shelby related that he would push private industry to provide more jobs. He said that he didn't think government created jobs were the answer.

This country's production of foodstuffs, especially grain, ought to be used as an instrument of foreign policy, the Congressman told his audiences.

"We ought to build more graineries in the midwest and store it," Shelby remarked.

When asked by a member of the audience if he forsaw a mass transportation system for this area, the congressman replied that it would be coming.

Touching on the subject of energy, Shelby stressed the importance of conserving fuel. "We could cut down on half of the energy we're using now," he declared.

He spoke on his sponsorship of legislation to mandate a balanced budget and deplored the effect of inflation, especially on the older segement of the population.

THS has 'strongest brass ever'

There's music in the air.

Anyone who has been in the vicinity of one of the county's high schools recently has surely heard it.

Marching bands are getting ready to take the field for half time performances during the upcoming football season.

At Thompson High School the sound is expected to be even bigger and better than in previous years. One hundred and forty five band members will be marching under the leadership of Tony Shubert, the first male drum major at THS in a number of years.

This is only the second year in the band for the 14 year old sophmore who attended a drum majors camp at Troy State in July.

Band Director Elson Hood reports that the color guard has expanded with 24 students now performing routines with flags and six girls doing maneuvers with rifles.

Gena Woods is the color guard captain and Tracy Vaughan is the rifle sergeant.

Hood also noted that the brass line is the "strongest and most mature we've ever had."

The band will still be marching to music with a Latin beat which is arranged by Hood and assistant band director Tim Anderson. However football fans will be seeing some new gaucho style hats as the Marching Southern Sounds take the field next Friday.

Altadena Manor Townhouses get approval in close vote

The controversial project, Altadena Manor Townhouses, was given the go-ahead last Monday night by the Shelby County Planning Commission.

For the fourth straight meeting, Frank Lankford, owner of the property had requested the Commission to allow him to alter a previously adopted plan, so he could build townhouses.

Residents from the communtiy in the Caldwell Mill Road and Old Caldwell Mill Road areas of North Shelby County, had appeared at all four meetings protesting the townhouse development because of the traffic congestion that would result. They raised several other arguments, having to do with the project Lankford had previously developed there.

Lankford and his attorney contended that apartments would cause greater road congestion, because there would be more living units in the apartment complex than in the proposed townhouse complex.

At last month's meeting the Planning Commission voted in a tie of 2-2. Last Monday the vote was 3 to 2 in favor of allowing the change in plan from apartments to townhouses.

Helena sprinklers may have to go

Helena was considering imposing a "no sprinkling" ban Tuesday, when water in the city tank fell below the halfway mark.

So many people had started to leave their sprinklers on all night that the city water supplies were falling, according to the city clerk.

Although there was no danger of the city's suffering a shortage of water for other needs, it was felt that when 1500 homeowners left on their lawn sprinklers all night it caused such an excess flow that the city pumps cannot keep up with it.

Calera Chamber continues tradition

Calera's Chamber of Commerce and merchants are promoting a back-to-school campaign this week.

It is traditional for Calera's businesses to get together in community projects as was shown to the Shelby County Reporter this week in a booklet owned by Mrs. W.H. Crawford.

She believes it was printed by the first Calera Chamber of Commerce, and it describes the many attributes of the city.

Among the interesting facts in the booklet one learns that the Town of Calera was incorporated on February 24, 1887 and was originally called "Lime Kiln Station". The word "Calera" which means "lime" in Spanish, was chosen later as a more suitable name for the town.

A slogan in the booklet is repeated on this week's Chamber of Commerce advertisement, "Count on Calera for Cooperation".

Officers of the first chamber were S.M. Harvey, president; F.J. Mitchell, vice president; A.B. Baxley, sec-treas; and Roy Downs, Corresp. Sec.

Board of Directors was composed of Carlos Warren, Luther Clime, W.H. Crawford, Max Baer and C.D. Cowart.

Elementary school lunchroom gets new air conditioning

Students and lunchroom workers will be treated to air conditioning when Calera Elementary School opens on August 27.

The air conditioning is the result of the Calera PTA's work over the past two years raising funds for the units, as well as other projects at the schools.

The PTA appreciates the efforts of the City of Calera for installing the units and to the McLendons and Prichards for the donated units.

According to a PTA spokeswoman, there is a need for more units to complete the cafetorium and office. Plans are now underway for several additional fund raising projects.

MAKING A SMALL ROOM LOOK BIGGER

There are many ways that you can use the right furniture and the right decorating ideas to make any smaller room seem bigger.

We're going to list for you some of the ways of achieving it.

1. Use some more light colors. Light colors make a room look larger while many dark colors make it contract.
2. Use such things as two smaller pieces for one bigger one; for example, two smaller tables instead of one extra large one.
3. Use mirrors; mirrors give the illusion of adding space.
4. If you buy furniture or accessories with patterns, choose some smaller patterns.
5. Wall-to-wall carpet makes an area look bigger.
6. Try some pictures with deep perspectives; outdoor scenes--landscapes or seascapes that seem to show miles of space--add depth to a room.
7. Don't overcrowd a small room; create an impression of space.
8. Use some occasional chairs and some smaller-scaled furniture.

Those are just some of the ideas, and for the right selection of furniture for a small room--or any room--in your home, stop in. We're here to help you.

Conservation service aids pond builders

The Soil Conservation Service is encouraging Shelby County landowners to build ponds and lakes on their property.

Robert Kelley, District Conservationist notes, "We have 1,200 ponds and lakes nestled in small drainways throughout Shelby County. These ponds, if well managed, can produce over 250,000 pounds of bass, bream and catfish per year."

He also urges lake building as good investments, hedges against inflation, and as recreational sites for the family for swimming, boating and fishing.

He adds, "If you are interested in building a lake the Soil Conservation Service will help you select a good site, survey and design it for you, and supervise construction, all as a service to landowners in Shelby County.

"The ASCS office will help you out some on the cost of construction, in most situations. call the Shelby County Soil Conservation Office at 669-7136 for further information.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY CARRIES THIS MUCH BEER 115 MILES ON A GALLON OF FUEL.

"Guess how far a truck could carry it."
L. Stanley Crane, President,
Southern Railway System, Washington, D.C. 20013

The railroad is the most efficient user of fuel in the transportation industry. Bar none.

And the Southern Railway is one of the most efficient railroads in the country.

For instance, on the Southern, this 3,888-lb. load of beer can travel 115 miles on one gallon of fuel. How far could a truck carry it on the same amount of fuel? Well, the railroad is four times more efficient than trucks, 60 times more efficient than planes, and even more efficient than barges. So it's easy to see that trucks can't carry freight anywhere near as far as railroads can per gallon of fuel.

What does this mean for the future? Well, it means that trucks will be used less and less for long hauls.

More and more products will ride on the Southern, and trucks will be used for distribution at the other end of the line. Because, in the coming years, only the railroad will have the energy-efficiency for long hauls.

We have the energy for the long haul.

Defendants.

In the Circuit Court of Shelby County, Alabama
Civil Action No. CV-79-231(E)

TO: The following described land: The S½ of the SE¼ of NW¼ of Section 5, Township 24, Range 14 East, Shelby County, Alabama; and John P. Phelan, Mrs. Ella Arnslow, L.A. Callaway and W.T. Black, or, if deceased, their heirs or devisees, and all parties who, unknown to plaintiffs claim an interest in or to the above described property.

Take notice that Michael W. Worley, Laura L. Worley, Hugh H. Johnson and Gwendolyn L. Johnson, have this day filed their verified complaint in said Court against the above named defendants and against any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, encumbrance upon the above described real estate or any part thereof or interest therein, and against all other persons, and against said lands for the purpose of establishing the title of said lands in the said Michael W. Worley, Laura L. Worley, Hugh H. Johnson and Gwendolyn L. Johnson and to clear up all doubts and disputes concerning the same and that said suit is now pending in said Court.

Plaintiffs allege in said complaint that the title to said lands stands in the name of the plantiffs on the records in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, and said complaint further alleges that plaintiffs claim title to said lands through and by virtue of deeds dated October 8, 1918, recorded in Deed Book 64, Page 398; dated May 29, 1926, recorded in Deed Book 80, Page 412; dated August 26, 1939, recorded in Deed Book 106, Page 473; dated November 24, 1944, recorded in Deed Book 119, Page 301; dated August 16, 1969, recorded in Deed Book 259, Page 141; dated August 25, 1976 recorded in Deed Book 302, Page 232; dated August 25, 1976, recorded in Deed Book 302, Page 233; and dated March 3, 1977, recorded in Deed Book 304, Page 181, all in the Probate Office of Shelby County, Alabama; that during the time of plaintiffs' ownership, they have been in actual, peaceable, adverse possession of said lands claiming to own the same, and that title to said lands has stood in plaintiffs' names on the records in the Office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, for more than ten years prior to this date. 1	$0 - 4,590	$4,951 - 7,160
2	0 - 6,040	6,041 - 9,420

5	0 - 10,390	10,391 - 16,200
6	0 - 11,840	11,841 - 18,470
7	0 - 13,290	13,291 - 20,730
8	0 - 14,740	14,741 - 22,990
9	0 - 16,190	16,191 - 25,250
10	0.- 17,640	17,641 - 27,510
11	0 - 19,090	19,091 - 29,770
12	0 - 20,540	20,541 - 32,030
Each Additional Family Member	$1,450	$2,260

Children from families whose income is at or below those shown are eligible for free meals, free milk and/or reduced-price meals. In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 percent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

They may do so by completing the application forms sent home with a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted any time during the school year.

To discourage the possibility of misrepresentation, the application forms contain a statement above the space for signature certifying that all information furnished in the application is true and correct. An additional statement is added to warn that the application is being made in connection with the receipt of Federal funds, that school officials may, for cause, verify the information in the application, and that deliberate misrepresentation of information may subject the applicant to prosecution under applicable State and criminal statutes.

In certain cases, foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has such children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, they should contact the school.

In the operation of child feeding programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, sex, color, or national origin.

Under the provison of the policy the school principal will review the applications and determine eligibility.

If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official he may wish to discuss it in more detail with that official. If a parent wishes to review the ruling further after discussing it with the school, he has a right to a fair hearing. This can be done by making a request either orally or in writing to Patricia Bulger or Charles A. Knowles whose address is P.O. Box 1007, Columbiana, AL 35051.

Hearing procedures are outlined in the policy.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if the family size changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals, free meals or milk if the family income falls at or below the level shown above.

A complete copy of the policy is on file in each school and in the office of the Shelby County Board of Education, where it may be reviewed by any interested party.

Pelham Police kill rattlesnake

What do you do when you have an unexpected visitor for lunch? Call the Pelham Police--at least that's what Mrs. Alton Young on Hwy. 11 did Tuesday afternoon.

Her visitor was a rattlesnake.

PPD Lt. Charlie Brown answered Mrs. Young's call at 1:45. He found the snake trying to get under the side of her house. Not wanting to blast a hole in the house, Lt. Brown confronted the snake with a shovel.

The rattler lost.

Lt. Brown, who plans to have the snake skinned, said it was three feet long and about as big around as his arm at the elbow.

Stolen truck wrecked during police chase

A Blazer stolen from an Alabaster residence early Sunday morning was totaled following a high speed chase by police.

John Daniel Brasher of 1215 Navajo Trail was reportedly awakened from sleep at 3:18 a.m. when he heard the vehicle being driven away.

Police were alerted and the vehicle was spotted a few minutes later on County Road 270 by Sheriff's deputy Larry Doss. A high speed chase ensued and the deputy momentarily lost sight of the Blazer on one of the dirt roads in the Brantleyville area.

When he found the vehicle again, it was upside down on Coalmont Road and the driver had disappeared.

The juvenile who had stolen the car was later apprehended by Alabaster police Sgt. Larry Rollan and Helena police Sgt. Billy Hinds. He reportedly had only minor injuries.

The young man was arrested and charged with grand larceny auto.

The other two organizations are the Athletic Boosters, chaired by Bob Jacks, and the Band Boosters, chaired by Alice Amons.

Land rezoning draws crowd in Alabaster

A crowd of Alabaster residents was on hand last Thursday when the city's Planning and Zoning Board met to discuss rezoning land in the vicinity of Briarcliff Nursing Home.

Joe Murphy, who lives in the area, was present at Monday night's council meeting to find out about the status of the proposal and if the panel planned to take any action.

It was reported that no action was taken on the proposal submitted by property owner Don Latham because of objections to changing the designation of one 20 acre tract.

The parcel that area residents were opposed to is located on the east side of County Road 95 adjacent to the nursing home. Latham asked that it be changed from R-1 to M-1, making it available for light industry.

According to James Battles, chairman of the commission, the proposal was returned to Latham who will resubmit it at a later date.

When Murphy pressed about whether residents of the area would be notified about the next hearing, City Clerk Dot Henry said they would not as the new proposal would have no effect on them.

Area residents had no objections to rezoning two parcels of land for general business and the construction of townhouses.

Burglary suspects nabbed

Pelham police picked up two youths following the reported break in of an area residence Monday morning and found that the suspects had been involved in an Alabaster burglary the night before.

Police discovered a total of $884.74 on the two young men. The money had been stolen Sunday night from the Alabaster residence of Charles Carlton who operates Cannon Oil Service Station on Hwy. 31.

A search of the suspects' residence turned up a 32 calibre revolver and radio which were also taken in the Alabaster burglary.

The two juveniles, one 14 and the other 17, were charged with one count each of burglarizing an Alabaster residence and one count each of burglarizing a Pelham residence. One of the youths was also charged with carrying a concealed weapon and the other with violating the Alabama Uniform Controlled Substances Act.

According to Pelham Police Lieutenant Charles Brown, he picked up the suspects walking along County Road 52 after a woman reported two young men had entered her home.

Apparently they had thought no one was at home Brown said, and when the woman appeared, they ran out.

Pelham policeman Jerry Lewis assisted Brown in making the arrests. One of the suspects was reportedly carrying a knife with a blade 10-11 inches in length and the other had drugs in his possession.

Pelham police investigator Lt. Alan Wade and Sgt. Larry Rollan of the Alabaster Police Department are assisting with follow up investigations.

UM hires new basketball coach

Becky Glass, who played for the University of Montevallo, has returned to her alma mater to assume duties as head coach of the Lady Falcons' basketball team.

Coach Glass, a point guard on the '72-73 and '73-74 squads under current Women's Athletic Director Beverly Warren, replaces Melinda Voorhies, who resigned in July after guiding the Lady Falcons for five seasons.

Glass, a native of nearby Jemison, ran track for two years at Jemison High School, then attended Asbury College in Wilmore, Ky., for two years before transferring to Montevallo.

She received her degree in Physical Education in 1974, then taught at Jemison High School for three years. In addition to her teaching duties in science, she got her coaching start by working with the 8th-grade team in Jemison.

In addition to her basketball coaching at Montevallo, Coach Glass will teach some activity courses, aquatics, and first aid.

It is a new challenge for the 27-year-old coach, working on an intercollegiate level, but one she is looking forward to. "This is an opportunity I am glad to have, working with a different level of people," she says. "The player quality here will be better, but I'm sure the pressure to win will be greater as well."

Coach Warren, in announcing the hiring of her former player, noted "I believe Becky fits in well with the coaching ideas and philosophies we want to achieve for our athletic department at Montevallo, and we're pleased to have someone with her capabilities and experience join our staff."

Howard Hill shoot to be best in history

The 10th annual Howard Hill Invitation Archery Shoot will be held this weekend at the Creek Bowhunters Range in Vincent. Club Spokesmen claim that this year will be the biggest in the history of the club with more and bigger trophies presented to the sharpshooting archers.

Three times are available for bowhunters to quality for the awards. On Saturday, archers can shoot at either 9 a.m. or 2 p.m. On Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. the final qualifying will be held.

Special programs will be held during the two-day affair. On Saturday evening, starting at dark, Marvin Tye, director of the Alabama Wildlife Federation, will host a short talk on his work and the aim of the AWF. Then Pen Pearson bowhunting movies will be shown which have never been available in this area.

''Buffalo Bowhunting'' and ''Devils of the Desert'' are the titles of the films to be shown. Pearson was not only a good friend of the late Howard Hill, but also a frequent hunting companion.

Saturday night racing proves successful at Shelby Speedway

The first Saturday night race at Shelby Speedway was a success for both the drivers and the fans last weekend. Track manager Jerry Handley told the Reporter that fans witnessed the best racing of the year under the newly installed lights, and drivers took home the biggest purse of the year.

Gary Franklin won the Bomber feature. Bill Haggerty of Pelham was edged out at the finish line and settled for second place. Johnny Russell of Calera took third with Gordon Chamion of Chelsea fourth and Alabaster's Jim McDaniel fifth.

In the Bomber heat race, Haggerty took first, McDaniel second and Russell third. In the Consolidation race, Clyde Jones of Calera placed first with Russell second and Bobby Lucas of Calera third.

The Buggy division saw identical winners in both the feature and heat races. Bennie Brasher of Calera took home two first place checks. Bobby Carter won second in both and James Lowe finished third. Dennis Majors who last week totaled his car and ended up in the hospital was back at the track in a new car but had handling problems.

In the Modified division, Ronnie Gothard took first place in the heat race. Terry Wesley of Hueytown placed second and Greg Buse third. In the Feature race, Wesley claimed the checkered flag with Bennie Pickett crossing the line second and Gothard placing third.

Over $700 in prize money was awarded to the victors in Saturday night's races. Prizes were also awarded to the winners of the kid's, men's and women's foot races which were held.

Racing will again be held this Saturday night under the lights at Shelby Speedway with the gates opening at 5:30 and racing starting at 8 p.m.

Montevallo reveals winter rec program

The Montevallo Park and Recreation Department has announced the fall schedule of activities available for the residents of the town. Dot Bishop, coach at Montevallo High School and directing the activities told the Reporter Monday morning that a wide variety of activities will be available this fall.

A field of a least six volleyball teams will form a league which will play on Monday nights. Slimnastics will be held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

Swimming lessons will be given in the afternoons and Saturday mornings. Gymnastics classes will be held at 3:15 each afternoon during the week.

Also on tap for the fall program will be cheerleading skills held after school on weekdays. A bowling league will be formed and dominoes and bridge clubs will also be formed.

For more information about participating call Dot Bishop at 665-2626 or 665-7143.

School supporters bowl for donations

Valley and Riverchase Schools will again be bowling to benefit the PTO. Both schools have leagues which bowl at the Vestavia Lanes and all the prize money the teams win is donated to the PTO.

Last year, the 14 team Valley School league donated $1500 to the school while Riverchase's league $400 to its school's PTO.

This year Riverchase is expanding to 12 teams and will bowl on Monday evenings from 8:30 to 10:30 beginning September 10th. The league still needs couples and extra ment to complete the roster. Contact Don Hinds at 988-0522 or Joan Youngblood at 988-3149 for further information.

Valley's league will bowl on Friday mornings from 9:30 to 10:30 beginning September 7th. For more information contact Jane Reid at 663-2760 at Valley School at 663-3682.

Organizers of the league stress that talent is not a necessity; only the ability to have fun. Free babysitting services are available at Vestavia Lanes compliments of Manager Gwen Runyan.

If you're interested in bowling or just having fun with your neighbors, join a bowling league and support the school.

The Columbiana Recreation Program ended the summer season with a Showcase last Thursday evening, performed by the children who participate. Director Susan Harris and her assistant Donna Smith had their pupils ready for their first taste of show business, much to the delight of over 100 parents who attended.

Children in the different age groups performed skits, dances, sang and did tumbling routines. Parents also observed crafts their children had made during the 10 week summer program which is sponsored by the Columbiana Park and Recreation Board.

During the summer, more than 60 children participated in the program which held tournaments in various activities, but also had a regular movie of the week, games and contest. Watermellon and ice cream were served daily.

Presented trophies at the conclusion of the showcase were Steve Eger-Checkers, Kenneth Jones-Ping Pong, Paul Doughty-Field Day, and Kenneth Smith-Horseshoes.

Preschoolers tumble

Jody Brasher completes her tumbling run while Jennifer McDonald, Hayden Hill and Janie McDonald wait their turn. The pre-schoolers were the hit of the night in their various skits and stunts.

Daytona sets motorcycle race

An additional weekend of racing has been added to Daytona International Speedway's 1979 schedule of racing with the October 6-7 Daytona Pro-Am Motorcycle races.

The Daytona Pro-Am will be open to nine amateur classes and one professional class which will provide cycle racing fans with a preview of the March 9 Daytona 200.

The amateurs are scheduled to race thirteen heats and three finals over the two days of racing.

Speedway and American Motorcyclist Association are currently discussing the berits of allowing amateur riders to use the entire 3.87 mile, high banked Daytona 200 course or restricting them to the usual 1.3 mile infield circuit.

Prom night

You'll log for less with Thompson.

Like David Mickle of Opelika, Alabama does.

"I bought two Caterpillar 518 skidders from Thompson for a number of reasons.

First, the machine. It's built to last longer. I'll get five years from these machines, where I could expect maybe three from other skidders around.

It'll outdo all others in the woods. I don't know another skidder to stay with it.

Second, because of the resale value. I'll get my money back on a Caterpillar. Look around at the used skidder prices. It's smart to buy a machine that'll be worth something when trade-in time comes.

And because of Thompson Tractor. Their branch in Opelika is important to me. I get any part in less than 24 hours. And their field service is there when I need it.

Looking at the whole picture, you just save money when you buy a Caterpillar 518 skidder with Thompson."

Scrimmages give insight to team's future

by Richard Crosby

After three weeks of practice, the casual observer of county football should be able to see the light at the end of the tunnel as far as their favorite team goes.Most teams in the county have already held several scrimmages and from the looks of things, we're in for another great season.

Shelby County High will be surprising this season both with speed and size. While Coach Conkle bemoans this is his smallest team since he's been at Chelsea, you can bet the Hornets will have a nasty sting.

Montevallo is still a mystery as far as the offensive game plan goes. I expect the Bulldogs to return to a power formation based on the talent they inherited from Shelby Academy.

Pelham will field its biggest and probably toughest team. The Panthers are the team to watch this year and if early indication can be a guide, they may become the 'Team of the Year'.

Thompson is small and not that quick this year. But knowing the Warriors they'll post an impressive season just to prove me wrong.

Elsewhere around the county you can look for Coosa Valley and Shelby Academy to take their lumps. It's still uncertain which will have the worst year but things don't look good for the private schools.

Vincent may just sneak up and make the area playoffs for the first time in a bunch of years. The Jackets have a lot of familiar faces and that will serve them well.

This last week of practice will be the toughest yet for county athletes so go by practice and lend your support.

UM to host tennis clinic

Dr. Bal Moore, nationally-famous tennis coach at Jefferson State Junior College in Birmingham, will conduct the Second Annual University of Montevallo Tennis Clinic here at the UM courts on Saturday, Sept. 29.

Dr. Moore also led the first clinic, back in March of this year.

The clinic is designed primarily for men and women high school tennis teachers and coaches, with the purpose of improving their teaching and coaching techniques. It is a participation clinic, with a limit of 30 applications, so an early reservation is encouraged. To reserve a place, contact Jennette Crew at the University of Montevallo at 205-665-2521, ext. 398 or 410.

Registration begins Saturday morning at 9:30. At 10, Dr. Moore will demonstrate strokes and drills for the forehand, backhand, and serve. At 1, he will go over the volley and the overhead, and at 3, he will discuss singles and doubles strategy.

Dr. Moore won over 50 championships as an undergraduate.

He has had head coaching experience since 1960, conducted numerous camps, and won several coaching awards. He has also turned out several All-American players and had his Jefferson State teams ranked no lower than 8th in each of the past 11 years.

UM hires assistant coach

Former Auburn University of Montgomery cage star Terry Sellers has joined the University of Montevallo men's basketball staff as assistant coach for the 1979-80 season.

Sellers, a native of Dothan, replaces Eddie Barnes who accepted the head basketball job at Cottonwood High School recently. Barnes served Montevallo as assistant coach for three seasons.

During the 1978-79 year, he was head coach at Hardaway High School in Columbus, Ga., leading a team with only one returning letterman to eight wins in their last ten games for a final 10-15 record.,

Sellers is eager to begin his work at Montevallo. "One reason I accepted the offer is that, while playing against them, I was always impressed with Coach (Bill) Elder and the Montevallo teams, and I know it's a good program. Plus, this is an opportunity perhaps to get into college coaching, which I really want to do."

When questioned about coaching against his alma mater this year, Sellers chuckled. "I think a lot of the folks at AUM; they sure helped me out a lot. However, I suppose I'll probably want to beat them as bad as anyone else we play."

The 26-year-old coach is married to the former Cathy Cooper of Hayneville, and they are expecting their first child some time this fall.

Magnum shotguns are useful, not necessary

I never thought the so-called magnum was a necessary harvest tool of the American big game hunter. Souped-up magnum cartridges just aren't necessary for bagging whitetail, mule and blacktail deer, our most abundant big game mammals. The "regular" rifle is sufficient for collecting pronghorns, peccaries, wild boars, black bears, mountain goats, elk and sheep. I will say that more grizzlies, Kodiak or Alaskan brown bears (just big grizzlies) and moose have been taken with standard rifle ammo in the past century and a half than with the magnum rifle cartridge.

To me, magnum, so far as shooting circles and gossip are concerned, is a word that has a masculine ring. A friend of mined always has to mention every hunting season how his 7 mm. magnum "outwhams" the popguns of his hunting club members. I've never seen him kill but two deer.

Oh, I've shot the magnum and the kick doesn't bother me. But I'm practical and will tackle anything with my 8 mm. sporter and my own handloads. I'm not criticizing you if you now own a magnum rifle. Use it judiciously and it will serve you and your grandchildren. Super pressures and super velocities rapidly reduce a barrel's accurate life.

While I don't own one, the 20-gauge magnum would be my first choice, especially in an oveer-and-under or side-by-side double. With the 3-inch shotshell in the chamber you would have the same wallop as you would get witha 12-gauge regular load. You could always use regular loads for small game. And the 20-gauge is light and easy to handle.

Harvesting deer the right way

For Better Hunting & Fishing

by Earl Franklin Kennamer

"We don't care if you do recommend shooting spike bucks. We're not going to kill them!"

You may be that person who told me this a decade or so ago after I had conducted a deer management course to members of an active deer hunting club in west Alabama. In fact, one of the more vociferous "deer" experts of one club told me "that anyone dropping a spike on a drive would be kicked out of the club!"

Thankfully, that attitude has changed somewhat in Alabama. And many who ridiculed my suggestions that we also take unantlered (doe) deer have admitted their error in opposing my recommendations. Unfortunately, the Alabama Conservation Department has just started a push emphasis on reducing the deer herds. Such an educational program should have begun statewide several years back when I tried to battle the overwhelming odds.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's Kerr Wildlife Management Area has conducted intensive nutrition and genetic studies to disprove the old wive's tale "that protecting spike-antlered bucks would enable them to grow up and become heavy antlered bucks."

The spike--a weazened, usually small deer with single, possibly misshapen rods of hard material protruding from its skull--is usually suffering from malnutrition. More important, hunting-wise, the spike buck may be the birth result of poor genetic make-up. Would a cattleman want to buy a young breeding bull that seemed "runty," or poorly developed? Of course not, unless the trend leaned toward beeves you could ship whole in shoe boxes!

In other works, spike bucks allowed to live may eventually become the "fathers" of a stunted, overcrowded deer herd in a few years. This spike buck dominance could well become commonplace, especially when deer hunters seek to bag only the choicest bucks with rocking chair racks. Many still or tree stand hunters in the past have passed up small deer--especially spikes--hoping that big 14-pointer will trot by and eventually hang on the living room wall.

These are the trophy hunters, and let's face it, the folks who keep taxidermists in business. These trophy hunters don't fret if they passed up three or four spikes and then finished the season "deerless." I'm totally different in that if I see a legal deer -- BANG! One or two boned carcasses tucked away in my freezer and the deer hunting urge decreases. In fact, I believe spike bucks provide better meat than some old rutting bucks, so I never pass up a spike.

I think the deer situation was more vivid when only Indians lived here. The whitetail was to the Creeks and Cherokees what the buffalo was to the Sioux and Shawnees in the West. Deer was beef. Numbers of deer in the days of Columbus were far below the population today. Forests were made up of old trees, so available forage for deer was lacking. Today's forest management practices provide for more deer food through selective cutting and even clear cutting in very small tracts. Too, cattle farming provides for more food for livestock, but deer thrive on those cattle grasses and legumes.

However, even in Indian days, deer were overcrowded, but the number of Indians was but a fraction of the total human population today. The Indian was definitely a better hunter than any of us today. Why? He didn't punch a clock or carry around a briefcase. He spent his days hunting for meat to feed his tribe. And meat was always in demand. If there was a surplus, it was dried into jerky.

The clincher of all my historical meandering is that I'm sure the Indian hunter never ignored a spike buck that wandered within bow range!

The forked-antler buck--two prongs arising from each antler on a young animal--is more desirable as a sire for the deer herd. In fact, the forked-antler buck may be even younger than spike bucks in the same herd. In controlled feeding experiments, seven and 8-point bucks have been produced before the animals were a year old. On the other hand, I also know of cases of teeth-aged spikes here in Alabama that were 2½ years old.

Kerr Wildlife Management experiments show that spikes are nutritionally inferior and will not match the antler or body growth of a forked-antler buck even when put on the same rations. Researchers say that spike bucks should be harvested because spikes are simply inferior deer which will not improve the herd. Presence of spike bucks is an indicator of nutritional problems.

If Alabama's herds now number an estimated 1.2 million deer, there must be numerous spikes present.

Don't pass them by in the hopes you may get a shot at a 12-pointer!

The Vincent Women's Auxiliary deserves a big applause for the dinner they cooked up for the first Shelby County Coaches Association meeting that was held August 8th. Vincent annually holds the first meeting of the year and always serves steaks.

That's a meal that is hard to beat by the other schools during the year and this year it may be tougher than ever. Beside the steak, salad, baked potatoe and rolls, the women served up some homemade ice cream that is sure to be showing on the beltlines of county coaches.

It was a great meal gals!

It was payoff time last Friday at Chelsea High School. Coaches Conkle, Sims and Statum were treated to dinner at Lloyd's by yours truly. Some bad bets the past two years were finally paid off much to the chagrin of my wallet.

Next time I wager against those folks it'll be for a coke or bag of popcorn.

* * * *

You just can't wear the right colors to please everyone. During the past two weeks, football teams from around the county have been posing for pictures during breaks in practice. Inevitably, I took Thompson's pictures wearing green and gold, Pelham's wearing maroon and gray, Shelby Academy's wearing red and white, Montevallo's wearing green and white and Chelsea's wearing navy and orange.

The result was everywhere I went players asked if I was 'For' another school. It's hard to explain that I was just wearing what was in the closet. Guess I'll have to buy something that is either multi-colored or some color not used by schools. That would be a hard color to come up with. Maybe pink will do?

* * * *

Football kicks off with the first games of the season next Thursday night. Thompson and Jemison will have their annual grudge match while Calera will host West Blocton at Oliver Park.

On Friday night all county teams will see action. There should be some good crowds attending both the Thursday and Friday night games around the county. Most of the onlookers might be coaches getting in some early scouting for future games.

* * * *

Don't forget that admission to county football games will cost you more this season. The principals of the county along with the coaches raised the admission prices to $3 for adults and $2 for students. The raise was approved last spring at the end of school.

Like everything else, it cost more for electricity and equipment. Football helmets alone have doubled in recent years and many companies have stopped manufacturing them all together. In a column written a year ago, I reported that most companies had gone out of the helmet business because of lawsuits filed against the companies by schools and parents whose athletes or children suffered injuries while wearing the headgear.

Despite that the helmets were not defective in manufacture, just the fact thay they were worn held the companies responsible for the injuries received.

Hopefully laws will interpret in a more sensible manner in the future. Insurance premiums paid by helmet manufacturers to guard against these types of suits are the main cause of the rise in prices of equipment.

Well, thought you might appreciate a little inside scoop to justify the increased gate admission prices.

KIRK ROSS

Calera youth rides waves on plain old boat paddle

by Patsy Ross

Have you ever heard the old cliche from your kids, "I don't have anything to play with!"?

I heard it many times when mine were young. Now that they're older I hear "I don't have anything to do!", even when there are hundreds of jobs I could name on the spot, here at home.

Not so at the lake, however. My son, Kirk, finds plenty to do. When he tires of skiing one way, he tries another.

Several years ago, Kirk was jumping the wake, popping his ski onto the water as he enjoyed doing, when it popped half into, to our dismay. Rather irritated, my husband said emphatically, "You broke it, you ski on it!" He rounded it off a little on the end to get rid of splinters, and there Kirk went. He had no problem skiing on it, to our surprise, and he loved it.

Later on we bought him a pair of "Dog Bone" skis, which he mastered readily. But then he had heard of someone skiing on a boat paddle and decided to try his skill with one. After a few falls he finally mastered the art of getting up on it, and supplied us with a lot of good laughs.

Some folks don't believe us when we say Kirk skis on a boat paddle. He's modest enough about it; if one of his school friends asks him if he can ski, he says, "A little," which is true, after all.

This is not Kirk's ultimate goal. He wants to try "ice trays" next, and then "barefoot" skiing.

Seniors have 'Ball'

Faye Baker decided it would be fun to do something for Shelby County's senior citizens, so she decided to throw a ball.

Mrs. Baker and her husband, Jack recently purchased Valley Junction Barbecue and Restaurant in Dry Valley near Montevallo, so she set up the dining room and sent out the word to the senior citizens groups in the county.

Cooperating in the venture were the nurses from Home Health Care Agency of North Alabama, whose offices in Vincent are shared with Lena Wright of the county program on aging. Sue Tedford, who heads up the county program, helped spread the word, and almost 100 senior citizens came from all parts of the county.

The O.J. McCall band "The Loners" donated their services for an evening of toe-tapping country and standard music selections. Various food suppliers donated refreshments. The seniors danced into the evening.

Mrs. Tedford presided in brief introductions, and Mrs. Ralph Sears welcomed the group to the Montevallo area on behalf of Mayor Ralph Sears, who was hospitalized at Shelby Memorial and unable to attend.

Sponsors and organizers

Helping to plan and organize the party for senior citizens at Valley Junction were from left, Joanne Bowman, hostess; Annette Garrison, Pat Lucas and Billie Jo Garrett, all registered nurses with Home Health Care Agency of North Alabama; Faye Baker and Jack Baker, who were sponsors of the event and donated use of their restaurant.

Watch out for gasoline expolsions

It is estimated that there are between 40 and 45 million households in the United States having at least one gasoline powered appliance and one gasoline container. There are approximately eight million inboard and outboard engine powered boats in the United States. These figures indicate that there are at least 50 million gas containers in use by consumers, with about 10 million being purchased annually.

If gasoline must be stored, it should be stored only in approved safety cans which have flame arresters and pressure-release valves. Never siphone gasoline by mouth. A few drops can kill if gasoline gets into the lungs. A hand operated pump should be used for siphoning gas.

For safer practices when handling flammable liquids, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission recommends:

- Never use flammable liquids near a flame or ignition source.
- Do not refuel powered equipment when engines are running or hot.
- Always remember that the vapors of flammable liquids, which may be invisible, can be easily ignited.
- Use only manufacturer-recommended fuels in camping stoves and lanterns.
- Read and follow instructions for operating camping equipment.
- Never add gasoline or fuel to a fire once it has started.
- If gasoline is spilled on your clothes, change clothes immediately.
- Use a safety can to transport fuel for stoves and lamps.

Alabaster shoemaker attracts wide trade

Like new

James S. Smith, at the City Shoe Shop in Alabaster, works to make this old ragged shoe look new. He's been repairing shoes for over 36 years and has sewing machines that were manufactured as far back as 1932. (Photo by Sims)

by Lisa Sims

Remember the story of the old cobbler who awakened one morning and discovered that elves had finished his shoes during the night?

Mr. James S. Smith, at the City Shoe Shop in Alabaster, doesn't need elves--he's been making and repairing shoes for over 36 years.

Sitting in his little shop behind a 1909 cash register, Smith talks about how he started in the shoe business. Outside, traffic streams non-stop on Highway 31.

"See, my uncle was in this line of business, and I just kinda took to it right off. I really loved the work," Smith remembers.

As an apprentice under his uncle, Smith learned the basics of his trade. 12 employers later, he felt he was ready for his own shop.

But Smith says he doesn't regret working under so many different people.

"When you work for that many people, you learn more different ways of doing things....that plus a few ideas of my own," he says.

Smith says he likes Shelby County and doing work in a small town.

"It's different when you work in a small town; you learn the people. When I worked in Birmingham, I couldn't do that," Smith explains.

Just about then, an old construction worker comes into the shop, carrying a cherished leather belt.

"How much you charge me for fixin this?" he questions Smith.

After examining the damage, Smith answers, "A dollar."

"I don't have that much with me. Can you fix it and let me pay you next week?" the old timer asks.

"You make sure you bring me my dollar," Smith warns as he pounds tacks into the leather.

"Yes sir," the man sounds back, as he straps the belt on and leaves.

"He'll bring me that dollar; I just know he will," Smith smiles.

"I'd like to express my appreciation to the Shelby County people--they've sure been good to me. Sure, they need me, but I've needed them too."

"I tell you, it's a good feeling to have someone bring in an old ragged pair of shoes for me to fix 'em. Makes a person feel proud when they come to pick 'em up and can't even pick 'em out," Smith beamed.

People from inside the county and out of it, go to great lengths to have Smith repair their shoes.

"Why, I've got people that come to me from as far down as Thorsby, and as far over as Brent and Centreville," the cobbler says.

He bends over and picks up a soft leather shoe.

"Now this is a real expensive shoe. Just needed a little work done on it. Belongs to one of those Cardwells--you know, Cardwell Furniture?"

"The reason shoemakers are so scarce is because this work takes--I'd say--at least four years to learn. A boy can work at a grocery store and make more money than I do in the first year. That's why when an old shoemaker dies out, there's no one to take his place," Smith stressed.

Smith likes to think of the shoes he works on as being the people they belong to.

"I remember when Judge Fowler, you know Conrad Fowler, he brought me one pair of shoes first. He wears good shoes, and I don't blame him for just bringing me one pair the first time--to kinda feel me out on 'em, you know. Well, after that first pair, I guess I fixed around fifty pair for him. Fix 'em for his son, too," Smith boasts.

Smith is taking a vacation this week, to be with his nine-year-old son, Sammy Joe.

"Yeah, I think he might take a liking to shoe work, too. I'd be happy if he did."

Train hits her bumper; she keeps on driving

by David Moore

You might call her unlucky, or you might call her lucky. It depends on how you look at things.

A woman driving a car was hit by a train at the L & N grade in Pelham crossing Tuesday a week ago. In this respect, the unidentified woman driver was unlucky. But she was lucky that she was not killed.

A witness to the accident reports that late in the afternoon a woman drove around the closed signal gates on Hwy. 52 and a southbound locomotive swatted her rear bumper. The woman did not stop.

Pelham police speculate that the woman might have thought no train was coming since those particular gates had remained closed for some 45 minutes several days before while a train was stopped a short way down the track.

Police speculate, too, that the next time the woman comes to a grade crossing, she will exercise more caution and heed the warning to stop, look and listen. Next time she is unlucky, she might not be so lucky.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Battery business saves customers money

Sooner or later it's bound to happen to you.

You get in your car, turn the key and all that happens is you hear a few sluggish groans from the starter. "Dead battery," you moan.

After digging the jumper cables out of the trunk and finally starting the car, you have two choices about what to do:

1.) You can go to most any department store or parts store and buy a battery. Of course this is taking the chance that your problem is indeed the battery and not, say, the alternator, in which case you have a new battery, but still have your old problem.

Or, 2.) you can go to Battery Distributors in Pelham, find out if the problem is truly your battery, get the job done properly, and save money to boot.

"We go at our business in a professional manner," says one of Battery Distributor's family owners, Dave Crumpton. "If you need a battery, we tell you. If not, we tell you what you do need.

"There's plenty of business out there without sticking customers with something they don't really need," Crumpton adds.

Battery Distributors sell Gould batteries warehouse direct wholesale prices. As the country's second largest battery manufacturer, Gould has been a leader in battery research and development for over 50 years, and makes batteries for J.C. Penney, Western Auto, Motor Craft, Union 76 and Caterpiller.

At Battery Distributors you can get a battery for just about anything but airplanes and railroad engines.

"I'm selling one of the best batteries at wholesale price," Crumpton points out. "It's not a second, It hasn't been sitting around on the shelf for two year. This is a good battery.

We buy from the manufactor and sell at wholesale. The public can buy at the prices a parts house pays." This means a savings of $15-$20 on a quality battery.

But that's not all you save. When you do business with Battery Distributors, you save yourself a lot of trouble. Your charging system is checked--free. The battery is load tested and checked--free. And installation is (you guessed it)--free. Furthermore, Battery Distributors will buy junk batteries from you, thus adding to you savings.

Put simply, Crumpton says, "We're the kind of place a guy who travel or works can say to his wife, 'Run down and get a battery."

While you're at Battery Distributors, you can also buy Goodyear's line of Republic tires from Cash and Carry, any auto parts the average do-it-yourselfer might need from Cash and Carry Auto Parts, or have your car renovated by Cash and Carry Auto Clean.

We get a lot of repeat customers and referrals," says Crumpton. "We've built this business on customer relations. What it boils down to is we've got the best prices on everything, and we go out of our way to help people, be fair and do the job right."

Battery Distributors and Cash and Carry are located in Pelham on Hwy. 31 South, next to Ken Terry Chevrolet. When you need a new battery, you can call them at 663-4908, 663-0000 or 663-0093. They're open 8-6 Monday-Friday, 8-5 Saturday and 10-3 on Sunday.

Card of Thanks

IN MEMORY
In memory of Mrs. Ida Jane Dupree, who passed away August 13, 1978.

We love you
Your children, Lillie Dean, Jack Dupree, Lois Dupree, and Lola Cannady.
Also grandchildren Rhonda Gerhardt, Sheri Boaz, Anita Cannady and Randy Cannady

In Memory of Lake Harris

Five years have passed now,
He left a memory of himself
A sweet and happy one
He left an afterglow of smiles
When his life was done
He left an echo whispering
Softly down the ways
Of happy times and laughing times
Of bright and sunny days
He would like the tears of we who grieve
To dry before the sun
Oh what sweet and precious memories he left
When his life was done
Son even tho it's been 5 years since you
Went away the pain is still so hard to bear
Your dear memories are so great
We all have some to share.

NOW HOSPITAL CARE WITHOUT THE HOSPITAL!

Brookwood Medical Center Invites You to the Opening of the AMBULATORY CARE CENTER Sunday, August 26, at 2:00 p.m.

EMERGENCY MEDICINE DEPARTMENT CARE—Competent, caring Emergency Department personnel stand ready to help patients during times and crisis.

PAIN MANAGEMENT CENTER - Many individuals suffer from chronic, intractable pain. This realization prompted Brookwood to include a Pain Management Center within the Ambulatory Care Center.

AMBULATORY SURGERY DEPARTMENT - One of the primary purposes of the Ambulatory Care Center is providing patients with Same Day Surgery on an out-patient basis.

Brookwood Medical Center's Ambulatory Care Center represents a totally new concept in health care, offering a cost-effective alternative to conventional hospitalization. The philosophy of ambulatory services involves both treating illnesses and instigating preventive medicine programs entirely on an outpatient basis - providing substantial cost savings to patients, employers and insurance companies.

The ambulatory concept was a bold one for its time when first conceived by the Board of Directors in 1972, even before the opening of Brookwood Hospital. Yet, it fits squarely with today's economics and public concern that quality health care costs should be controlled.

Two key services housed in the Ambulatory Care Center are the Brookwood Ambulatory Surgery Department and the Brookwood Medical Inn.

The Brookwood Ambulatory Surgery Department will have the capability of providing estimated savings of $1.5 million annually in hospital room costs alone. Its Same Day Surgery program is expected to replace the need for hospitalization in as many as 25% of surgical procedures.

The Brookwood Medical Inn, a comfortable 47-room guest hotel, complements the Same Day Surgery program and other ambulatory services by providing less expensive overnight accommodations to patients wishing to be near their physicians and hospital facilities during outpatient treatment. Resulting savings in overnight hospital stay costs of approximately $350,000 could be realized from this service alone.

Also located in the Ambulatory Care Center is Brookwood's new Emergency Medicine Department. The department is almost double the size of the existing facility and is newly equipped with telemetry.

All programs housed in the Ambulatory Care Center work toward early diagnosis and prevention. The Pain Management Center takes a physical and psychological approach to the treatment of pain. The Executive Health Center allows companies to take a deliberate step toward safeguarding the health of key personnel. And the community educational programs offered by the Center are developed toward preventive care and maintenance of health living habits.

Ambulatory medicine is the national trend in sensible, economic health care. Brookwood Medical Center is bringing this alternative to the people of Birmingham.

Pelham bank wins Columbiana branch

Shelby Bank has been granted permission to establish a branch banking facility in Columbiana.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation's regional office in Atlanta authorized the board of directors of the Pelham based Shelby Bank to proceed with plans to construct a new branch bank building in Columbiana.

The written authorization was received last week by Shelby Bank president Ken Kirkland and the chairman of the bank's board of directors, Doug Ballard.

Construction will begin early this fall, according to Bob Litton, vice president of the bank.

The new Columbiana branch bank will cover some 1600 square feet and will be constructed of brick. It will provide full service banking including safe deposit boxes. Banking hours will be 9 am to 6 pm daily and 9 am until noon on Saturdays. It will be located 200 feet east of the intersection of state highways 70 and 25 in the northwest corner of the Davis Plaza Shopping Center.

Plans call for the new facility to open its doors late in 1979 or early 1980.

Shelby Bank began serving Shelby County in July, 1972. It now has 21 employees.

A recent release by the Birminham Regional Planning commission shows Shelby Bank to have the highest percentage of growth of any bank in the BirminghamMetropolitan Statistical area. Its current assests are more than $13 million.

Officers of the bank are: Kenyon R. Kirkland, president; William B. Watson, Jr., senior vice president and cashier; Robert B. Litton, vice president-director of marketing; Mary F. Ware, assistant vice president, loan administration; Diane P. Mathieu, operations officer.

The bank's board of directors is comped of: Douglas H. Ballard, chairman, Ben F. Grubbs, Kenyon r. Kirkland, Roy L. Martin, Lloyd, A. Rafalsky, Charles A. Speir, B.H. Wells, Louie P. Wilson and Paul Yeager.

Judge turned away from tour of jail

by Marcia M. Sears

Conflicting reports of an incident at the new Shelby County jail last Sunday evening underscore what is apparently a widening rift between the sheriff and the probate judge.

According to Probate Judge Tommy Snowden, he and Commissioner Jimmie "Jake" Morris were refused admittance to the jail when they showed up Sunday evening to lead the architects of the building on a tour of the jail.

Snowden and Morris arrived early, and after Jail Administrator Wayne Lucas told them the sheriff had left orders that no one could get in, they went over to the probate office in the courthouse. Snowden told the Reporter that when the architects arrived at the jail they too, were refused admittance until Architect Al Dampier telephoned Sheriff Buddy Glasgow. They were then admited.

Representatives of the architectural firm of Heery and Heery of Atlanta, who designed the jail, were in the county at Snowden's request to try to suggest ways in which the detention facility could be operated at less cost.

Snowden told the Reporter he had sent the sheriff a copy of the letter arranging a Monday meeting with the Commission and asking for the tour. He also said he had talked with Chief deputy James Jones on the Wednesday before and Jones had indicated there would be no problem with the tour.

But Sheriff Glasgow said he had not received any request for a tour and he had standing orders that no one be admitted at the jail "All he would have to do was call me," Glasgow said.

Snowden says, "I don't understand it. Buddy and I used to be like this (demonstrating the sign of two fingers close together), but now I haven't talked with him for two months. He won't return my calls."

Glasgow pointed out 'I didn't have but two people up there, (jailers on duty). When Al called me, I said, "okay", after telling the jailer to be sure of security."

The next day at the 1:30 scheduled meeting of the architects and the County Commission, at which time the architects gave their report, only Chief Deputy James Jones represented the sheriff's department. Neither Sheriff Glasgow nor administrator Wayne Lucas attended.

Land developers file lawsuit to test Planning Commission

A lawsuit challenging the legality of the statute establishing the Shelby county planning commission was filed in U.S. District Court on August 9.

Brought by Albert Keller and W.E. Whitlock, the suit avers that the Planning Commission members are acting illegally in enforcing subdivision and other regulations. The suit takes the stand that the Cates Act, No. 816, under which the Commission operates, was never legally approved by the voters of Beat 12 Shelby County, where the plaintiffs are seeking to develop subdivision properties.

Whitlock appeared before the Shelby County governing body on at least two occasions this spring, complaining of the regulations regarding drainage and street conditions that the Planning Commission was telling him to follow. At the time he threatened to take the matter to federal court.

Defendants in the suit are the members of the Planning Commission, James W. Huckaby, Earl Bailey, Joe Garity, Roland Henson, Albert Hylton, Steve Smitherman, and Marvin Burnett; County Planner Paul T. Owen; Probate Judge Thomas Snowden, County Commissioners J.E. Bearden, Jake Morris, Harold Davenport and J. Alpha Lowe; County Engineer James Ray, Jr., and Subdivision Inspector Alfred Jones.

County won't pay Talladega beer tax

Shelby County beer drinkers will not be subsidizing Talladega County after all.

At a meeting of heads of several county governments and a representative of the State Department of Revenue, it was agreed that the tax affecting counties other than Talladega, could not be collected.

The tax was passed during the last days of the Legislature Legislative session and levied a tax on all beer sold from Talladega County warehouses. Since several other counties including Shelby are serviced from those warehouses, an alarm went out that the others would have to pay the tax, but all the benefits would go to Talladega.

However, because the bill as passed was quite different from the bill as advertised, there is general agreement it would not stand up in court, and Probate Judge Forrest Killough of Talladega County was advised in last week's meeting not to collect the tax for other counties.

United Federal S & L moves to new building

The new Columbiana Branch office of United Federal Savings and Loan Association will open for business Friday, August 31. It is moving from its former location on Main Street to Davis Plaza on College Street.

Grand opening activities are scheduled for the Wednesday after Labor Day with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at noon.

The ribbon will be made of money, and it will be donated to a local charity. Open house festivities will continue through Friday, September 7 with refreshments and several prizes offered.

Manager of the new Columbiana office is Donnie Wyatt. Rita Akers and Vicki Langston are the tellers-savings counselors.

The new office is built of brick and features over 1600 square feet of office space, a drive-in window and off-street parking. Designed by John Milner of CIDCO Company, Dothan, it was built by Vinzant Construction Company of Clanton, decorated by Jean Hill of Atlanta and landscaped by Central Alabama Turf Grass Company of Harpersville.

Office hours will be from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, and from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. on Fridays.

United Federal Savings and Loan is Alabama's fifth largest savings and loan association and has other offices in Alabaster, Dothan, Eufaula, Ozark, and Riverchase. The Shelby county offices have contributed importantly to the local economy through their lending of more than $7 million to borrowers to buy and build homes, in home improvement loans, and in second mortgage loans to be used for many personal reasons. These funds provide work and business activity for all parts of the region's business community.

Johnny Williams is Area Manager for the Shelby county region. The Alabaster office is managed by Neal Phillips and employs Judy Langston, Patsy Leach, and Nelda Hunt as Tellers/Savings counselors. Debbie Brannon, Branch Manager, and Delejda Roe, loan processor, staff the Riverchase Branch of United Federal.

United Federal's Shelby County Advisory Board is composed of W.M. Farris, Real Estate Developer, Alabaster; Judge James H. Sharbutt, Circuit Judge, Columbiana; Wales W. Wallace, Jr., Attorney, Columbiana; Dr. Milton L. Orr, Jr., Dentist, Montevallo; and Z.S. Cowart, Sr., retired pharmacist, Calera.

What pickle?

Wearing an expression that seems to read, "What pickel?," Chris Turner samples his lunch before taking a seat with rest of his third grade class at Valley Elementary. Also on Tuesday's lunch menu (now 65¢ county-wide) were carrots, grilled cheese, chocolate pudding and milk. Chris is the son of Pete and Diane Turner of Pelham. (Photo by Moore)

Coosa jury declares Phillip Hope guilty

by David Moore

A Coosa County jury has convicted Phillip Stanley Hope of first degree murder in the drowning death of Louie Earl Jones. The conviction was read Friday afternoon in Rockford by Circuit Judge James H. Sharbutt after two hours and twenty mintues of deliberation by the jury.

Hope was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Prosecuting for the state were assistant district attorney Patti Smith and assistant attorney general Don Valeska of Montgomery.

"If you allow this murderer to go free, then justice will have been only half served," proclaimed Valeska to the jury, waving a pointed finger over Hope's head.

Phillip Hope, 24, is the second Hope brother from Shelby convicted in the March, 1978 murder of Jones, 25, also of Shelby. Bobby Joe Hope, 30, was sentenced to life in prison last December by the Shelby County circuit court.

Karl Harrison and Sonny Conwill, attorneys for the defense, sought and received a change of venue for Phillip Hope earlier this year due to publicity surrounding the trial of Bobby Joe Hope.

Tuesday and Wednesday of the trial went much the same as the first Hope trial. But Thursday, the defense introduced five new witnesses.

Ronald Cox and Randy Collum testified that in the early morning hours of the day of the murder, they heard Donald Edge come in Chuck and Betty's Bar and admit to killing Jones.

Paulette Horton, who worked at the bar, testified that she heard Edge admit to killing too, and that later she told a Shelby County sheriff's deputy, but could not identify which deputy it was.

Edge testified that he never walked in the bar and said he killed Jones.

Edge, Terry More, the two Hope brothers, Jones and his girlfriend, Tammy Molten (now Tammy Ratcliff), were all on a hill near the public boat launch on the Waxahatchee Creek shortly before the murder, around 11 p.m. the night of March 24, 1978.

Molten testified that she saw Phillip Hope beat on Jones. Edge took Molten, who was crying, away from the scene because she did not want to see what was happening.

State toxicologist James Burtram testified earlier in the trial that Jones' face had been beaten and that the beating must have happened before he was drowned.

On Thursday, Debbie Busby, who was living with the Hopes at the time of the murder, was Architects call county jail 'national model'

by Marcia M. Sears

The architects who designed the Shelby County jail had their day - again - on Monday when they talked with the Shelby County Commission about operations within the new structure.

The architects were called to Columbiana by the Commission and Judge Tommy Snowden who were concerned over the high costs of operating the jail.

"You have emerged with what is a national model. If I had to re-design it today, I don't know how I could change it for the better," is what architectural consultant Olen Minton told the Commission.

He talked at length about the legal changes the courts have forced on jail and prison management since the early 1970's and said the new Shelby County jail meets every single standard for jails in the new standards published by the American Correctional Association.

Minton served with the federal prison system for 23 years, 10 of them as a prison warden. Now he is a consultant and worked with Heery and Heery of Atlanta, one of the architectural firms that designed the Shelby County jail.

He said the facility "embodies all of the new thinking." He noted that all inmates now have to be housed in individual rooms and all cells have to be grouped in clusters with day room space. Space must also be allowed for educational religious and athletic facilities for prisoners. All these are in the county jail, he said.

He said that three people should be on duty at all times - barring emergencies - a guard in the control center; a person to book new prisoners, and a person on the floor to watch or care for the prisoners.

A civilian food supervisor is also essential, Minton said, to purchase food and see that inmates and staff do not walk off with supplies.

When Judge Snowden pressed Minton to suggest ways to save money in the jail's operation, Minton suggested several items:

Look into hiriing an outside vendor to supply the food. One sheriff he knows found it cheaper than hiring his own food supervisor.

Press hard to find volunteers to assist. Every jail needs a program director to schedule classes and activities. That person might be a volunteer, and could also get teachers and others to volunteer in programs for inmates.

"If you get their minds off their confinement, there will be less damage to the facilities," he said.

Snowden wanted to know about the possibilities of closing the administrative wing where the secretaries work and the sheriff's offices are located. Snowden mentioned the high cost of utilities in that area for only about 5-6 people during the day shift. Minton said some might be able to work in the jail area, but it would b e impractical for some for security reasons. Architect Merrell Elam mentioned moving the office staff to the present courthouse building as an alternative.

Chief Deputy James Jones, who attended the meeting, said the women employees are paid as matrons, but are actually clerical workers. "In no way could they work in the jail."

In considering the suggestions, in light of the county's present financial crisis, Snowden closed the meeting by saying, "What we're trying to do is help the sheriff serve the people better."

Other architects at the meeting besides Ms. Elam and Mr. Minton were Al Dampier of the Alabaster firm of Dampier and Harris, and Larry Lord of Heery and Heery of Atlanta. Roy Hobbs, the local supervisor of the jail construction also attended the meeting.

Plea issued...

Save special playground

by Reporter Staff

Educators in charge of the county's special education program are asking that the general public not use the special playground equipment that was installed for the handicapped children.

The playground is fenced in, adjacent to the former Columbiana Elementary School, where the Special Education headquarters are now housed.

Dr. Linda Nolen, Coordinator of Special Education and Beverly Hall, supervisor of the mentally retarded told the Reporter that neighborhood children have been slipping over the fence and playing on the equipment.

Because of the special nature and expense of the playground, they are asking that parents of non-handicapped children try to find other places for their children to play.

Among the special pieces of equipment are double slides, balance beams attached to parallel bars and sand canals which are set up off the ground so wheel chairs can roll under them and give the handicapped child a chance to play with sand.

The equipment cost in the neighborhood of $3,500 plus another $1,500 for fencing and installation, according to school officials.

It is the first such playground that has been available for Shelby County's handicapped children. The school system is proud of the acquisition and hopes everyone will cooperate in observing its proper use.

Waxahatchee murder flown in from Chicago to testify that the two brothers came home around 12:30 a.m. March 25 and sat up talking.

Two fishermen, camping on the Waxahatchee that night, testified that around the time of the murder, they saw three men in the creek. One of the men, they said, was begging for his life and mentioned the name "Bill".

The prosecution maintained that they actually heard the name "Phil" and not "Bill".

The jury's verdict indicated that they agreed with this.

Johnny Jones told the jury that he saw his brother, Louie Earl Jones, 10 days before the killing. He said his brother told him he had been threatened by the Hope brothers. He said he had never seen his brother so upset.

Louie Jones informed law officers that his life had been threatened by the two Hopes because of an argument over some borrowed tools.

Charles Shaw, a sheriff's deputy at the time, testified that he, too, had seen Louie Jones prior to the killing and that Jones had been visibly upset due to the threats.

While listening to Judge Sharbutt read his verdict, Phillip Hope stared blankly at the corner of the courtroom nearest the jury.

When Judge Sharbutt asked Hope if he had anything to say, he replied that he was innocent.

Judge Sharbutt, during the jury's deliberation, told the Reporter that both the prosecution and the defense had fought a hard and professional case, and that the jury was attentive and had done a good job.

Teachers respond to UW appeal

Shelby County public school teachers and principals are responding to appeals to support the 1979 United Way campaign in record numbers, county drive chairman Jim Vickrey reported this week.

"Already, before the kick-off date, almost one-fourth of our county's professional public school personnel have pledged or contributed more than $6,800," Vickrey, University of Montevallo president, said. "That is over twice the total amount collected last year."

Dr. Vickrey credited the surge in United Way support to School Superintendent Charles Knowles and School Board Chairman Elaine Hughes.

During a talk to county teachers' last week at theirannual pre-school workshop, Dr. Vickrey commended the teachers for their support. "I would add," Vickrey said, "that teachers hardly need to be 'sold' the United Way. They traditionally support it.

Labor Day claims lives

In 1978, 16 persons were killed on Alabama highways during the Labor Day weekend. This three-day holiday has claimed 61 lives in Alabama over the past 5 years.

For county library

New director named

An interest in history and tracing family trees seems to be increasing in the county judging by the number of people who visit the Shelby County Library to search through old newspaper files.

And now the process is a lot easier, reports newly appointed Library Director Pam Williams.

Every issue of the newspapers, which date from 1883, have been put on microfilm, Williams noted, and now the library has the long awaited microfilm reader.

The new director, who took over the position from Phil Teague on August 20, encourages residents to use the new piece of equipment which was purchased with Library Services and Construction Act funds.

For the past three months, Williams has been assistant library director. Prior to that she served for a year as Pelham Librarian.

One of the new director's plans is to continue the pre-school story hour in the eight libraries under her supervision throughout the fall and winter.

During the eight weeks the program was in progress this summer, participants heard stories, watched puppet shows, sang and viewed films.

Volunteers will be needed in each library, Williams pointed out in order to carry out the program. She asks that anyone interested in helping out contact their local librarian.

The Summer Reading program, related the county librarian, enrolled a total of 550 youngsters this year.

Since puppet shows proved so popular during the summer, a small theatre for staging productions was ordered and is now available in the Columbiana Library. It can be checked out by teachers or other adults who work with children.

Something else new in the Columbiana Library is a young adult collection for teenage readers. It consists of fiction and classics aimed at this age group.

The new library director is presently engaged in overseeing work on a card catalog for the Calera Library which is moving to new quarters.

A native of Niles, Ohio, Williams moved to Shelby County in 1977 when her husband was transferred here by his company. She earned her Master's degree in Library Science from the University of Pittsburg.

Her Bachelor of Arts degree from Youngstown University was in French and Spanish which she taught in high schools in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

There are two boys in the Williams family; seven year old Christopher and five year old Mark.

School head writes strong prescription

by Bert Seaman

The Shelby County Superintendent of Education recently wrote a prescription for teachers in the school system. But the weekly dosage requirement seems a bit too regular for some of the teachers to tolerate.

In an effort to improve the level of instruction in the county's schools, Knowles has called for weekly Thursday meetings from 3-5 p.m. in each local school.

When Knowles brought the subject up at last Wednesday's Board of Education meeting, a strong objection to the plan was voiced by AEA representative Pat Keener.

She said that the weekly after-school meetings would work a hardship on most of the teachers and she told the board she had received some negative reaction to the plan.

Admitting that some aspects of the program have been misunderstood, the superintendent said that he would explain it thoroughly to teachers at their first meeting of the year on Thursday.

So when teachers and support personnel gathered in the Calera High School auditorium that morning, the superintendent launched into an explanation of the plan, which he pointed out would be beneficial for them.

In additon to gathering helpful ideas for teaching, Knowles related that the after school meetings would also be a time when school business would be discussed.

It was his observation, the superintendent said, that at schools where teachers' meetings weren't held, the teachers felt they didn't have any input.

Stressing the need for teachers to keep informed, Knowles reported that in the future they will be apprised of what is going on at both board and administrative levels in the school system.

When the Shelby County Teachers Association held their meeting later in the morning, the program was discussed and it was decided to hold a special called meeting so there would be more time to consider it.

A Vincent teacher was the only member of the organization who spoke out against the program.

"No one opposes professional development," an officer of the organization said, but he conceded there would probably have to be some changes made in the program.

One teacher who voiced her feelings, probably expressed the sentiments of others. "There should be a better way to accomplish the same goals!," she declared.

UM budget almost reaches $10 million mark

The budget for the operation of the University of Montevallo for the school year 1979-80 stands at almost $10 million.

It is the same amount as the budget for the preceding school year.

The Board of Trustes will ask the State Legislature for an increase of $2.9 million for the next school year.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

"Who can ever forget the first day of school?"

That was the headline over a recent newspaper article which probed people's memories for details of that first, supposedly never to be forgotten experience.

Well, I for one have absolutely no recollection of the occasion. All I know is, and I was told this, is that my mother managed to get me in before I reached the required age.

The fantastic tale I heard gave my familiarity with letters and numbers as the reason I was allowed early entrance. But the way I see it, my mother probably just couldn't stand me around the house any longer.

Mother like to keep her age a secret, but she was somewhere in her forties when I arrived as the unexpcted third child. Being in generally the same age bracket now, and with a little one around the house, I know that nerves can become frazzled.

In all likelihood, my antics around the house were probably something like my little granddaughter's the other night.

As I tried desperately to follow the conversation of someone I was trying to get some important information from on the telephone, she first had a ball playing games with the long cord.

When I finally dissuaded her from that activity, she found a red magic marker and proceeded to draw pictures on the television screen.

Of course back in the dark ages there were no TV's or magic markers. However children could still drive their parents wild by drawing pictures on the wall with a crayon.

And back then, there were no day care centers or nursery schools. My older brothers may have kept an eye on me occasionally, but other than that, there were no baby sitters.

I really don't see how the poor woman kept from going stark, raving mad.

My children started nursery school almost as soon as they could walk, and that wasn't a moment too soon.

When the oldest entered kindergarten and the last one was sent off to nursery school, those few golden hours alone were sheer heaven.

About the only memory I have of registering the little darlings in first grade is the lines - they always seemed endless. And in that era, when you finished at school, you would have to go to town and line up again at the bookstore to buy texts.

As I recall, the sun was always beating down on that particular day as parents inched their way down Main Street toward the bookstore.

By the time you reached the relatively cool interior, you were red faced and sweaty. But that was the price you paid for getting the kids back in school.

The only opening day experience I can recall happened the year my son started school. He climbed aboard the wrong school bus and caused a few frantic moments before he was finally located.

But no matter what school costs in the way of shattered nerves or emptied pocketbooks, it's worth it. The kids need their educations and moms need those few hours to restore their sanity.

Under The Courthouse Dome

County Commissioner Harold Davenport is reported in satisfactory condition after undergoing serious heart bypass surgery last Friday at Baptist Montclair Hospital. The former Alabaster Mayor went into the hospital for tests at the conclusion of the August 13 meeting of the County Commission.

* * * *

The Commission voted to extend the gasoline bonds for an additional time at their Monday meeting. Purpose is to obtain $75,000 in cash to match $225,000 that is available in federal funds. The money will go toward widening Valleydale Road (County 17) from 28 to 30 feet, shoulder to shoulder, and by widening the paving from 20 to 22 feet.

Tunstall Perry of the Birmingham firm of Berney Perry, Inc., was in Columbiana to make the financial arrangements.

Commission Chairman Tommy Snowden reported to the Commission that it costs the county about $1 per square foot per year to pay for utilities in the courthouse building with an additional 50 cents to $1 per square foot per year for janitorial and maintenance.

This report came before the decision to start charging state and federal agencies $4.50 per square foot for their office space in county buildings.

County Engineer James Ray and an assistant have been asked to give a one-day training session to representatives from 10 Alabama counties that formerly had the state highway department handle their county road work. All the so-called "captive" counties have been released from state contracts under Governor Fob James.

Two inmates who were allowed outside the Shelby County jail decided last week that they didn't want to return. And at press time Tuesday they're still on the loose.

On Friday, John Edward McDonald escaped while working a road crew on County Road 17. The Calera man stepped into the woods and failed to appear again.

The next afternoon, Michael Hogan of Warrior, a trusty at the jail, was allowed to visit a store next door to the jail with another prisoner.

While the other man went inside, to buy food and supplies for himself and some of the other prisoners, Hogan reportedly waited outside. He was gone when the other man came back.

Hogan was one of the prisoners transferred from Jefferson County in exchange for one of this county's female inmates. The deal was worked out between the two counties when Shelby lost five matrons who are required to watch female prisoners.

His conviction was on a grand larceny charge. McDonald had been sentenced to hard labor for breaking parole on a previous conviction.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

Mr. Whitson Finley
Montgomery, Alabama

Dear Whit:

Remember how Henry McClannahan could play the fiddle and Gus McMikel the bass drum and how they'd go up and down the streets in town serenading the folks. One night Henry went by himself, playing for somebody on the Shelby road the other side of the graveyard. On his way back, just as he got halfway through the cemetery, some guy, seeing him, called out: "You got a match, Henry?" There was one solitary plunk on the fiddle and then the noise of feet hitting the ground and a few minutes later the sound of Henry hollering for help on the court house steps.

Remember how Karl Harrison used to get in the middle of the marble ring and knock the speejinks out one at a time for what seemed like an hour. Sometimes his taw ball would spin for a minute, never moving a hair from where he hit the speejink.

Remember when the men down town raised enough money to hire Sumpter Clark to help out with the football team. And the way he'd make us run, round and round the field, after practice every day. That was some team. But the guys are scattered all over now, a few of 'em gone on to glory, but most of 'em still around, scattered here and there. Wish we could all get together and have a whole week to remember, out loud.

Remember the day we were playing checkers under the old magnolia tree and somebody came along and said that fool Hitler had marched into Poland. We didn't pay too much attention until, months later, when they started taking us away, some to stay gone forever, and some of us for two and three and four years.

Remember how Earl Peers could always gain four yards over center and how Lawrence Looney could gain ten or twelve around end. And how coach would always put Simon next to Boling, I guess because Boling was little and Simon was big and he sort o' wanted to even it out. And the day you picked up a fumble and ran to glory.

Remember how your Mom would make vegetable soup, in the old cafe next to Pete Christian's store, and how Spider Crawford lived on it for years and years. The only things that came close to her soup was Mrs. Blackerby's fried chicken in the old court house and Mrs. Polk's pickled crabapples that she made by the churnful in her back yard.

Remember how Spurgeon Carter would strut up and down the bank at the wash-hole in Longshore's pasture. And how Bro. John Milner would stand on the side line and holler for Simon. And how Rip Cox would stretch his legs and pull at his pants every time he got out of Harry Gordon's car. And how Cliff Chapman would rub the crease in your breeches on Sunday morning, after he'd pressed 'em for you on Saturday.

Hope this finds you getting better.

Two school contracts awarded

Two contracts for school renovation work were awarded at last Wednesday's Board of Education meeting - one for the second time.

The first contract that the board gave Mechanical Erection Company at their July 25 meeting was cancelled and a new one awarded leaving out the first alternate project.

Hughes Construction Company was the low bidder for work on Montevallo High School which was overbid by $28,750 during the first round of bid openings last month.

Because of the wording in the Vincent contract relating to the cost of air conditioning needing to be more than 50% of the base bid, the first document had to be thrown out.

The base bid for air conditioning the south wing of the high school came to $77,462. But the cost of lowering the ceilings on the two floors of the wing came to $36,654, throwing the figures out of line.

Several alternate projects on e Montevallo bid were deleted and Hughes' bid $112,498 was accepted. The work will involve air conditioning and an addition to the band room.

The county's legislative delegation were responsible last year for getting $125,000 in bond money for repair work at each of the two schools. It was explained at the July board meeting that the architect would receive 10% of the total cost and the state Building Commission, it was pointed out, gets 1%

A change in titles for the county's number two administrator was announced at the meeting. Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles announced that henceforth Vern Davis will be called Deputy Superintendent rather than Assistant.

The change was made, Knowles said, to set Davis apart because there are a number of assistant superintendents. However the promotion won't result in any change in Davis' pay.

It was also reported at the meeting that six teaching vacancies need to be filled.

Hee Haw!

Curry Ward of Wilton emceed the Hee Haw show which was put on at Briarcliff Nursing Home Friday night. Other cast members pictured are Chester Cofer, Omega Cox and Ned Lowery.

Rousting Hee Haw show entertains Briarcliff

Some of the characters in the Hee Haw show which was staged at Briarcliff Nursing home Friday played their parts so well, residents thought they were watching the real thing.

One of the hits of the star studded production was Little Annie, a pupil in Minnie Pearl's classroom. Ann Ward of Wilton kept the crowd laughing at her antics thoughout the evening.

The show was such a hit, says Activities Director Margery Payne, it will probably be a regular event at the Alabaster facility.

A cast of staff members, volunteers and relatives of residents combined their talents to recreate the humorous TV show. And according to Payne, the participants in the production received as much satisfaction from putting on the show as the audience derived from watching it.

In addition to the hay bales, which cast members used for seating, the rustic atmosphere was further carried out by a tubful of lemonade, a barrel of punch and an old iron skillet filled with boiled peanuts, all of which were served at the conclusion of the program.

Residents and guests were also treated to fried apple and peach pies and old fashioned teacakes.

Some of the standouts in the production were former Shelby Academy headmaster Ned Lowery of Jemison who played Buck Owens, and Curry Ward of Wilton who took the part of Roy Clark.

Jemison schoolteacher Billie Tibbs coordinated the show and played the part of Minnie Pearl.

Hound Dog was played by Nursing Home Administrator Mary Alice Edmonds.

Other staff members in the show were Ed Bice, Junior Samples; Betty Ray and Susan Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Higgins; Tammy Masters, Lisa; Margery Payne and Susan Dawn, members of the All-Jug band; Judith White, Lulu; Joyce Trice, Charlie Ferguson; Damie Brown, weather girl; Loyd Stripling, country bumpkin and Gerri Allen Geraldine.

Nursing home resident Frazier Cofer did an Arthur Duncan impersonation and William Waldrup dressed up as grandpa.

A dance number was performed by Pam Graham, who was introduced as Mary Tyler Moore; Linda Wolfe wore a glimmery outfit to play Dolly Parton, and a ruffly gowned Eva Clayton sashayed back and forth across the stage as the dancing pig.

Another staff member who took part in the show was Omega Cox. She and her children protrayed the Carter family. Woodrow Eloff; was Roy Acuff and John F. Cox and Lewis Fluker were the Foggy Mountain Boys. Eddie Arnold was played by Holson Adams.

Rounding out the cast were Sherall Mooney and Karen McDonald who portrayed Merle Haggard and Bonnie.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"The Home"

One hears much about the deterioration of the home in America today. The magnitude of the problem is seen in the fact that approximately half of today's marriages end in divorce. In addition, thousands are living with those of the opposite sex without getting married. The success and continuance of our society depends upon the strength and permenance of the homes of America.

The home is as old as mankind. The holy relationship of marriage began by the authority and wisdom of our Creator. Thus, the home antedates civil government and the church, the only other institutions on earth that are of divine origin.

God's will is that in the scriptural marital state the human race is to be perpetuated. In the home, the husband and his wife share with each other their love, companionship, and devotion. (Genesis 2:18-24)

Band Boosters plan disco

Disco dancing is fun, there's no doubt about it!

But the dance craze that's sweeping the country is a ball not only for the couples on the fllor, but for onlookers as well.

So when Montevallo Band Boosters hold their disco dance contest Sept. 15 at MHS, they want a crowd of spectators on hand too to applaud their favorite couple.

The event will be one of the highlights of Operation Band Aid Day. Sponsored annually by the band boosters, the program is put on to raise money for instruments, music, uniforms and other band needs.

When judges name the winners in the disco dance contest, first prize for the best female dancer will be a pair of disco dance shoes with light-up heels. Her partner will receive a gift certificate from a local men's store.

Three judges from Arthur Murray, the studio that's sponsoring the contest, will also award second and third place prizes. They'll be assisted by Lida and Jim Pemberton and Ginger and Walter Ramey from Montevallo.

Anyone who enjoys watching a dance team give daily disco lessons on a Birmingham TV station, will want to be on hand Sept. 15 to see a live exhibition by another talented pair. The champion disco team of Candy Allen and David Buckley will perform at 10:30 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The affair will feature "DJ" Mike Wilson from Yesterday Lounge.

Pre-registration forms can be found on posters distributed throughout the area. The fee for entering is $3 a couple and 50 cents for watching.

Late registration can be done at 10 a.m., the day of the contest, at Montevallo High School. Couples will be assigned times when they are to perform.

RENEW NOW AND SAVE

Now is the time to renew your subscription to the Shelby County Reporter. Through the month of August, 1979, a one year renewal will continue to be just $4 (in Alabama). We hate to do it, but we are being forced by escalating costs to raise our subscription rate to $5 per year after September 1. We hope you'll understand.

Rates through August 31, 1979:

1 Year in Alabama $4

2 Years in Alabama $7
Out of State 1 Year $8

Collector missing

by David Moore

If you dial his Pelham phone number, it rings and rings, but no one picks it up. Same goes for the garbage in Pea Ridge and Dogwood--no one picks it up.

David Whitfield, who operates Shelby Sanitation, has seemingly disappeared. A lot of citizens in the western section of the county would like to know where he is. So would solid waste supervisor Carlton Franks. Garbage tends to pile up after a while.

"I haven't been able to contact him in several weeks," Franks told the Reporter. "I don't know what the score on him is."

Franks, who has lately memorized Whitfield's phone number and has been by his trailer looking for him several times, says all he has managed to do is contact some of the man's relatives.

According to them, Whitfield's wife had baby some three or four weeks ago, which is the reason Whitfield first missed his garbage route. Since then, his wife is reported to have had some complications which may account for Whitfield's absence.

Franks has given messages to the relatives to have Whitfield contact him, but so far there has been no word.

One customer near Montevallo, however, notified Franks that someone picked up his garbage last Friday.

Whitfield, who has had the garbage pickup franchise for district No. 1 (from Boothton to the Columbiana city limits) for six months, has apparently collected fees in advance from a number of his customers.

The contract calls for a $5 per month pickup fee per customer, and, as allowed by the county commission, Whitfield can collect up to three months in advance.

"We are aware of the situation and are working on details," Franks said. "But so far, there has been no official termination of Whitfield's contract."

Franks said that by the end of the week his department would have a new plan for pickup in district No. 1, but he declined to disclose what that plan might be.

In the meantime, what about the growing piles of garbage?

"About the only thing they can do is carry it to the landfill," Franks explained, adding that free permits for cars and pickups cold be obtained at the gates.

County landfills are located in Helena, Calera, and Westover.

And if anyone sees David Whitfield, you might tell him some people are rather curious about his whereabouts.

Montevallo outlines parking zones

A new parking ordinance has been passed by the Montevallo City Council that provides for the establishment of residential parking zones requiring permits for on-street parking.

The new ordinance is designed to permit property owners and residents to purchase permits that will allow them to park their passenger cars on certain congested streets.

Streets affected by the ordinance are Highland, Nabors, Plowman and Valley. These are streets near the University of Montevallo campus.

The ordinance designates certain areas of these streets as 'permit parking zones'. Within the designated areas it shall be unlawful for any motor vehicle to be parked on a public right of way unless such vehicle shall properly display a parking permit. Permits will be issued to bonafide residents, only. The annual fee is $5 per year which will help defray the costs of decals and other administrative work.

City Clerk Hughes was authorized to obtain temporary permits until permanent decals can be obtained.

In other action, council members agree by resolution, to vacate parts of two streets that were a part of a subdivision laid out in 1914. The streets have never been used as public rights of way. The streets involved are Alma Street and part of Montgomery Street.

Council members nominated Mrs. Essie Leach to fill a vacancy on the city's Library Board created by the leaving of Don Acton. At the same time council refused to accept a reported resignation from Mrs. Mary Alice Ballentine, a member of the board since 1958.

Council members requested Clerk Don Hughes to formally request that an ambulance be present at all home football games played by Montevallo High School.

A request for a transfer of a beer license was approved. The request was to transfer the license to the new owner of the B and B Garage, William Smith.

Hughes told council members that the city has received its new garbage truck and that it was put into service Monday morning. He also reported that work on the new recreation building is progressing according to schedule and that it is complete except for interior finishing, windows and trim. Most of the scheduled work is expected to be completed by Labor Day.

High school valedictorians: They came, saw and stayed at UM

They came to spend the summer at the University of Montevallo and decided to stay.

High school valedictorians, 48 of the 56 who attended summer school classes at UM through the University's new Summer Valedictorian Scholarship Program, decided to enroll in classes this fall.

Only about one-third of the 56 had originally planned to enroll in fall classes as UM, according to Larry Peevy, director of admissions and records.

The new valedictorian scholarship paid summer tuition and mandatory fees such as the student activity fee and medical fee to Alabama high school valedictorians or equivalent top students, regardless of where they planned to attend fall classes.

In addition to the 48 high school valedictorians who will continue their freshman classes at UM, eight of the state's 21 junior college valedictorians will transfer to Montevallo this fall through a similar program, Peevy added.

UM President Jim Vickrey said the new scholarship program was accomplishing what he and other University officials had hoped it would accomplish. "It's the kind of quality-centered growth that we're trying to achieve," he said.

Students on the scholarship programs can renew the scholarship through four years of undergraduate school if they maintain a 2.3 grade point average out of the 3.0 possible.

The valedictorians in the first of the summer scholarship programs lived up to expectations, Peevy said. Their grade point average in summer school was 2.6.

UM names English Dept. chairman

A member of the University of Montevallo faculty since 1971, Dr. Norman McMillan, has been named acting chairman of the UM English Department.

Dr. McMillan, an associate professor, was named to the post by UM President Jim Vickrey to serve in the place of former chairman Dr. John Lott, who was recently named acting dean of the UM College of Arts and Sciences.

A native of Greensboro, Dr. McMillan, 37, received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Alabama and his Ph.D. at the University of Michigan. He has completed additional studies at Princeton University and through a U.S. State Department grant, at the University of Tornoto.

The UM professor is a graduate of Tuscaloosa County High School, Northport.

The author of published short stories, a review and articles on language, Dr. McMillan last year also helped direct a series of seminars on literacy and communication skills with funds from the National Endowment to the Humanities and the Alabama Committee for the Humanities and Public Policy.

He is a member of several professional and honorary organizations and last year was named a Danforth Associate.

On campus, Dr. McMillan was president of the Faculty Council last year.

YMCA announces new staff members

Want to know what's new at the Shelby County YMCA?

Well, for one thing, there's a new program director. He's 26 year old David Spink.

Something else new is the After School camp that he'll be coordinating.

Spink was a Physical Education major at Jacksonville State where he graduated in 1975. However, he's been involved in the field of finance for the past few years.

But during the time he spent in Dothan, pursuing a business career, Spink said he coached and worked with youngsters at every opportunity.

Explaining the after school camp, the new program director said that parents won't have to worry about any extra driving in getting their children to the Siluria facility.

A van will pick up youngsters six years and up from their schools, Spink said, and transport them to the Y where they can remain until as late as 6:15 p.m.

Mentioning some of the activities that will be available, he named gymnastics, arts and crafts, sports instruction and field trips.

Another new staff member at the Y is UM student Sharon Atkins. She will be working with youngsters who want to learn gymnastics and as an added incentive to take part in the program, the Y has recently acquired a new piece of equipment.

In addition to the balance beam the Y purchased last year, there is now a set of uneven parallel bars so that instruction can be even more comprehensive.

Other programs available at the Y for younsters are dance, which includes tap and ballet; baton and tennis. There is also a flag football program for both boys and girls ages 6-12. And a parent-child program the Y offers goes by the name Indian Guides and Princesses.

One of the programs Spink will be giving a lot of attention to is adult fitness. A men's class will be taught three evenings a week and ladies who want to shape up can take advantage of either morning or evening sessions.

A jogging track and swimming pool are also available to Y members.

Other adult classes are: Ladies ballet exercise, tennis, disco dancing, weight training, racquetball.

Before initiating any new programs or implementing those already in progress, the new program director says he's going to take awhile to get the "feel of things" at the Shelby County facility.

His wife Donna and their 2½ year old son Brent will be joining Spink here soon.

HOW MUCH DOES FURNITURE COST?

One way to figure out how much various pieces of furniture really cost is to use the following formula:

Take the particular piece of furniture you're thinking about, then estimate how many years it will reasonably last and how many years you expect to use it--and divide the number of years into the price.

That will give you a cost-per-year--and the result will probably surprise you.

A piece of furniture that you may pay, say, $500 for, and expect to use for 15 years, thus has a cost-per-year of only about $33, and makes furniture one of the real bargains around today.

Our point in bringing this formula to you is to indicate an often overlooked point about furniture. Furniture is one of those things that lasts and gives you repeated value--yet while that is an advantage, it also makes it very important that you buy the right furniture in the first place.

We're here to give you selection and value, and help you buy furniture that you will be happy with for a long time, so stop in.

Football arrives!!

by Richard Crosby

Football fans will find relief tonight as the 1979 gridiron season begins in ernest around the county. Two games will be played, one in Calera and the other at Thompson.

Calera will host 2A West Blocton at Oliver Park while Jemison comes to Alabaster to face Thompson. Both stadiums are expected to be packed not only with fans from the schools participating, but also with many observers from around the county. Coaches from throughout the state are also expected to be in the stands scouting the teams.

On Friday night, the rest of the county schools begin their fall program. Vincent will travel to Abrams in Bessemer, Bibb County will come to Pelham, Shelby County will host Montevallo, Coosa Valley will travel to Central, and Shelby Academy will be on the road to Meadowview.

Both Chelsea and Briarwood will sit out the first week.

A crowd of some 3,000 is expected in Columbiana Friday night to witness one of the hottest rivalries in the county as Montevallo seeks a third straight win over the Shelby County Wildcats.

Another large crowd is expected in Pelham as the Panthers begin what may become their best season in history.

Whichever game you attend you'll be sure and see some exciting action. Remember that the admission prices have changed to $3.00 and $2.00 for adults and students respectively.

Alabama passes duck stamp law effective this year

Shelby County bird hunters should take notice that the Alabama Legislature has unanimously passed a State Duck Stamp Bill.

During the final summer session of the Alabama legislature, an Alabama duck stamp bill was passed in both chambers of the legislature.

The bill provides a means for the State Department of Conservation and Natural Resources to insure the development and preservation of wetlands for water fowl habitats and public water fowl hunting areas.

Under the new law, no person may hunt migratory water fowl within the state of Alabama or its coastal waters without first procuring a five dollar Alabama migratory water fowl stamp.

The money from the sale of the stamps cannot be spent for enforcement or administrative matters. The Department of Conservation has promised that all monies received will be spent equally over the state.

You'll log for less with Thompson.

Like David Mickle of Opelika, Alabama does.

"I bought two Caterpillar 518 skidders from Thompson for a number of reasons.

First, the machine. It's built to last longer. I'll get five years from these machines, where I could expect maybe three from other skidders around.

It'll outdo all others in the woods. I don't know another skidder to stay with it.

Second, because of the resale value. I'll get my money back on a Caterpillar. Look around at the used skidder prices. It's smart to buy a machine that'll be worth something when trade-in time comes.

And because of Thompson Tractor. Their branch in Opelika is important to me. I get any part in less than 24 hours. And their field service is there when I need it.

Looking at the whole picture, you just save money when you buy a Caterpillar 518 skidder with Thompson."

Fearless forecaster begins another year

by Richard Crosby

Since this is my third year of football forecasting I've decided to change my tactics and for the first time tell my true feelings about the upcoming games. Regular readers will remember that in the past I would pick a team to lose just to get them fired up.

Well, no more!

This year you'll get my straight opinion without any beating around the bush.

Thompson-Jemison-The Warriors need a win badly to open this new season and I believe they 'll get it. Of course the game won t b e a cake walk but Larry Simmons' crew can get the job done. Prediction-Thompson 22, Jemison 14.

Calera-West Blocton-The Eagles will be facing a powerful foe Thursday night and the goings will be tough. However, Calera will prove that despite the loss of Arthur Johnson, it isn t a one star school. Look for the Eagles to show class and style and come from behind. Prediction: Calera 18, West Blocton 14.

Shelby County-Montevallo-The Wildcats have a lot to prove [illegible]y night but, it will be rough [illegible]ing superiority over the Bulldogs as Coach brings a fresh pack a Dogs over from Montevallo. What Shelby County doesn't know will hurt them bad as Montevallo continues to make the Cats cower. Prediction: Montevallo 21, Shelby County 18.

Vincent-Abrams- The Jackets are starting the season with an always tough opponent. It may prove too tough for Vincent which despite experience won½t be able to keep up with its fleet-footed foe. Prediction: Vincent 12, Abrams 31.

Pelham-Bibb County- the Panthers are going to start this season off with an upset that set the course for the season. Bibb County won't know what hit them till they see the films on Sunday. Prediction: Pelham 27, Bibb County 6.

Shelby Academy-Meadowview- the Raiders unfortunately have to start the year with a tough loss. No use killing time with small talk. Prediction: Shelby 0, Meadowview 25.

Coosa Valley-Central Academy - The Rebels are facing private school powerhouse and I think they'll put up a heck of a fight, but, CVA will lose a close on in the end. Prediction: CVA 13, Central 16.

Both Briarwood and Chelsea should win this week as they both sit back and watch the season openers. However, next wek the two schools start the season playing each other and one will lose. But, for this week, give them both an easy win over "Open".

Although classes started Monday at Briarwood Christian High School, the cheerleaders started - preparing at the beginning of the summer in practices and at clinic.

Briarwood's varsity and junior high cheerleaders recently attended a Universal Cheerleader's Association clinci at Tennessee Tech. University in Cookeville, Tennessee, where they racked up awards. Anita Barker, varsity head cheerleader, was invited to return next summer as an instructor. Briarwood's junior high cheerleaders won three red ribbons, four blue ribbons, and were named as the "Junior High District Champions".

Members of the two squads are: Varsity-Anita Barkerhead, Ann Jernigan- co-head, Beth Buck, Tammy Saunders, Katie Drake, Amy Agee, Libby Keller, and Marcy Bradford. Fran Duggan is the alternate-mascot, and Jan Godfrey is the girls'sponsor.

Thompson youth win two, lose one in Centerpoint

The Thompson Youth Football Association held a practice game schedule last Saturday in Centerpoint and despite excellent play by the Shelby county teams, Centerpoint won two of the three games.

The 65 pound Redskins were defeated 7 to 6 by Centerpoint. [illegible]nadGorrell was responsible for the Redskin's score. Coaches for the team are Sammy Self, Bill [illegible]orrell and Roy Sallis.

The 95 pound Broncos whipped Centerpoint 30 to 0. Anthony O'Neal was the leading scorer and had consistent help of his teammates. Coaches for the team are Norman Gillispie, Bill Haney and Buddy Hiebbell.

The 75 pound Warriors were defeated by Centerpoint 19 to 14. Quarterback John Woody ran for both Thompson touchdowns and was successful on one conversion. Coaches for the team are Doug Byars, Bob Thames, and John Woody.

Races getting better at Shelby Speedway

Races started Saturday night at Shelby Speedway and concluded Sunday afternoon. No, it didn't take that long to run the races, the rains came again and forced a postponement after three heat races were held.

Sunday afternoon the feature races and consolation race were run. Track Manager Jerry Handley told the Reporter that despite the 12 hour change between the start and finish, the largest crowd of the year attended and witnessed some of the best racing of the season.

In Saturday night's heat races, Johnny Russell won the Bomber division, beating out Steve Payton and Gordon Champion. In the Buggy Division, Bennie Brasher had the hot car. James Lowe finished second with Bessmer's Bobby Carter third.

Terry Wesley won the Modified heat race. Moose Isbell placed second with Bennie Pickett third.

In the Bomber Division consolation race, Paul Russell of Montevallo took the checkered flag. Bobby Lucas finished second and James Foley of Centreville third.

Steve Payton of Calera won the Bomber Feature race. Gordon Champion finished second with Paul Russell third, James Foley fourth and Jim McDaniel fifth.

Terry Wesley of Hueytown won the Modified Feature race. He was followed closely by Moose Isbell, Alvin Wallace, Paul Walden and Gary Perry.

Bennie Brasher continued his domination of the Buddy Division with another feature win. Brasher started in the back but worked his way to the front on the sixth lap and held on for the checkered flag. Bobby Carter of Bessemer came across the line second, Rick Majors third, Dennis Majors fourth and Rod Henderson fifth.

Terry Wesley turned a 14.12 second lap around the track to make a new record. Steve Payton also set a new mark for the Bomber cars.

Racing will be held this Saturday night and there may be twin 25 lap features run for each division. You'll have to go out to Shelby Speedway to find out but it'll be worth the trip. Handley told the Reporter that Shelby Speedway will not hold Labor Day races this year.

FOR BETTER HUNTING AND FISHING

by Earl Franklin Kennamer

Imagine a backcountry hunting and fishing trip a hundred or so years ago. You catch a train and are met at the station with a buggy. Next morning you eat a hot breakfast cooked over a wood stove that had to be fired up an hour or so earlier. When you finish, you saddle up and a couple of horse-hours later you reach camp, a simple tarpaulin stretched A-frame style over a horizontal pole. Food had to be fresh, dried or salted. No refrigeration, but streams were clean and you could drink from a rippling spring, in which you kept the cow butter cool in a jar you brought along.

Next morning you bag a dozen or so mallards with your trusty, beautiful Damascus steel double barrel with cocking hammers and a gun that will take nothing but black powder. That afternoon you take out your bamboo flyrod, which was standard tackle for that day and time and you haul in a dozen bass or so.

You ate the fish that night, else they would spoil. You leave early next morning, because in another day or so those ducks you bagged would spoil unless you hung the fowl to "ripen" in a packing house cooler.

Today? You can go anywhere, anytime, stay as long as you like and live luxuriously, fuel willing! You can trek about in a mobile home, eat better than a king with plentiful fresh eggs, fruit, meat, bread, juices. Refrigeration is now taken for granted, air conditioning standard, along with "instant" stoves, heaters and light. You have shotguns and rifles and cartridges that use smokeless powder. Tackle? Select from all types of fiberglass, graphite, boron, even bamboo--if you have the moolah--fishing rods along with hundreds of fly, bait casting, spinning and spin casting reels with all types of lines and lures to choose from.

During the past year I've received hundreds of pictures and news releases of new outdoors equipment, camping items, backpacking devices, clothing, guns, tackle, boats--including details on a 53-foot yacht.

To be candid about it, I have thrown into File 13, 95 percent of these after checking them over, because I figure I'm a sounding board for the average hunter, fisherman and camper and I keep only the stuff that is revolutionary, practicable, and worth the money.

Ka-Bar has come out with a variety of good knives for the outdoorsman, ranging from a thin-bladed fish filleting knife to Bowie models, folding pocket knives to lock-backs. During WWII Ka-Bar made the famous Marine Corps knife. Al Buck makes superb models of the famous Buck knife for the outdoorsman.

Sears has come out with a Coast Guard approved life vest which is different in that the back is cool polyester net instead of the usual nylon and foam. It has a front zipper and size is easily adjusted with a two-way strap.

Check with your marine suppliers for the new Dutton-Lainson's new "Quick-Lock" couplers for boats, and the 2-speed DL2000 Hand Winch which provides more muscle for pulling boats up steep ramps. Moeller Mfg. Co., has new wheel bearing "savers" that seal out dirt, permit lubrication with a hand grease gun and prevent water from entering when the wheels are submerged at launching ramps. Recreation Creations' "Sentry Ball" coupler lock prevents theft of trailers. Sentry Ball looks like a regular standard hitch ball, but it has a key lock in place of the bolt. Three sizes are available.

Failure of many boat trailer lights is caused by water entering the lamp housing and causing the hot bulbs to shatter. Dyna-Plastics new replacement bulbs do away with the need to disconnect the lights when backing your trailer in the water.

The hand held Wind Chill and Speed Meter made by Taylor Instrument, may be a must to all winter-going outdoorsmen because it furnishes air temp, wind speed and wind chill conversion temp at a glance. Gadget will tell you if you may be risking frostbite injury in extremely cold weather. At least it will tell you how to dress warmly. Meter with case runs about $25.

Now that the energy crunch is apparently permanent, you might consider a canoe for gas-free fishing. There is a new cartopper boat which weighs 170 lbs. The ABS-16 styrene (stuff used in most modern telephones) canoe was designed for river running.

There's a big demand for Coleman's new 400 Peak stove for backpacking. With the windscreen, it stays lit in high winds. It needs no priming except in very low temperatures. This single burner reminds me of the stove I carried around in Europe in WWII.

The newest thing that looks promising is a new trolling motor that will need no gas or electricity for operation. You simply wind it up and it will push your boat around for two or three hours. No further details now, but I'll give you the complete picture when the troller is ready for the market.

"Business unboggler"

Businesses hold retreats on Penitentiary Mt.

by Lisa Sims

Nestled in a 2000-acre valley near Sterrett, is a lake, and a "business unboggler."

Only 30 minutes southeast of Birmingham off of Hwy. 280, Twin Pines Conference Center lies between Penitentiary Mountain and Potato Ridge and is surrounded by miles of uninhabited rolling forests.

The center, which is used for business meetings, church retreats, reunions, picnics, and even weddings, features three rustic, all-season lodges complete with wood-burning fireplaces, central air and heat, and meeting facilities.

The central idea behind the "business unboggler," according to center owner, Bob Saunders, is that it takes business meetings, training classes and seminars out of stuffy hotel meeting rooms and into the relaxing atmosphere of the countryside.

The only distractions at the center might be a flight of geese or ducks. On the grounds of the center one can find turkeys, peacocks, pigs and rabbits.

Saunders says corporate staffs as well as church planning committees find it easier to come up with truly creative and innovative ideas and solutions while at the center.

"Twin Pines uncomplicates business. It's a place where thoughts become clearer, your mind sharper, and your awareness expanded," he stresses.

Visitors at the center can catch fish or jog while waiting for the next meeting session.

Recreational facilities include a 40 acre private lake and a three acre pond on 160 acres, a mountainside 600 feet above the lake, two sand swimming beaches, canoes and fishing boats, an athletic and volleyball field, a rifle range, shuffleboard, horseshoes, pool, ping pong, and beautiful walking trails.

The center can accommodate close to 100 over-night guests, and even provides food prepared in its own kitchen. The menu offers "country-style cooking" and homemade pastries, Saunders said.

For picnics, the center can handle up to 800 people, and for church and civic groups special retreat and camp prices are available.

According to Saunders, the center is simply a great place to "Unboggle" the usually dreaded and dull meetings held in more conventional settings.

Cancer Crusade tops goal - 1st in 5 years

Ken Williams, Shelby County Cancer Crusade Chairman, reports that for the first time in 5 years, Shelby County Cancer Crusade has met its goals. Williams said: "We reached over 3,000 homes with educational material on the early warning signs of cancer. Although education was our priority in this year's crusade, through tireless efforts of the volunteers in the local American Cancer Society, we also reached our monetary goals.

We still have a long way to go to building a tradition or corporate and personal support for the American Cancer Society in Shelby county, but progress has been made.

A sincere thanks to all those who contributed both time and money!

Those who have not fulfilled their pledges, or those who wish to give a memorial "Gift of Life", send your checks to Mrs. Mary Kroell, American Cancer Society, P.O. Box 23, Alabaster, Alabama, 35007.

Go slow on the bottle to enjoy the road

The National Council on Alcoholism Alabama Division is sponsoring a campaign during the Labor Day weekend, August 31 - September 3, to create a greater public awareness of the dangers of drinking and driving. The S.O.B.E.R. (Slow on the Bottle, Enjoy the Road) campaign mission is to ultimately reduce the incidence of alcohol-related accidents on Alabama highways.

Les Sachs is chairman of the Shelby County campaign.

In Alabama, nearly 60 per cent of all highway traffic fatalities are alcohol-related according to statistics available from the Governor's Office of Highway and Traffic Safety. Nationally, the incidence of alcohol-related highway deaths is approximately 50 per cent.

Alabamians will be encouraged to go "Slow on the Bottle, Enjoy the Road", through billboards, bumper stickers, posters, and buttons, displaying an overturned car along with the message "Bottoms Up" and S.O.B.E.R., "Slow on the Bottle, Enjoy the Road", motto.

Birmingham Ballet offers local class

The Birmingham Ballet School will again offer ballet classes in Columbiana.

According to Rachel Fowler, Columbiana representative, registration will be held on August 30 from 3-6 p.m. at the Columbiana Recreation Center.

There is a $5 fee for registration.

The Birmingham company will offer Columbiana classes for ages three thru adult. Special classes will be available for adult students in disco and dancercise, a combination of ballet techinique and exercise, as well as beginning and intermediate ballet.

Last April, the Birmingham Ballet presented a special culture program for children at Colubiana Elementary.

Vicki Allen, past Columbiana instructor, will again teach these classes.

A program new to the Birmingham Ballet's schedule this year is Ballet for Athletes. Designed to sharpen athlete's skills, while it provides essential ballet styling for the winning gymnast and skater, this course promotes coordination, quick response and endurance for all sports.

Ballet students wishing to learn a truly American form of dance, will have an opportunity to learn tap-dancing. Tap-dancing helps the serious student improve movement and rhythm and provides an additional performing skill.

As a special supplement to tis regualr ballet classes, the Birmingham Ballet School periodically brings in guest teachers to provide master classes for advanced and intermediate students.

Other important dates are: Tuesday, Aug. 28, placement for new students with other ballet training; Wednesday, Aug. 29, scholarship audition; Monday Aug. 27, auditions for the Professional Training Program.

For more information or to register, contact Rachel Fowler at 669-6887 or the Ballet office at 879-1047.

"Never seen one that couldn't have been avoided"

County railroad crossings claim many victims

by David Moore

Stop, look and listen.

Though basic to safe driving, all too many people ignore this simple rule when approaching railroad grade crossings. And the results can be deadly.

In Shelby County alone, 47 grade-crossing accidents have been recorded since 1976. The results: three fatalities, 23 injuries and untold dollars in damage to demolished cars, trucks, trains and other property.

The senselessness of these losses is emphasized by on Amtrak engineer who states, "I've never seen a grade-crossing accident that couldn't have been avoided."

Spurred by findings by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the 60's, the railroad industry initiated Operation Lifesaver to upgrade safety factors at railroad crossings. The program is coordinated by Southern Railway Systems and sponsored by such groups as the National Safety Council, the Safety Council of Northern Alabama, the Department of Public Safety and the Governor's Office of Highway and Traffic Safety.

Bob Fort, public relations representative for Southern Railway, told the Shelby County Reporter in an interview that Operation Lifesaver is based on "the three E's--engineering, education and enforcement.

The engineering aspects of Operation Lifesaver set priorities for warning signal installation at crossings.

Round, yellow "RR" signs warn approaching motorists of crossings. Crossbuck railroad stop signs, standard stop signs, crossing gates and/or flashers are posted at all crossings. Warning signals are funded by the Federal and State governments and installed and maintained by the railroads.

The railroads strive to educate the public on grade-crossing safety through presentations to schools, drivers education classes, businesses and civic organizations.

According to Fort, railroad representatives will be contacting local law enforcement agencies and officials within the next two months about enforcing and upgrading signal crossings in Shelby County. The railroad urges that traffic citations be issued to drivers disobeying grade-crossing signals.

Fort says that after these discussions, representatives will give public presentations on grade-crossing safety.

Emphasizing the responsibility of the motorist in preventing collisions with trains, Fort says the crux of the matter is "A car can stop, a train can't."

Traveling at 30 m.p.h., a 150-car freight train requires approximately 3,150 feet to stop. At 50-55 mph, the average open speed for a train, the stopping distance is well over a mile.

Though it would seem that a driver could see a train thundering through a crossing, Fort points out that more than a quarter of crossing accidents occur when the vehicle collides with the train. And many of these accidents happen at crossings protected by electric flashers and gates.

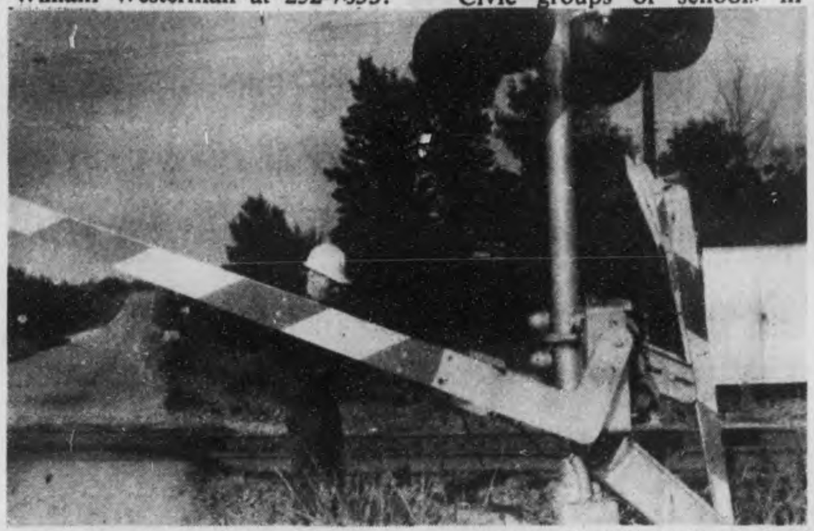
Three of the more dangerous railroad crossings in Shelby County are located in Calera on Hwy 25, Alabaster on Hwy 119, and Pelham on Lee Street.

Common causes of crossing accidents are drivers exercising no caution at familiar crossings, misjudging train speeds, and trying to race the locomotives across intersections, and being blind-sided and struck by a train on a track adjacent to a track where a train has just passed.

The public is urged to notify the railroads of any dangerous grade-crossings. For Southern Railway lines, call superintendent William Westerman at 252-7653.

For problem crossings on the Seaboard Coastline-L & N system call Lee Macon at 841-0445.

Civic groups or schools interested in film and lecture programs designed to educate the public on railroad crossing safety can contact Richard Arrington at Southern Railway's public affairs office at 252-5058.



C.R. Dennis of Calera installs a new wooden "arm" at the L & N crossing at Dargin. Dennis says motorists disregard the warning every month or two and drive through it. But it's worse at the Varnon crossing he says, where motorists break through two or three times a month.

Columbiana reservist takes training

Sgt. Robert Stevens of Columbiana of the 358th Army Reserve Medical Detachment (Veterinary Services) out of Opelika is undergoing two weeks of active duty training in Fort Rucker.

Stevens is supervisor over food inspection at the commissary, where shelves are inspected for dented cans or crushed boxes, and milk and beef is checked before placed on commissary shelves.

Air National Guard flies phantoms at show

Shelby Countians will not want to miss a close-up look at the Alabama Air National Guard Phantom jets Sunday, September 9.

Birmingham's 117th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing will have open house at the Air National Guard Base at the Municipal Airport from 1 to 4 p.m.

Highly sophisticated aircraft, including the F-15 Eagle, and the 117th's RF-4C Phantom jet used for photo reconnaissance will be on display for visitors.

Other high-performance jet aircraft scheduled to be on display include the F-100, F-105, A-7 Corsair, and a C-130 cargo carrier flown in the display and open house. Also, the 117th's C-131 transport aircraft will be on display.

Special ramps and steps will be placed along side the jets so guests can step right up to the cockpit. An aircrew will be on hand to answer questions about the aircraft.

Pic 'N Pay Stores add three more

Pic 'N Pay Stores, Inc., (AMEX) began its Fall expansion program with the opening of three new stores on August 23. The stores are located in: Bridgeport, Ohio; Fayetteville, North Carolina; and Benwood, West Virginia.

The opening of these new stores brings the chains total to 415 in 13 states. Headquartered in Matthews, North Carolina, the company plans to open 50 - 60 new units during the fiscal year ending June '80.

K-C to build new facilities near Atlanta

Plans to build two new office and research facilities for Kimberly-Clark Corporation near Atlanta were jointly announced this week by Governor George Busbee and Darwin E. Smith, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Kimberly-Clark.

Kimberly-Clark, which has annual sales of about $2 billion, manufactures and markets fiber-based products for personal care and other diverse markets in many parts of the world.

The Atlanta construction projects, estimated to cost a total of $15 to $17 million, are part of office expansion plans which also include construction of a $10 to $14 million multi-story addition to one of the company's major office buildings at corporate headquarters in Neenah, Wis.

Mr. Smith said construction in the Atlanta area will consist of a 62,000-square-foot headquarters building for K-C's U.S. Service Products and Nonwoven Business Division, and a 120,000-square-foot research, development and engineering facility for the division which now is located in Neenah.

The division headquarters building will initially house approximately 120 employees, and is expected to be occupied by late summer 1980. The research, development and engineering facility is expected to be completed by summer 1981, with employees moving from Wisconsin in phases over no more than two years. The division now employs about 170 persons in its RD&E function.

Several sites in the Atlanta area are being evaluated for the new facilities; the exact site is expected to be determined in the near future, Mr. Smith said. The projects are subject to obtaining revenue bond financing and approval by appropriate local government authorities.

Kimberly-Clark earlier this year had reported that plans to move the headquarters of the U.S. Service Products and Nonwoven Business Division to an undetermined site in the South were being studied.

"Of the various places considered," Mr. Smith said, "the Atlanta area was chosen because of the business advantages it offers the division. Atlanta is about midway between two of the division's major manufacturing operations in Balfour, N.C., and Corinth, Miss., has excellent transportation facilities, and the markets in which the division competes are well represented. The Atlanta area also offers many quality-of-life advantages for employees, including a relatively moderate cost of living and good educational facilities."

Kimberly-Clark has 31,100 employees in its worldwide consolidated operations, with about 16,600 of these in the U.S. Waynesboro, Ga., is headquarters for K-C's Southeastern U.S. Forest Products Business Division which manages 175,000 acres of forestland and two sawmills, employing about 260 persons.

K-C products are grouped into three major classes. The largest is the Consumer and Service Class which accounted for 62 percent of combined sales in 1978.

The other major product classes are Newsprint, Pulp and Forest Products which accounted for 21 percent of combined sales in 1978, and Paper and Specialities which accounted for 16 percent.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Well known businessman continues service in new location

SONNY'S

Gulf

Hiway 25 Bypass & 70 in Columbiana

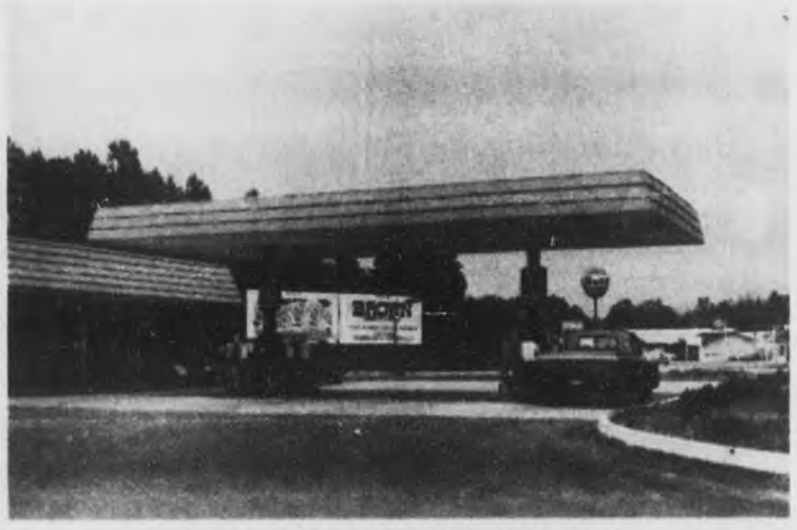
Convenient Store with friendly people to service your car with good Gulf products.

Come in and see Sonny today!!!!!

A tradition of service to you and your automobile--Sonny's Gulf has been serving Shelby County customers for years and now the service is better yet.

Always located on the Columbiana bypass, where you travel often, Sonny's now has a new location...still on the bypass. But now he's located at the corner of Hwy. 70 and 25 bypass.

Gulf Oil, a name you've come to trust in petroleum products, is Sonny's supplier of all brands of fuel and oil.



SONNY'S GULF STATION – located at the intersection of Highway 70 and Highway 25 bypass on the west side of Columbiana.

If you're watching pennies these days, as most of us are, you can drive up to Sonny's self-service pumps, covered to keep you dry in rain and cool in sunny weather.

But if you're in a rush or need a bit of extra care for your car, Sonny has full service pumps as well.

He's got a full line of other car care products--wipers, wax, dry fuel, etc.

But it takes more than excellent service and dependable products to satisfy Sonny that he's giving you what you deserve as his long-time customer.

You'll find a complete grocery at Sonny's, too. For any kind of beverage, don't go any further than Sonny's refrigerated coolers. Luncheon meats, bread, milk, canned goods, everything you need for lunch or snack, you'll find at his station.

And whenever you need gas, groceries, picnic supplies, even fishing tackle, Sonny's is waiting to serve you. He's open from 7 a.m. until 11 p.m., unlike most conventional stations.

Magazines, sunglasses, knives, gifts, ice...the list goes on and on. Sonny has what you're looking for, when you need it.

His motto is "Keep Smiling" and he's kept his customers smiling for years. Now there's even more to smile about at Sonny's Gulf.

School at Shelby quietly turns out students who excell

by Bert Seaman

While the spotlight is usually on the county's larger schools, a small, rural school, off the beaten track, quietly goes about the business of providing students with a good, sound education.

There's been a lot of talk lately about getting back to the basics in education, but students in the school at Shelby have been getting a good groundwork in the fundamentals of reading, writing and arithmetic all along.

And the students from there who go on to be valedictorians, salutatorians, scholarship winners and leaders in all student activities are the proof of the pudding.

One of the reasons Shelby School has been so successful in turning out quality students is due to the relatively small pupil to teacher ratio.

According to Robert Brasher, who has been principal at the school for 23 years, the ratio is 1 to 25. "This enables teachers to be more personally involved with the children," he pointed out. "And it also allows them to work more closely with parents," he added.

Brasher also noted that he has a dedicated staff.

Harmony and support are other imporatant factors that contribute to the smooth functioning and effective classroom work that characterizes Shelby.

Community support was responsible for the erection last year of the combination gymnasium-auditorium. The school's PTO spearheaded the drive to raise funds for the $16,000 building. However, most of the community got behind the effort.

"There's just something about a small rural school"

Shelby, which was built in 1939, is one of the oldest school buildings in the county. Unobtrusive in appearance, the white board building is situated on a knoll in one of the historic areas of the county.

And Brasher expects to take advantage of that fact this year when he'll be taking 4th, 5th and 6th grade students to explore the nearby iron ore furnaces.

"Studying about iron ore mining and the significant part it played in the development of the area will be a valuable social studies lesson," Brasher explained.

Although basics are stressed, students at the rural school are given a well rounded curriculum with music and art both being taught once a week. In fact, it was two Shelby students who won first place ribbons in a countywide art contest this year, the principal noted with pride.

Attendance at the school was lower last year than usual, Brasher related. He said this was partially due to children in the Shelby attendance zone being sent to other schools.

But he expects the enrollment to pick up this year, Brasher said. At least 20 more pupils will be in classes at Shelby due to the addition of a kindergarten unit.

During the summer, Loyd Smith, the school's maintenance technician, a CETA worker, and Brasher have been painting classrooms and refinishing floors. So the school is almost ready to welcome back students.

In 1964, Brasher left Shelby and spent three years as principal at Valley. "But I wanted to get back down here," he declared. "There's just something about a small, rural school."

Setting is the same

Youngsters who attend Shelby School still play marbles among the roots of the giant Oak tree just as they did in 1939 when the school opened. Marble players pictured above are "Big John" Lemley and Chris Howell, sons of 4th grade teacher Donna Lemley. Principal Robert Brasher joins the boys in the game.

New Columbiana Methodist leaders plan new activities with enthusiasm

Optimism, enthusiasm and drive are qualities exhibited by two new workers at the Columbiana United Methodist Church.

One of the newcomers at the church is a minister - the other a youth director.

Rev. Dan Kitchens and his family moved to the community in June and Ken Friday took over his reponsibilities this month.

The new leader of Columbiana Methodists talks enthusiastically about continuing with plans which members had already formulated to renovate the sanctuary of the church. And Friday has begun developing a livewire program for youth which includes regular mid-week meetings and special acitvities.

Both of the men have spent a great deal of time in north Alabama. After graduating from Birmingham Southern and Vanderbilt Divinity School, Kitchens served several churches in the North Alabama Conference.

He was also assistant pastor at Vestavia Hills and came to Shelby County from Hamilton. His ministry has spanned a period of 19 years, which includes the pastorates he had while in school.

The son of a Methodist minister, Friday grew up in towns in the northern part of the state. For the past eight years he has lived in Birmingham where he attended Birmingham Southern and now UAB School of Denistry.

Kitchens says that he sees his ministry in three areas - preaching, pastoral and administrative. While he backs a strong youth program for the church, he points out that "every person in important in the life of the church."

Relating that he has a sincere interest in youth, Friday noted he had always taken an active part in youth groups in churches he attended.

Some of the activities the new youth director and officers of the youth group have scheduled for September are a trip to Atlanta to hear a concert of Christian recording artists, and two retreats.

The group will be traveling to Briarcliff Nursing Home in November to put on a program and they'll also be collecting for UNICEF on Halloween.

One of the highlights on the November calendar is a "Lock Up" at the Shades Valley YMCA. The all night affair will include swimming basketball, jumping on the trampoline and other activities to "let off steam." A Y staff member will keep an eye on the group and provide any assistance that's needed.

Friday and his wife Carolyn live in Birmingham but spend Wednesday evening and Sunday in Columbiana.

The new minister and his family are settled in the parsonage on Carter Lane. And 13 year old Joel and 8 year old David are getting acquainted with classmates at Columbiana schools this week.

Checking dates

The Youth Council at the Columbiana United Methodist Church recently met to formulate plans for the next few months. Checking the dates on the calendar are council president Clay Lyles, Rev. Dan Kitchens, Youth Director Ken Friday and his wife Carolyn. The group gets together every Wednesday evening at the church for recreation and fellowship.

Questions of tax income keep officials on edge

by Marcia M. Sears

Shelby County's officials are still in the dark about how much money the county's ad valorem taxes will bring in for the fiscal year beginning October 1.

For nearly five years the reappraisal of county property has been in progress, under a court order that affected all counties in the state, and each year those in charge of Shelby County's program have promised it would be ready "next year."

The court has decreed there can be no more delays, and the new appraisals must be on the books for the tax year beginning next month.

The latest word at press time from Estelle Sumners, assistant to the Tax Assessor, is that the reports will be finished by Thursday of this week.

Mrs. Sumners was manually correcting the computer list on industrial exemptions Tuesday. Other corrections are being made before a final computer run can be completed.

Every county department, the county schools, the county hospital and every city government in the county are all waiting for the report in order to set up their budgets for the coming fiscal year.

In the past the figures have been known by June or July. Not only are salaries dependent upon the amount of anticipated tax income, but also the operation of governmental functions depends on the tax raised. The bonded indebtedness of every governmental agency must be paid from the first receipts of the ad valorem taxes. After those payments, provision can be made for operations and salaries.

The state legislature complicated the process by passing the so-called "lid bill" which removed business inventories from the taxable property list, and by changing several other items. A lid was set on the tax increase individuals would have to pay in property taxes, and this is also complicating matters.

However, the legislature provided that counties and cities could add an extra percentage of millage, if their total revenues were going to drop as a result of the other changes. Every governmental body in Shelby County is waiting for the report to see if the step will be necessary.

All officials connected with the property reappraisal in Shelby County, including Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds, and Probate Judge Tommy Snowden are saying from preliminary studies that the county will not collect as much in taxes this year as it did last year, unless the millage is increased.

However, no one in the courthouse would make a guess as to how much money will be coming in.

With inflation affecting every department, with gasoline taxes down, with citizens asking for better garbage, police and library services, and with employees asking for raises, governmental officials at all levels in Shelby County are seeking answers to the dilemma of providing the services with a decreasing tax base.

Cuts in payrolls and services are definite possibilities.

And all eyes are focused on the tax assessor's office and the county computer to provide the answer to the first part of the puzzle this week.

Football fever hits: first prize awarded

Parrish Perry of Jemison won the first Football Cash award of the 1979 season. The 15 year-old Jemison High School student correctly picked nine winners to win the cash without using the tiebreaker.

Many readers entered the first week of the Shelby County Reporter competition and most chose only six or fewer winners.

In last week's results, The Shelby Academy-Meadowview game was thrown out because of a tie, and the Bullock County-Chavala game was thrown out because the game was not played.

One of the scores you may not have been able to find was Cold Springs vs. Meek. Cold Springs was beat like a baseball by Meek 26 to 0.

This week's entry for Football Cash is on Page B-12. Be sure to fill it out correctly and mail the entire coupon back in.

Escapee returns

An inmate at the Shelby County jail who disappeared Aug. 24 is once again in residence at the Columbiana facility.

John Edward McDonald of Calera was picked up Thursday at a Chilton County residence by deputies from Shelby and Chilton Counties.

McDonald was working with a road crew on County Road 17 when he disappeared in the woods. The prisoner, who was sentenced to hard labor for breaking parole on a previous conviction, reportedly "jumped ship" to get married.

Alabaster studies health costs

by Bert Seaman

How much should a good health care program cost?

The city of Alabaster received services worth $12,800 last year according to a letter from the Shelby County Health Department which was read at Monday night's council meeting.

In order to keep on with the programs presently in progress in that city, the department asked the city's governing body to appropriated $3,000.

However, the council decided not to take any action on the matter until studying this year's budget.

According to Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek, one of the reasons for the request was due to the one mill tax on the hospital being removed completely.

It was hoped, he told the panel, that the tax would be left on and used for other health care programs. Zuiderhoek said that the complete elimination of the mill meant that the health department would lose $200,000 in revenue.

Health Department Administrator Maxine Smith told the Reporter that cities where the most services were provided were being asked for appropriations to meet the departments strained budget.

Montevallo had been asked for an appropriation last year, she noted, but she said there had been no response from that municipality.

In Chilton County, Smith related that Clanton, Thorsby and Maplesville all make appropriations to the health department.

She also pointed out that the city of Pelham's contribution to the department amounted to approximately $5,000. Smith related that the city provides office space in city hall for environmentalists, that mileage expense is reduced significantly, and the city also pays for utilities and phone service, she said.

Among the services the health department provides in cities throughout the county are: immunizations, family planning, blood pressure screening, and the WIC nutrition program.

At the present time, the department receives appropriations from the state, county commission and gets funds from Medicaid and Medicare. But the amounts vary, and Smith pointed out that the department never knows from one year to the next what its budget will be.

Two other letters were read by Man faces 3 counts

A 26 year old Tennessee man was arrested Aug. 25 at the Hwy 25 Club between Montevallo and Calera and charged with rape, strong armed robbery and grand larceny of a motor vehicle.

William Lee Smith, who now lives in Calera, is accused of raping a woman in Maylene, robbing her and stealing her car.

The suspect was placed under arrest by Sheriff's deputies Tom Smitherman and Neil Crim.

After being treated at Shelby Memorial Hospital, the rape victim was released. She is not from this county but had reportedly gone to Maylene to visit her boyfriend.

Cool comfort

The best way to enjoy a day in the park is to go barefoot. And that's exactly what this young man decided to do during Monday's Labor Day event in Orr Park.

Demos elect new officers

Teddy R. Brasher of Chelsea was elected chairman of the Shelby County Democratic Executive Committee at its August meeting.

He will succeed J. Claude Smith, who has held the post for three years.

Elected vice chairman was Dr. Milton Orr of Montevallo.

Mrs. Ann Parker of Montevallo was again selected to be secretary and treasurer, a post she has held for several years.

No nominations were offered from the floor. The delegates unanimously favored the slate that was offered by the nominating committee.

Brasher asked for the cooperation of all members of the executive committee, stating, "With everyone working together, we can be strong."

Uprooted

A number of uprooted trees, such as this one which landed on an unoccupied trailer in Pelham's South Gate Park, were left in the wake of last Thursday's heavy thunder storms. The Pelham Fire Department reported answering 15 calls from 5 - 10:30 p.m. that evening, including a barn fire in Riverchase, a house struck by lightning in Indian Hills, and numerous downed trees, power lines and false alarms. School bus fleet rolls 700,000 miles

by David Moore

With school now in full swing, the county's school bus fleet has once again taken to the roads and highways. Everywhere you drive in the mornings and afternoons you see the buses loading and unloading their school-aged responsibilities.

And some responsibility they carry, too. Out of the 11,000 students enrolled in Shelby County schools, an average of 8000 ride the bus twice a day, according to county records.

The county operates a fleet of 98 buses and seven reserves.

During the last school year, these buses traveled an approximate total of 700,000 miles--or the equivalant of not one, but nearly two round trips to the moon!

Besides repairing breakdowns, the county transportation department is also responsible for seeing to it that the buses are in top condition from a safety standpoint.

"We have a lot of work to do around here," understates Marvin Howton, bus shop supervisor.

At least once a month, whether there's a problem or not, every bus has to pass a safety inspection in which some 80 different points are closely checked from bumper to bumper. Until every turn signal is flashing and every brake working properly, that bus will sit in the shop.

Howton has five mechanics to keep the buses running smoothly and safely. The pit crew is made up of Jerry O'Neal, Jerry Davidson, Rick Morgan, Ugene Gardner and Grady Cash.

Besides checking the 105 buses monthly, Howton says, "Normally, we see probably 15 percent of the buses every day, replacing brake lights, flashers or other maintenance needs.

"If a driver calls in with any minor safety problem, we don't let that driver move the bus until the problem is checked out and fixed."

This means that not only are the mechanics constantly busy working on buses in the shop, but they also have to make daily field calls to buses stranded around the county.

Located in Columbiana's industrial park, the county bus shop moved next door to a new building last April.

"The old shop was so small we couldn't close the door with a large bus inside," Howton explains. "We'd have to climb over the work bench."

On top of any daily maintenance and the monthly inspection, the entire fleet is inspected

Hunting and fishing

Conservation Officer Doyle Wood (left), is presented a proclamation by Shelby County Probate Judge Tommy Snowden naming September 22 as "Hunting and Fishing Day". The proclamation asks all citizens to join with sportsmen "in a rededication to the wise use of our natural resources and their proper management for the benefit of future generations."

Plaque honors city court aides

A couple from Bessemer who have been volunteering their time in eight city courts in Shelby County for over a year were honored last Thursday night.

Eason Mitchell, judge of the city courts of Calera and Montevallo, presented Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sachs with a plaque honoring them for their work with persons convicted in the city courts.

The City Councils of Calera and Montevallo voted unanimously in writing the joint resolution praising the Sachs.

Mitchell said, in presenting them with the plaque, "We don't know how many lives you have saved, but it has probably been a large number."

Mitchell noted that Mr. and Mrs. Sachs have been coming to the court sessions in Montevallo and Calera for over a year helping the court with alcohol related problems.

They encourage persons convicted of driving while intoxicated to sign up for the special schools devoted to that training.

Mr. Sachs told the Reporter, "We try any way we can to help save a person's drivers license."

Under certain circumstances, the court will let a person keep his license if he or she agrees to take the four night school sessions that are offered regularly for such persons.

Sachs noted there is also a one-day school on Saturdays for truck drivers who cannot give four nights to the study program.

He said that among those who take the special course, there are very few who are ever again found to be driving while intoxicated.

Judge Mitchell said he gets a lot of satisfaction when a person tells him, "Judge, what you did to me changed my life to the good," but Mitchell credits others, especially the Sachs, for the joint effort that is usually required to help someone.

Mr. and Mrs. Sachs drive to the city court sessions in Pelham, Alabaster, Harpersville, Vincent and Wilsonville, in addition to Montevallo and Calera. They pay their own expenses, and contribute their time, even gearing their vacations around the scheduled court sessions.

Both retired, they indicate they enjoy the work immensely, and got into it at the suggestion of their son, Les Sachs, who is director of the Regional Alcohol Council in Birmingham.

Teenagers arrested

Three teenagers from Wilsonville were arrested Aug. 23 following a burglary at Bonnie's Service Station 2½ miles south of that community on Hwy. 25.

The station was entered during the early morning hours. Missing items included beer, cigarettes, lighters and candy. Most of the loot was recovered.

Arresting officers were Sheriff's Department Chief Investigator Reed Smith and Wilsonville Police Chief Sherman Humphries.

Aging program opens Vincent office

Representatives from state, county and local government were on hand Thursday when the Program on Aging opened a new office in Vincent.

Representative Sonny Moore applauded the over 60 group who is still active. "It's so gratifying to see you out on the Main Street of life," he declared.

In brief remarks before the official ribbon cutting to open the satellite office for the northeast end of the county, Moore noted that the legislature contributes $150,000 annually to the Program on Aging.

Vincent Mayor D.B. Smith also addressed the group who crowded into the Main St. office before he cut the ribbon. And brief remarks were made by Program Assistant Mrs. Lena Wright, County Coordinator Sue Tedford, and J. Claude Smith. Rev. Winston Brooks, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church delivered the prayer.

County Commissioner Alph Lowe and RSVP head Lois Farmer were also among the guests at the event.

Wright will be in charge of the Vincent office which she will operate with the assistance of the three nurses in the Home Health Care program who also occupy the building.

"We want to do our part," remarked Patsy Lucas, who heads the health care program, "to try and make life better and happier for all of us."

The Vincent office will be for information and referral. And craft lessons will also be conducted there every Monday afternoon beginning at 2 p.m.

Senior citizens from Dunavant, Wilsonville, Westover and Vincent attended the event and the Chilton County coordinator was also present for the opening.

New office opens

Vincent Mayor D.B. Smith cuts the ribbon officially opening a new office for the Program on Aging in Vincent. Looking on is Program Assistant Lena Wright, Director Sue Tedford and Representative Sonny Moore.

Some never learn

Pair arrested 3 times

Crime doesn't pay they say. But some people never seem to learn.

Two Columbiana men were arrested three times during the month of August. When they were picked up the last time, the pair was about to leave for Florida with $1,300 of stolen money.

Twenty year old Steve Roberson and 18 year old Paul David Wills were spotted in Alabaster by Alabaster Police Sergeant Stanley Oliver in the wee hours of the morning on Aug. 23.

Oliver detained the two for questioning because he had seen them come out from behind a building which had recently been burglarized.

It was learned that the two men had burglarized an occupied dwelling in Columbiana. They were charged with first degree burglary and taken to the Shelby County jail.

Further investigation revealed that Roberson had been charged with second degree burglary last year when the home of Jerry Salter on Hwy. 9 was broken in to.

Alabaster and Columbiana police and the Sheriff's Department investigated the Aug. 22 burglary which took place somewhere between 10 and 11 p.m.

Both of the suspects had been arrested Aug. 2 for taking two chain saws from the trailer in a pole yard near Columbiana. Only one of the saws has been recovered.

The pair was arrested Aug. 13 when the gate shack at the Helena Landfill was broken into and a TV set stolen.

Western garbage district divided

The solid waste department has made new arrangements for garbage collection in the western part of the county.

According to solid waste director Carlton Franks, district no. 1 has been split into two sections and garbage service will be provided by Kleen Kounty and Whitfield Sanitation.

Garbage collection has been in limbo during recent weeks due to the disappearence of David Whitfield who serviced the route for the past six months. At last report, Whitfield's wife had a baby, followed by medical complications.

Franks said that Whitfield's contract with the county for pickup service had been terminated.

"Our main idea was to get folks back on garbage collection," Franks said. He has been trying to contact David Whitfield for several weeks without any success.

Franks said that another Whitfield firm, Whitfield Sanitation, began service on Labor Day.

As for the customers billed in advance by David Whitfield, Franks said "We'll have to play that by ear." Franks said he had no copy of Whitfields billings as of yet.

Notes will be left at residences by their respective, new garbage service companies informing customers of pickup schedules.

You can tell summer's ending when popsicleman disappears

by David Moore

"It's the popsicleman! The popsicleman!"

The pink truck rumbles slowly down the street, its bell clanging cool, sweet promises through the hot afternoon air. A group of children jump up and down on the side of the road, exhibiting an excitement one would associate more with Christmas than the heat of August.

Joe Creel is the popsicleman. With a big toothless grin he asks the pint-sized customers what they want.

"I want a, ahh...(decisions of this magnitude are often tough)...ice cream sandwich!"

The little girl takes the cold steaming treat in one hand, palming out the other, filled with nickels, dimes and pennies, to the popsicleman.

Creel counts the money and gives back a nickel. "That's your change."

The girl takes the nickel, but it's not the shiny coin that causes her face to glow in eager anticipation.

Creel, a 61-year old retired truck driver from Birmingham, has been running a Baker's Ice cream route since March. He covers parts of Pelham, Alabaster, Maylene and Helena.

This particular day is his next to the last as "the popsicleman". Creel is taking a job as maintenance man at Westend Baptist, not because he dislikes the route, but to be closer to his church.

"I've enjoyed this work," Creel says. "I like meeting the public. It's kindly amazin'-I see those children out there and some of them I can look at and tell what they want."

Creel has found that keeping his route regular is better for business. "They know when I'm coming and usually have their money ready."

Oddly enough, most of the "kids" on Creel's route are not pint-sized. When they hear his bell they come out to the truck wearing coats and ties, skirts and hose, greasy clothes and hardhats. Often as not, sweat trickles off their faces like a popsicle dripping down a stick.

Most of Creel's stops are at places like Ken Terry Chevrolet, Tri-City Marine, Alabaster Industries, and Helena Industrial Park. He times his route to hit their afternoon breaks. Hitting concentrated areas such as these, saves on the gas he has to buy. If he gets there before the breaking workers go to the coke machines, he can sell a lot of ice cream and popsicles .

"I'm going to make it now--the ice cream man's here!" says a worker mopping his brow. "Gimme' a fudgie!"

"Hey, you're one minute late today. I need my Frooty Patooty Bomb!"

Many workers approach the pink truck sheepishly, the child in them a little too shy to order a Mouseketeer Bar. They settle for orange sherbets or frozen malts.

Other adults are less inhibited.

"Popsicleman! Popsicleman!"

"I used to do this when I was a kid. It's fun."

A lady at Ken Terry timidly orders a Big Baker.

"That's my best seller," Creel tells her. "That's what when we was little boys and girls they called a popsicleman."

"That's right!" she laughs, peeling the paper wrapper, for a moment a child again.

"People can get the same thing at the store," Creel says. "I don't know what it is about the popsicleman everybody likes."

The answer in part is popsicles. But Creel himself should probably take some of the credit. From his meager profits Creel sometimes buys bubble gum to give out free.

"Some kids don't have enough money. I'll give 'em a popsicle or something if I don't have any gum," he admits.

Creel says that one day, when he stopped at a store for lunch, a little girl came up and asked him why he didn't come through her neighborhood. He was attempting to explain to her about the effects of inflation on the price of gasoline when the store manager walked up.

"Who's that?" the manager asked the girl. "Santa Claus?"

"He's more than that--he's the popsicleman!" came the reply.

Admitting to being a "little over-weight," Joe Creel could pass for summer Claus who has shaved his beard and donned baggy trousers. He often gets tickled and laughs while joking with his customers.

Driving around for 11 hours a day with freezers full of ice cream, doesn't the popsicleman ever get the urge to eat a cool treat himself?

"Once in a while I'll eat a watersickle. But actually I'm trying to stay off the stuff.

He reaches out the window and clangs the bell.

"It's the popsicleman", cry children of all ages.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

I have always liked peas and I have spent a lot of time through the years fiddling around with other folks who liked peas. And one who didn't-- Clarence Abbott. Clarence and I started eating dinner together around 1948, usually at Simon's place on East College. And nobody had peas on the menu more than Simon did.

One day, about the third day, Clarence said: "If you don't mind Simon leave the peas off. I was raised on 'em. So I'd rather not see any peas."

That was the third day. On the 103rd day Clarence was still pushing his peas back to make room for his meat and potatoes. We ate dinner together for close to 20 years. And the last day, before he was to take to his bed, I remember seeing Clarence push the peas aside to make room for his meat and potatoes.

On the days Simon didn't have peas I'd make the rounds, to Mayo Rays cafe next to the taxi stand or Mrs. Jeff Edmondson's cafe across from the courthouse or the dairy bar next to the high school, hunting peas. And wherever they had 'em, that's where I'd spend my lunch hour.

Then there was Mike Whodunnit. Mike who was caught in the big town by the depression and who made his way back to the country and lived on peas all of 1929 and 1930 and 1931. Mike, who 30 years later was caught between his house and his storm pit with a cyclone heading his way, and made it to his pea patch and fell flat on his tummy until the big wind passed. When they asked him about it, he said: "It took care of me through a depression. So I figured it would do the same in a storm."

Which brings us to where we are tonight. Just sitting here thinking about peas and how I spent the morning. I left home and drove up highway 42 and turned left and drove another mile on highway 47 and turned right. It's not too far from there to where I was going. Except I didn't know then just where I was going. But I found out later on at Mrs. Wade Templin's place.

"You got any peas a guy can pick?" I asked her.

"No, I haven't," she answered. "I think you can find some over at Alfred and Nora Talton's place."

And I did, in a pea patch that looked like it reached forever. Almost 17 acres, with a little corn patch thrown in and a medium-sized watermelon patch. All the rest was peas.

I didn't pick but four pounds. At 20 cents a pound that came to 80 cents. But it had taken a long time. I sort o' picked out the peas that suited my fancy. And, besides, it had been so long since I had found something to eat for just 20 cents a pound that I wanted to hang around and enjoy it.

If you want to see me, say about next Monday morning, don't call the house. Come out to Alfred and Nora Talton's pea patch, between Good Hope Church and the Columbiana road. That's where I'll be. As sho' as shooting.

Who has education rights in north Shelby County?

by Marcia M. Sears

It seems only yesterday that the University of Alabama in Birmingham objected strenuously to the University of Montevallo's plans to build a classroom building in Pelham near the entrance to Oak Mountain State Park. The land had been acquired by Montevallo with the purpose of expanding its course offerings to a wider population base in Shelby County.

UAB apparently did not want the University of Montevallo to establish a permanent base in Pelham, which UAB apparently thinks is its territory. UAB said, in effect, that it was all right for Montevallo to offer extension classes at Pelham High School and at Valley School, but not to build a building.

After UAB's complaints to the Alabama Commission on Higher Education (ACHE) the members of ACHE sided with UAB and Montevallo graciously abandoned plans to go ahead with a Pelham center. At that time, it was unusual for a university to pay any attention to ACHE's recommendations, because the organization had very little legal power to enforce its will. But Montevallo went along in the interest of peace and harmony among the educational institutions of the state.

A few months later however, UAB announced it had taken over the magnificent building in Oak Mountain State Park which was built as a restuarant, and the Conference Center next to it.

Now, UAB is scheduling classes there (albeit non-credit courses).

Where is the protest from ACHE? Is Montevallo supposed to sit idly by and watch this with equanimity?

Everyone would agree that the general level of education could always be improved, and theoretically, the more courses offered to the public the better it is for everyone. But at a time when arguments are raging throughout Alabama on the subject of too much duplication in extension courses, and too many college programs overlapping, this situation between UAB and UM seems unnecessary.

While UAB can hardly threaten the fine academic reputation of the University of Montevallo by promising courses in disco dancing and beginning yoga, one cannot help wondering what the ultimate object of UAB's move into Shelby County can be.

The following is a press release issued by UAB in regard to the matter:

Shelby County residents, UAB Special Studies is moving your way! Fourteen exciting non-credit courses will be offered at Oak Mountain State Park this fall.

Special Studies provides a way for everyone to spend some relaxing and enjoyable time each week at one of the states most beautiful parks. And, area residents will be saving gasoline while participating in unique learning experiences.

Most courses will be held in the Conference Center located on top of the mountain. Ample parking and lighting is available.

All classes will be held on weekdays in the evening, with a schedule that permits the whole family to participate.

Classes to be offered include: "Assertiveness Training for Men and Women,""Fundamentals of Drawing and Sketching," "Basic 35mm Photography," "Beginning Yoga," "Creative Stress Management --Unstressing Yourself," "Disco Dancing,""Fundamentals of Chinese Cooking," "Golf, Beginning and Intermediate," "Golf for Women," "History of Antiques," "Investing in a Chaning Economy," "Private Pilot Ground School," "Refresher Bridge" and "Supervisory Skills and Office Management Techniques."

For more information call Special Studies at 934-3870.

School buses

once a year by state school bus inspector Herman Browning, who has the power to ground every bus that doesn't pass his rigid scrutiny.

After his three-week inspection of the county bus fleet last May, Browning apparently has some nice things to say.

According to county transportation supervisor William Carter, Browning said, "The county bus shop has done a 180 degree turn in its maintenance program. As far as improvement goes, they're number one on the list."

Carter explains that past problems have been concerned with road breakdowns, engine problems more than safety factors. Browning's inspection this year disclosed only two malfunctioning turn signals, two small tailpipe leaks and two non-working tail lights, problems Carter says would have been corrected by the next county inspection.

Chasing down a blown fuse under a bus dash can be frustrating. And tightening the linkage on a steering system is a good way to bust a greasy knuckle. But despite last year's breakdown problem, all the hard work by the county bus department has paid off in the biggest way: not one accident or injury occured last year due to a mechanical or safety problem on a Shelby County school bus.

Scrambled Eggs

by bert seaman

It's that time of year when I know exactly what I'll be doing every Friday night.

Only this year, football began on a Thursday - and a very wet one at that!

The county team I was covering came away with a victory - I came away with a cold.

I think I'm going to try and get a law passed making it illegal to hold sporting events in the rain.

If it passed, hundreds of people would be spared the misery of sitting in soggy clothes for a couple of hours and maybe coming down with pneumonia, the flu or some other dreadful ailment.

However, judging by the rabid football fans I see at every game, they would probably be up in arms, defending their right to get soaked.

I guess I'm upset about the weather because I needed everything going for me the first time I was to use my new zoom lens.

Trying to operate it and keep an umbrella over my head at the same time proved to be a challenge that I wasn't quite up to. Nevertheless, I tried.

Since I'd never been able to make up my mind about which lens to get, I left the decision up to a friend who operates a camera shop.

"He takes football pictures and he'll know the best one for that purpose," I reasoned.

But when I saw the long awaited gem, my mouth dropped open in utter amazement. It looked monstrous - twice as long as I'd envisioned. I thought I might have to find a helper to assist me in holding the thing up.

So as the rain fell during the season's first game, I struggled to keep my camera level while trying to maintain an umbrella in an upright position.

Let me tell you about the juggling act I performed. I'd be all set to shoot and the dern umbrella would suddenly fall in front of the camera.

On other occasions it would tip too far backwards and fall on the ground behind me. When I'd lean over to retrieve it, the camera bag on my shoulder would fall off.

By the time I had everything in place and was ready to shoot again, the ball was usually at the other end of the field.

It's a wonder I got any pictures at all. My capricious umbrella also preformed a twirling act every once in a while. When I'd finally get it stopped by pressing the handle between my arm and body with all my might, the tab with the snap would be hanging in front of my lens.

I guess I really shouldn't grumble too much though. My pictures turned out fairly well under the circumstances. And since that's the case, they ought to be fantastic at the next game - that is, if it doesn't rain.

Writer resents W'ville garbage predicament

Letter to Editor:

As a citizen of the town of Wilsonville I feel that I have a legitimate complaint against our honorable mayor, Mr. Austin Mitchell, and the members of the city council: Councilwoman Dot Scruggs, Councilwoman Mildred Jobe, Councilman Sherrel McClure, Councilman Bill Bob Ray and Councilman J.E. Bryant.

I am enclosing a letter sent to all patrons of the garbage pick-up by the city. It states that by contacting the proper authority anyone physically unable to put garbage by roadside will be given special consideration by garbage collectors.

Since I have a bad leg and am unable to use my left arm I went to city hall and informed them of my disability and asked for help. They already knew that my husband had died a few months earlier and that I live alone. I was told that the matter would be taken care of at the next council meeting. That meeting took place Monday night, August 27 and the mayor and council discussed the matter and in general they decided not to accept my request. Because I can drive my car and run a boat does not mean that I can pick them up. I can gather my garbage up, but I cannot pick the can up.

Only one time since my husband's death has my garbage been picked up by the city. That was a time when a neighbor put it out on the roadside for me. All the other times my children have taken care of it by taking it home with them, one to Birmingham and the other to Knoxville, Tenn. In spite of this I have paid my garbage collection fee regularly.

I have been told that if I produce a doctor's certificate I may have special handling of my garbage. It is a well known fact that several people in Wilsonville are receiving this special handling service and not one has been asked for a doctor's certificate to my knowledge. I have a doctor's certificate, but I refuse to turn it in since after checking with the city hall, I found no one else has been requested to show one.

I think it is time for the people of Wilsonville to be made aware of the kind of city government we have. Who knows who the next victim of these discriminating practices will be?

Thank you for printing this letter. I feel better for having aired my injustice.

Senator favors alcohol fuels

Saying that alcohol fuels produced from farm products and wood wastes could replace 25 percent of our oil imports by 1985, U.S. Sen. Donald Stewart today predicted that farmers and rural communities will play a vital role in our nation's energy future.

The energy-conscious senator also criticized the President's proposed $88-billion synthetic fuel package for neglecting alcohol fuels and creating what he termed a "new energy bureaucracy."

"Alcohol fuels production, stimulated by a grant and loan program such as the one I have introduced in Congress, can meet the projected goals of the Administration's proposed $88-billion Energy Security Corporation for only a fraction of the cost and without creating a new government agency," Stewart said.

"The Administration would have us commit most of our capital towards the development of one energy alternative," he added. "I don't think the country should put all its eggs in a single basket."

Referring to the Rural Energy Independence Act that he introduced shortly before the August recess, Stewart said his bill would authorize the secretary of Agriculture to make $1-billion in loan guarantees and $250-million in direct loans available to on-farm or commercial projects designed to produce alcohol fuels from agriculture and forest products.

"My measure will not only make farmers energy independent, but it will also enable them to contribute to meeting the energy needs of the rest of the nation," Stewart said.

By placing special emphasis on the development of small-scale - plants and individual producers, the Alabama Democrat said his bill would create a new industry for the state that would boost both the general economy and the revenues of the rural communities.

"Some folks don't want it (alcohol fuels production) as a viable alternative, because that means energy decisions will not be made by a large conglomerate," he said. "Frankly, I think that's a plus to my proposal."

The senior senator also predicted that alcohol fuels would become a part of any overall energy package passed in Congress since his measure had already gained the support of key Senate leaders.

Montevallo Methodist Church explores 'dimensions of faith'

Five dynamic Sunday evenings entitled "Dimensions Of Faith" are scheduled September 16 to October 14 at Montevallo Methodist Church. The series begins with a discussion-demonstration by Ann Wood, University of Alabama Sophomore, who is the first woman to receive a full athletic scholarship to the University. She will share with the audience her talent, her love of working with children and her growing Christian faith. She is ranked as the "Number One Woman Gymnast" in Alabama.

On one evening, Dr. C. Nolen Hudson, Medical Doctor and Minister, will present glimpses of life in Libya where he served as Medical Missionary for the Methodist Church. His story and slides will both disturb and inspire people who have access to good nutrition and health care.

"How Fair Was The Trial Of Jesus?" The answer to this question will be discussed by a well known Attorney at Law, Mr. James Wesley Cameron of Montgomery.

Another Sunday evening will feature a reader's theatre entitled "Billy Budd" presented by the Wesley College Group. The dramatization shows the dilemma of a young man, who commits violence for good purposes.

The series will conclude with a sermon by Bishop Carl Sanders, Resident Bishop of the North Alabama and Alabama-West Florida Methodist Conferences.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"The Home"

The home is the bulwark of society. The marriage tie is the closest of all earthly ties. The marital relationship is closer than the relationship of parents and their children. So firmly does God tie the golden knot of marriage that it can be untied only by death or by fornication.

Christ warned, "And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery." (Matthew 19:9) Paul stated, "For the woman that hath a husband is bound by law to the husband while he liveth; but if the husband die, she is discharged from the law of her husband. So then if, while the husband liveth, she be joined to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: but if the husband die, she is free from the law, so that she is no adulteress, though she be joined to another man." (Romans 7:2,3)

Dear reader, make your home a Christ-centered home. The homes that Christ rules are the happiest and best homes in the world. The Word of Christ represents the solution to whatever problems may arise in the home. Put Christ first in everything, and your problems will be few and easily solved. Live a life of purity and faithfulness to the marriage vows: your marriage will be blessed by God, and it will be a haven of joy and security for your children. It will also contribute greatly to the strength of the nation.

the mayor. One was from Cub Scout Pack 394 thanking the city for letting them use the depot in the park for their meetings.

Kay Watts from the Youth Aid Bureau wrote that a successful camp had been held in the city park on Simmsville Road.

In other business, the mayor mentioned that Pelham Moncrief's moving from the city had left a vacancy on the Park and Recreation Board. The council was asked to consider a replacement.

10 MONEY-MAKING REASONS FOR SAVING AT UNITED FEDERAL.

At United Federal, we offer plenty of different reasons for saving with us. Take for example our interest rates. They're the highest allowed by law. And look at our minimum deposits for our high rate certificates. Now with a minimum of $100 you can take advantage of our higher interest rates. (That's $900 less than our old minimum deposit requirement). And all savings accounts, with the exception of Money Market and Jumbo, pay interest compounded continously.

But at United Federal, our customers tell us one of the most important reasons for saving with us is the friendly, personal, and professional attention they receive. The way we look at it, a savings and loan should offer more than just high interest rates. So at United Federal, we've concentrated on being more of a financial partner; on everything from $5.00 Passbook Accounts to $1,000,000 Jumbo Accounts.

At United Federal, the interest we give doesn't stop with your money.

DPS thanks phone company aid group

Trail blazing is one of the marks of a pioneer.

Last week a group by that name was honored by the Shelby County Department of Pensions and Securities for contributions to the agency.

DPS Director Susan Treadwell hopes that other service clubs will follow in the path blazed by the South Central Bell group.

In order to show their appreciation for the contributions the Pioneer Club has made to the agency over the past few years, the DPS presented a plaque Wednesday to W.B. Lammert who has coordinated the program of assistance.

"They've been our salvation," Treadwell said of the organization which has 600 members in the south council.

In addition to monetary donations, she related that the group has provided toys for foster children at Christmas, food at Thanksgiving, "and they're always ready to offer assistance any time an emergency comes up."

A member of the Pioneer Club's east council was responsible for initiating the program.

"I heard someone say that the organization had some money to spend," remembered Hester Norris, "and I knew just where it was needed."

The telephone company employee's sister is Clara Roberts, a DPS worker in Shelby County.

Since she first mentioned the department's need for assistance, the Pioneer Club has responded in a number of ways. In addition to those already listed, they have also provided wheelchairs on various occasions.

Norris was on hand Wednesday as one of the guests of honor when the plaque of appreciation was presented.

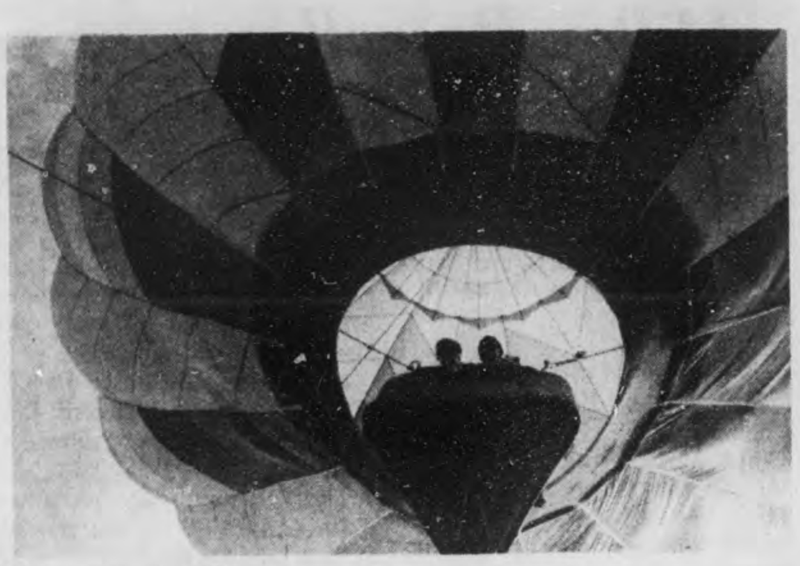
Maylene Marine finishes course

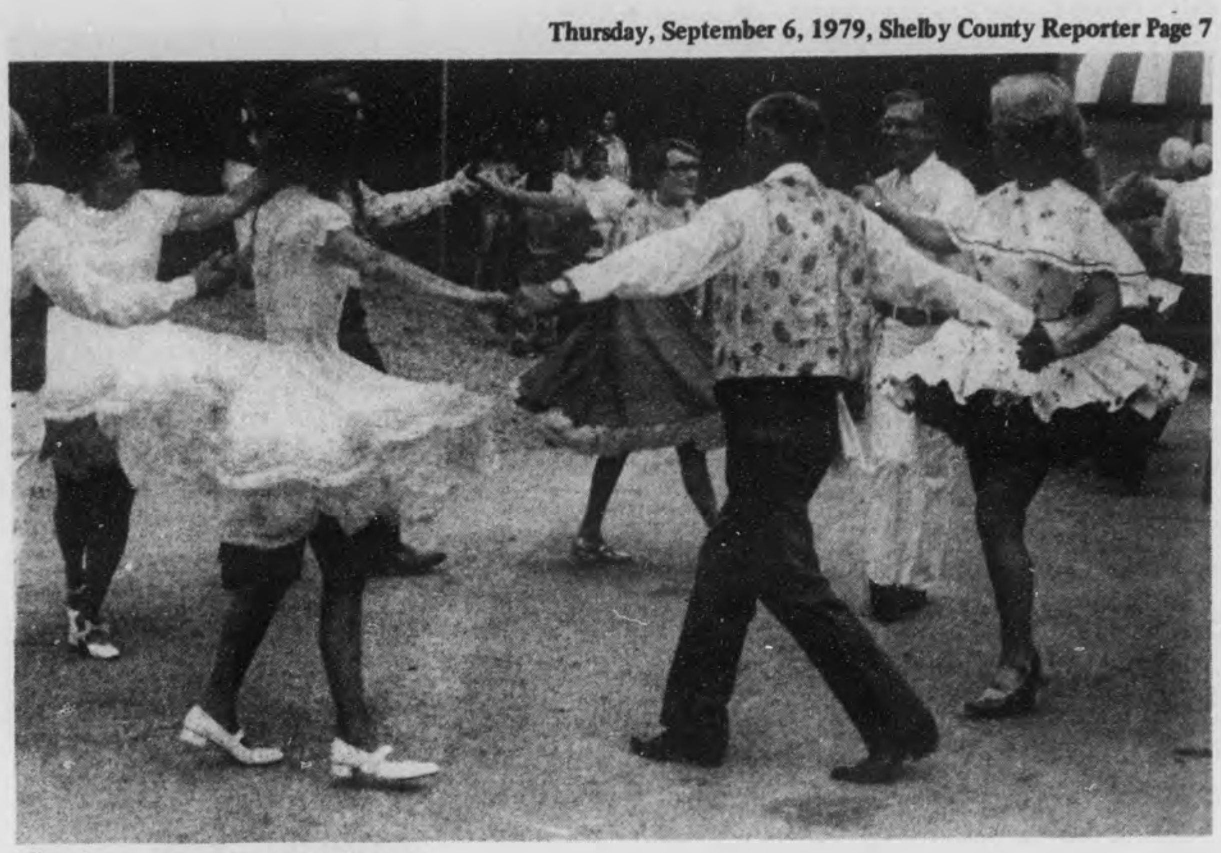
Marine Pfc. David P. Lowe, son of Lloyd C. and Laval S. Lowe of Maylene, has completed recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S.C.

During the ten and one-half-week training cycle, he learned the basics of battlefield survival. He was introduced to the typical daily routine that he will experience during his enlistment and studied the personal and professional standards traditionally exhibited by Marines.



Up, up and away

A tethered hot air balloon lofts Don Hughes and Dot Bishop some 30 feet above Mitton Orr Park at Montevallo's Labor Day celebration.



Swing your partner

The Shelby Shufflers were part of the entertainment when Montevallo celebrated Labor Day in Orr Park. The Helena based group has been dancing together for three years and is often called on to perform at special events.

Seeds produce giant melons

Fishermen talk about the big one that got away and the same thing seems to happen to E. B. Hughes biggest melon every year just before Fair time.

The Columbiana man has raised several whoppers, but they always ripen before they can be exhibited at the Shelby County Fair.

This year the story is the same. The cream of the crop which he had to pick Saturday, weighed in at 122 pounds.

But there's another one in Hughes garden which he hoped will reach 100 pounds by the time the fair opens.

His first experience with growing melons using the North Carolina Giant seed resulted in an 80 pounder in 1976. And the next two years, Hughes reports the seeds produced melons of 100 and 114 pounds. A 98 pound melon is the largest he's ever shown at the fair, however.

The gardener is the Maintenance Technician at the Shelby county Board of Education office. He and his wife live in the Bethel community near Columbiana.

Mrs. Hughes, who knows a thing or two about gardening herself, related that the melons seemed to thrive best in a grassy area and when the weather is the hottest.

Noting that the big melons gain between a pound and a pound and a half a day, Mrs. Hughes said, "You can almost see them grow."

Monster melon

E.B. Hughes won't be able to win any prizes at the county fair with his 122 pound watermelon because it rippened too soon. But he was anxious to show off his giant melon to Reporter readers.

Pedal pusher

Matushiro Takada, 22, of Omiya, Japan, paused at Battery Distributors in Pelham last Thursday to fix a flat on his pack-laden 10-speed bike. Starting in San Francisco on July 20, he pedalled to Reno, Nevada, where he caught a bus to Denver. From there, he's been pushing the pedals crosscountry enroute to visit a friend in Montgomery. Takada is due back in Japan this week to finish his education in economics. (Photo by Moore)

Shelby Shufflers kick up heels

"Square dancing is much more popular than a lot of people realize," remarked a member of the Shelby Shufflers as she waited with her group to perform at a Labor Day event.

The Helena based square dance group is one of 25 clubs in the Birmingham area and 14 couples regularly attend the two monthly events.

Sometimes the club is asked to perform at special events such as the Labor Day observance Monday in Montevallo's Orr Park.

The group has been together for three years and has out of county members from such areas as Hoover and Vestavia.

Dances are held at the Helena Elementary School the second and fourth Thursday of each month. And the club is planning to start giving lessons at the school every Monday evening beginning Sept. 10.

Anyone who would like to have more information may contact Cheryl Handley, 663-0903; Rita Ray, 663-1637 or Jo Henderson, 663-7239.

Kenneth Mullins of Helena is club president.

Cooperating with your partner was the name of the game as youngsters and adults too tried their skill in a three legged race. There were a good many spills for most of the contestants before they reached the finish line.

Elastic plant families enjoy Labor Day outing

The crowd that filled Columbiana's city park Saturday were in the mood to have a good time.

Youngsters went to town on the swings, slides and monkey bars while some of the more energetic adults played volleyball and softball.

And a three legged race was also on the schedule of events at this years Labor Day outing for employees of the Elastic plant.

As in past years, one of the highlights of the day was a drawing for prizes. Money from the plant's soft drink machine is used to buy the items which range from baseball gloves to binoculars.

The affair also included a buffet style luncheon and after filling their plates most families found a shady spot to eat their meal.

There was all kinds of fun to be had in the Columbiana Park Saturday. This young man found his thrills by hanging upside down as he swung through the air.

The seat on the Donald Duck spring toy made a dandy place for this youngster to eat lunch. Most of the crowd in the park found more conventional seating.

Columbiana PTO sets first meet

The opportunity you may have been waiting for to express whatever you would like to see and help accomplish in our Columbiana Schools this year or for years to come has been provided for you through the placing of "PTO Suggestion Boxes" in three locations in town and in each of the three schools. You will find PTO Suggestion Boxes in both town drug stores and in Columbiana 5 & 10 Store."

Mrs. Lewis further states: "ThePTO Concession Stand will be operating full force for the next three weeks for the two Friday Night Ball Games and the Week of County Fair plus upcoming B Team and Varsity Team Games. A crew of volunteers are needed to staff the concession stand accomodations. Interested students as well as parents can contact me at phone 669-9357 or 9613."

Mrs. Lewis adds: "The Concession Stand is in dire need of an apartment-sized electric stove and steam warmer unit and any donation of these items will be welcomed."

THINK ABOUT CONVERSATION GROUPINGS

Probably nothing is more important when arranging your living room furniture than to make sure it's arranged properly for conversation. Even if you have the most beautiful furniture in the world, if it's not arranged to allow easy conversation between two or more people, you haven't made your home all it could be.

Try to place some chairs and sofas so that people can see each other with a minimum of turning their heads. Conversation is inconvenient if people are lined up in a straight line, and have to crane their necks to see those they're talking to.

Conversation groupings should also have the seating pieces close enough together so people can talk easily. On the other hand, you want to leave enough space between peices for comfort and movement.

Every living room should have at least one basic conversation grouping; if necessary, you might also want to consider two or more such groupings.

It's helpful for you to have enough tables on which you and your guests can easily place refreshments.

Try to have one conversation grouping more-or-less permanent so you don't always have to move chairs around each time guests come. To see the perfect furniture to help any conversation group, stop in here.

Beverly J. The ceremony recognized those students who completed their degree requirements in the 1978-79 summer quarter.

YMCA dance, baton classes open for fall

Two YMCA instructors who are enthusiastic about the programs they'll be offering this year are Beverly Brackett and Tammy Festavan.

Last year Brackett began dance classes at the Siluria facility and Festavan gave instruction in twirling.

"We're all set for another big time at the Y this year," noted Brackett. Because of the good response to last year's programs, she said they are being expanded this year.

Registration for both classes begins this week. Parents will be invited to a year end recital in May, Festavan said, so they can see what their children have accomplished.

Tap and ballet classes for pre-schoolers will be held from 2:30-3:30 p.m. on Thursdays and 1st and 2nd graders will come the same day from 3:30-5 p.m.

New church sign inspires both faithful and converts

Can a piece of wood speak?

Members of Underwood Baptist Church are beginning to think that it can.

As a result of a new sign that was erected at the church, two people have already been converted. And according the the church's pastor, John Pendleton, a number of people driving by the church have stopped to read the words on the three crosses and ponder their message.

'Died for sin, died in sin and died to sin' are the words Pendleton had inscribed in the wood.

The sign was built by Bob Snow, a member of the congregation. The minister related that all of the cabinet makers family pitched in to give him a hand with the project.

To make the sign even more attractive, a flower bed will be made around the base. Ben Peete, a nurseryman and deacon in the church, will handle that project.

The conversions which are attributed to the sign took place in another church. According to Pendleton, a minister driving past the church stopped to read the sign and decided to base a sermon on it.

Asked to fill the pulpit of the Underwood church in May, Pendleton said that he's gratified to see the congregation growing each Sunday. And he noted that plans are being discussed to expand the facility.

Organized in 1917 as a Missionary Baptist church, members have always placed a strong emphasis on missionary giving. Last year they were fifth in the state in the percentage of their contribution.

Lay Lake skiers master 'barefooting'

Six young men from the Columbiana area have been polishing their water skiing techniques on Lay Lake this season, and have reached the stage where they can ski barefoot.

Sometimes called the "barefoot sextet" Mark Harless, Tim Curtis, Kenny Curtis, Rodger Hutto, Terry Jones and Renea Tolleson, mastered skiing barefoot by kicking off one ski after starting and three of them have also learned how to deep-water start without the assistance of a ski - a feat considered very difficult.

As many as five of them have been pulled barefoot behind a ski boat at one time.

They have also set out two slalom courses for practicing regulation skiing, which means taking feet off the rope at a high rate of speed.

Their favorite part of Lay Lake is near Reed Creek, where spectators can see them roaring through the "S" curve at 40 miles per hour.

THS girl enjoys pistol marksmanship

You might expect to find a teenage girl spending her leisure time listening to records, talking on the telephone or wondering about a new hairdo. You wouldn't expect her to be looking down the sights of a gun barrel.

However, that's what a 14 year old Brierfield girl enjoys doing whenever she can find a minute.

Since her father enjoys hunting, LaJunta Hood has been around guns since she was a youngster. And at the age of eight she started shooting.

Just recently she's acquired a 375 magnum hand gun and now she's aiming to enter competitive events. So to improve her marksmenship, her father has made a practice range for LaJunta in back of their house.

"She has an affinity for this type of thing," Hood pointed out, "and I'd like to see her excel ."

Explaining why he bought his daughter the 375 magnum, Hood said that the 22 calibre pistol she had been shooting wouldn't have been suitable for competitive events.

The gun LaJunta will be using when she puts her skill against that of other marksmen has special handles and sights. Hood also noted that the action was designed especially for her so it would be easier to fire.

The Thompson High School freshman is anxious to - enter her first competition. Shooting as often as she can on her own regulation firing range, she has so far qualified at 7, 15 and 25 yards.

W'ville serviceman in Leavenworth course

Maj. Emmett E. Hughes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett O. Hughes, Route 1, Wilsonville, recently arrived at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., to attend the Regular Course at the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College.

The 10-month course at the Army's senior tactical school is designed to produce graduates who are competent military problem solvers. Emphasis is on career development for the officer's future duties as a senior commander or staff officer.

Hughes was graduated from the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., in 1967. He also received a master's degree in 1973 from Arizona State University.

His wife, Angela, is with him at the fort.

Pelham students granted transfers into city

The fact that some children living within the Pelham city limits haven't been able to attend school there because of attendance zone lines rankles their parents and the city's governing body.

But some progress was made on the matter when Pelham Mayor Burk Dunaway and two members of the city council appeared at Wednesday's Board of Education meeting.

It was agreed that students may now transfer on an individual basis. However, if they're going to make the move this year, it was stipulated that their request must be in the Board of Education office by 4 p.m. on Aug. 31.

Pelham has sought to have the problem remedied for several years, Mayor Dunaway said, but previous requests for action from the board have fallen on deaf ears, he noted.

During a discussion of the situation, Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles mentioned his concern with the space problem if a mass transfer occurred.

He was assured by the mayor, and Councilmen Ray Hamilton and Roy Jowers that no more than ten students would change schools this year. And it was pointed out that no more than 75 students would be involved in the gradual transfer process.

The superintendent also mentioned the possibility of the racial balance being upset. Although the county is no longer under the court order to follow desegregation guidelines, "We're still under the scrunity of the court," Knowles pointed out.

A blanket freedom of choice of schools, the superintendent reminded the panel, "carries implications that would open a Pandoras' box."

Reporting that the majority of the families affected by the change are in the Keystone area, where the per capita income is about the lowest in the city, the mayor said he thought the federal courts would take this into consideration.

Admitting that granting transfers to the Pelham schools on an individual basis is "only a half way measure," Knowles said however, "It's something we could live with."

The board agreed to give the superintendent the authority to approve the transfers until space becomes a problem.

Changing the zone lines will be studied, Knowles said, but a recommendation probably won't be made before the end of the year, he added.

VHS nighttime vandal rips drink machines

Labor Day night found at least one person working hard to get $15. What happened was that someone climbed a ladder and entered the Vincent High School gym from the roof. After breaking in, the vandal stole $15 from two lobby drink machines.

According to VPD Chief George Humphries, the break-in was staged between 8:30 p.m. Monday night and 8 a.m. the following morning.

Heavy duty metal shears were used to cut out the coin boxes on the machines, Chief Humphries reported. He noted that a window had also been broken out in the lunch room, but nothing has yet been reported missing.

Chief Humphries said he had a suspect in the case, but had made no arrests as of press time Tuesday.

The Chief said he drew no connection between the robbery of the school drink machines and the recent wave of night robberies which have hit outside drink machines at area service stations. A key has been used on the service station robberies, he said.

Giving loud advice

Wildcat coach Mark Bradley discusses the next play for his team with junior Hugh Sims during the second quarter of action against Montevallo last Friday night. (photo by Richard Crosby)

'Cats whip 'Dogs 15-0

by Richard Crosby

Shelby County's Wildcats are alive and frisky as ever as Montevallo learned Friday night in Columbiana. One of the largest crowds in recent years witnessed a 'Dog and 'Cat fight that will be remembered for a long time. The Wildcats got their first win of the year in a four quarter bout which had the final score in their favor 15 to 0.

Defense was the key to the game as both Montevallo and Shelby County were pretty much held at bay. The Wildcats did manage to drive the ball downfield several times but the Dogs stiffened and forced a punt.

In the first quarter, Shelby County took the kickoff and drove toward the goal-line, running at will against the Montevallo defense, but on a pitch near the 20 yard line, the ball fell through the back hand and Montevallo recovered.

On the ensuing play though, Montevallo had the ball knocked from Paul Russell's hands by Dana Vansant and Arthur Johnson and Jamie Benson picked up the loose pigskin and ran 23 yards to the endzone. On the conversion, a bad snap forced quarterback and place kicker Dan Head to scramble around right end. He found Guy Mitchell open in the endzone on the automatic play and connected for a two-point conversion. With 7:29 left in the first quarter Shelby County had the lead 8 to 0.

The remainder of the first half was a duel between the two teams fighting for field position. In the last seconds of the half, Shelby County lined up for a field goal attempt but called time after seeing the Montevallo defense. Two time-outs later the Wildcats tried a reverse that failed to bring them a touchdown.

The final score of the game came late in the fourth period when Daron Burns burst four yards around right end for the game clinching touchdown. Dan Head added the PAT with a kick that split the uprights making the score 15 to 0.

"Defense was the best thing we did," Coach Mark Bradley said after the game. "Coach Don Pouncey is a defensive head coach and he did a super job of preparing our kids."

"We showed a lot of class by our play" coach Richard Gilliam said of his Bulldogs. "They never gave up."

Shelby County hosts Sylacauga this week in Columbiana for the Wildcats' first Region game. "It's real, real important that we show improvement each week" Bradley told the Reporter. "We need a good week of practice and our offensive line needs to block better.

"But, the best thing about our team is unity. Out kids believe in themselves, each other and in us (the coaches). As long as we've got that we'll be competitive."

"We've got to spend a lot of time in our offensive consistency", Coach Gilliam said of his team. "Our center/quarterback exchange needs a great deal of improvement or a personnel change. Montevallo faces Dallas County this Friday night and should be another tough contest for the Bulldogs who look for the first win of the 1979 season.

Vincent falls prey to Abrams 14 to 7

by Richard Crosby

Vincent's Yellowjackets were stung by Abrams Thursday night in Bessember 14 to 7. The Jackets had the lead but succumbed on two quick plays in the second quarter and from there couldn't generate any offense to get themselves back on top.

Dwight Spradley scored the only Vincent touchdown of the night on a three yard run in the first quarter. Rodney Driggers added the PAT to put Vincent ahead 7-0.

In the second quarter, Abrams countered with a 20 yard touchdown pass and a 30 yard quarterback sweep which combined for 14 points.

The second half was scoreless but not without excitement. Vincent had two potential scoring opportunities called back on penalties. An apparent 70 yard run for a touchdown was called back in the third quarter, and in the fourth, a 65 yard run to the five yard line was nullified by a penalty.

For the records, Spradley had 65 yards on 11 carries and Sidney Yowe collected 39 yards on nine carries. The Yellowjackets only managed 91 yards rushing but did collect 107 yards in the air. Vincent quarterbacks went to the air 10 times and completed five with two interceptions.

Vincent also was ahead in first downs with 11 to Abrams six.

The Jackets travel to Lincoln this week for another hot rivalry. Coach Gary Garrett's crew will be looking for its first win of the year and with a lot of hard work in preparation, the Jackets will be ready to add a notch in the win column.

Shelby Raiders tie, Coosa Valley loses, in first week's action

by Richard Crosby

Coosa Valley and Shelby Academy failed to win opening games of the season last weekend. The Rebels lost to Central of Montgomery 22 to 0 and shelby Academy tied meadowview 0 to 0.

"We were beat like a drum" Coosa Valley head coach Mark Green said Sunday night. "We have a great deal of work to do. Central drove the ball down our throats."

Coosa Valley managed only 35 yards total offense against Centrals 300 plus. The Rebels' punting game went well until a one attempt was blocked.

Shelby Academy had a different story. The defense was the key to keeping Meadowview scoreless, but the offense

A short gainer in the fourth quarter

West Blocton's runningback breaks through for a short gainer against the Calera defense. The Eagles swamped the Tigers from Bibb County 35 to 0 in the first game of the year and also the first game for Head Coach Danny Alverson. Both the Calera offense and defense shined in the season opener held at Oliver Park last Thursday night. (photo by Richard Crosby)

Eagles start 1979 with impressive win over West Blocton

by Richard Crosby

The Eagles scored an impressive win last Thursday night at Oliver Park as West Blocton became the first victim of the year. Calera ran up 35 points while holding the Tigers scoreless.

"It s good to start the season with a win, but we still have a great deal of work to do," coach Danny Alverson told the Reporter. "I think we looked good in spots. Our real test of the season comes this week against Holtville. We're going to have to improve in several key areas to be as competitive as we're capable."

The Eagles opened up the game with a touchdown on the third play as Bill Seay scampered 27 yards for paydirt. Johnny Ryan kicked his first of five successful point-after attempts to make the score 7 to 0.

Minutes later, still in the first quarter, Ryan passed to Fran Blanchard for a 16 yard touchdown strike. Ryan added the PAT making the score 14-0.

In the early part of the second quarter, Ryan got his first touchdown of the year with an eight yard run. Late in the second period, Fran Blanchard got his second score of the night with a 96 yard punt return. Several key blocks opened the path for the speedy Blanchard. Ryan toed true on the PAT to make the halftime score 28 to 0.

On the first possession of the second half, Calera moved in for another score, this one on the second play. Bill Seay broke around right end for a 45 yard scoring run. Ryan added the PAT to end the night's scoring.

The rest of the game was played near the middle of the field as both teams experimented and let the younger players gaim experience.

Leading rusher for Calera was Bill Seay with eight carries for 210 yards, Eric Lacey gained 66 yards in six carries and Fran Blanchard burst for 24 yards on his only run.

Defensive standouts for the Eagles were Jeff Stewart with 14 tackles, Dale Smith with 13, Kirk Ross with 12 and Curtis Barefield with 8.

Calera hosts Holtville this week at Oliver Park for an area battle which may determine which school will represent the area in the state playoffs.

Richard's gridiron picks

by Richard Crosby

Another big lineup of games is scheduled for this Friday night, so, without further delay, here's this week's guesses......

Shelby County-Sylacauga-The Wildcats have their first win of the year but Sylacauga doesn't. That may prove the difference as another record crowd turns out to cheer the Wildcats, but this time they won't go home smiling. Prediction: Shelby County 19, Sylacauga 33.

Vincent-Lincoln-The Yellowjackets are looking for their first win of the year and this week in Lincoln that win should come. Coach Gary Garrett's crew is ready to show offensive muscle and Lincoln will get punched out. Prediction: Vincent 26, Lincoln 13.

Thompson-Bibb County-The Warriors have had a lot of work to do since winning the Jemison game last week but I don't think they've had enough time to iron out the wrinkles. Chalk it up this week Thompson. Prediction: Warriors 7, Bibb County 26.

Montevallo-Dallas County-The Bulldogs need a win under their belts but like several other last week losers, it's going to be hard to get going as a tough schedule keeps a team from taking it easy. A lot of work has been done this last week but it won't be enough. Prediction: Montevallo 0, Dallas County 22.

Coosa Valley-Shelby Academy-One thing's for sure....one of the academies will win a game.....unless it's a tie. Both schools will have to get tough and a win won't be easy. Look for a low scoring affair even though it's 'The Game' for the private schools. Prediction: Coosa Valley 6, Shelby Academy 0 or 3.

Calera-Holtville-The Eagles need a win bad to show their competitiveness in the Area race. I didn't see a big grinding drive by the Eagles in last week's game and it's going to take that kind of football to win against Holtville. I doubt Calera can do it. Prediction: Calera 25, Holtville 44.

Chelsea-Briarwood-The Hornets and the Bears start the season the same week and against each other. It'll be a great game to watch but tough on the old heart muscle. Look for the Hornets to come from behind in this one. Prediction: Chelsea 17, Briarwood 13.

Pelham-Dora-The Panthers are red hot and have a reason to be after their first half performance last Friday night. A little conditioning work and the Panthers should put on four quarters tough football much to the delight of their fans. Prediction: Pelham 33, Dora 17.

That's all the guesswork for this week. Just for the record, last week I correctly picked six of seven games. See if you do as well this week.

couldn't get anything going on the scoreboard.

this week both teams face each other in what is the annual "Iron Bowl" of Shelby County Private Schools. The game will be played at Coosa Valley this Friday night.

"It's definately a close game," Green said of the upcoming contest. We don't have much and i understand they (Shelby Academy) don't have much more. Shelby is bigger than we are though."

Last year the Raiders upset Coosa Valley in one of the biggest games of the season. Coosa Valley graduated almost the entire team last May, and Shelby underwent coaching changes and lost several key players to graduation and Montevallo High School.

What should happen this Friday is one of the teams will get their first win and both need it badly to get their football program off on good foundation.

A large crowd is expected so come early to get a seat.

UM ready for volleyball season

Just because the University of Montevallo doesn't have football doesn't mean there can't be any athletic excitement around the campus in the fall.

In fact, the school's one fall team, the women's volleyball squad, last year proved to be the most successful team, if not the most thrilling. The Lady Falcons posted a 33-8 record, winning 12 in a row at one point, and hopes are high that such heights will be scaled once again this year.

Coach Beverly Warren and her Lady Falcons get their first test this Thursday when thy host Stillman College at UM's Myrick Hall at 7:30 p.m. The team has been working hard since the middle of August preparing for the new season, but Coach Warren, who has a two-year volleyball coaching record at Montevallo of 52-21, still isn't decided on a starting lineup.

"Our depth is our strong point," she acknowledges. "I feel that I can substitute freely with anyone on our bench and get a very effective performance. Everyone will play a lot, so i really hate to call anyone a "starter" or a "sub".

Four regulars are returning from last year's team, including All-State hitters Reita Price and Pam Ray of Thorsby and setter Frankie Crapet of Birmingham. the fourth starter back is setter Linda Benefield, who was All-State three years ago as a freshman and has continued to do a fine job.

In addition to those four, hitters Pam Morrison and Dawn Rice of Birmingham and Vanessa Felder of Homewood are returning lettermen, and all are bidding seriously for starting roles.

Coach Warren is quite excited about her three freshmen, Sandra Sims from Erwin High, Cathy Moore from Homewood, and Deborah Milliner from Huntsville. With some playing experience under their belts they are expected to become UM stars in their own right.

The Lady Falcons hope to get the season off on the right foot with a victory, because their next home match won't come around until Oct. 2. In the meantime, they will have three road matches and two tournaments. On Sept. 14-15, the Lady Falcons will be in the University of New Orleans tournament, and on Sept. 28-29, they will play in the Florida Southern College Tournament in Lakeland, Fla.

First game analysis

by Richard Crosby

The first week of football brought a few surprises with it. Montevallo, clearly an underdog, gave Columbiana all it wanted last Friday nght with a tough defense and an offense that shows promise with some work.

Pelham showed it had offensive punch with a bigger win over Bibb County than the score indicated. Watch out for those Panthers.

Thompson proved it has a lot of work to accomplish before being as tough as it really is. The Warriors now know their weaknesses so it's back to work for larry Simmons' crew.

Calera showed it has a lot of playoff promise but I'm a little concerned about the depth of the offensive line. Young players will have to be ready if injuries strike.

Vincent needs improvement on developing a consistent offense. Penalties should also be of big concern for the 'Jacket coaches.

Shelby County needs some help on the offensive line. Maybe it was Montevallo's defense that made the linemen look week. If so, they still need a lot of work.

Shelby Academy will have to put more effort in the offense. Judging by last week's game, the defense is fine but the scoring punch is weak. Coosa Valley needs both an offense and defense and faces a tough week of work.

Jemison falls victim to THS Warriors 14-0

by Richard Crosby

The Thompson Warriors started the 1979 season with a fourth quarter win over the Jemison Panthers. Thompson scored both of its touchdowns in the fourth quarter to take a win from a scrappy bunch of Panthers 14 to 0.

"The first half we couldn't move the ball. We just couldn't generate any offense" Coach Ellie Glasscox said of the game. "We got whipped on the offensive line."

The first half ended scoreless as both the Thompson defense and offense keep both teams from scoring. But early in the fourth quarter, the Warriors mounted a successful 50 yard drive with Bret Davenport bursting the final yard for the first Thompson touchdown of the year. A fumbled snap nullified the PAT attempt.

Thompson scored its final points of the night on a 20 yard pass from David Cofer to Steve Cutler with just a minute and a half left. Rod McDade carried for the two-point conversion making the score 14-0.

Two or three times in the game Jemison threatened but could never cross the Warriors' 25 yard line. Thompson also stopped Jemison drives with three interceptions and several fumble recoveries.

This week Thompson travels to Bibb County and county fans will be able to get a comparison between Thompson and Pelham. The Panthers whipped Bibb 26 to 20 and Thompson is expected to do at least the same this week.

The leading ground gainer for the Warriors was quarterback David Cofer with 75 yards out of Thompson's total 85 yards rushing. Cofer also successfully passed for 110 yards hitting 8 of 15 attempts.

FOR BETTER HUNTING AND FISHING

I don't want to say, "I told you so!", but that which had to happen has taken place.

The constant concentration on fishing for bass at the expense of any other species, such concentration initiated and fomented by bass tournaments, is reducing the quality of Alabama's fishing waters.

Don't tell me I'm wrong. I pulled one end of a 15-foot test seine through thousands of Alabama ponds and lakes for three decades to determine their fishing status. Invariably most of the waters producing poor fishing were those in which the bass populations were low. In a few cases the stocked bass fingerlings died. In several instances, the waters had become hopelessly populated with redeye bass, crappie, gizzard shad, warmouth bass, etc., from a stream feeding the lake.

But in the great majority of cases--possibly 90 percent--the pond balance problem was the removal of too many bass. Some pondowners simply couldn't wait until the stocked bass had reproduced. They and/or their fishing friends took out too many bass. Many sheepishly told me they caught 15 or 20 bass with a worm baited hook, "just to see how the fish were coming along."

"Don't you realize many of those fish didn't live after you took them off your hook?" I usually explained in my modest voice. "They died from stress--shock--from your squeezing them, from handling them with dry hands, from tearing swallowed hooks from their guts."

If you stock 1,000 bluegills and 100 bass per surface acre and you plan to fertilize, the difference in numbers should show you that the bass is the critical species.

"Shucks," one pondowner told me. "I built this 20-acre pond so I could catch bass when and as often as I wanted to. I don't fish for anything else."

"You'd better take it easy on the bass--that's your pop valve, your warning light, your watchdog on the total fish population. Bluegills and redears are your target, your bread and butter fish for sport and for eating. Don't take out more than a few pounds of bass per acre per year and nothing should go wrong. In fact, if you fish with pole or flyrod only, you'll accidentally hook enough bass to satisfy the annual harvest of bass."

My suggestions, backed up by the emphasis of the county agent who helped me drag the seine, went by the boards. The following year I heard the pond was giving nothing but stunted bream. The owner wanted me back. I refused. What good does it do for an MD to suggest to his patient with suspicious spots on his lung X-rays to give up smoking, but the patient changes to "cleaner" cigarettes and continues to puff away?

Today my friend, Dr. Bill Davies, Auburn University, is admitting that undoubtably heavy bass fishing pressure has resulted in poor fishing success in West Point reservoir. Bill says what has happened in this water can happen in other reservoirs. He admits quality of bass fishing has deteriorated in recent years.

In my opinion, the drop in bass fishing quality everywhere is related to the bass tournament, particularly the professional type. I don't believe these would exist if the price were not put on the head of each bass caught for tournament records. The biggest bass caught in a tournament carries a prize money award to the angler who lands it. The biggest weight of fish caught by an angler wins a boat or a fat money purse. As my friend, W.K. 'Happy" Askew, who shares the same feelings as I, says, "you would not believe the numbers of dead and dying fish everywhere during and after a bass tournament."

The 14-inch minimum limit some tournament heads imposed this year as a substitute for the 12-inch limit shows the lack of biological and psychological knowledge. To catch 14-inch bass you might have to catch three times as many bass to get a daily tournament limit, compared to the number of fish for a 12-inch limit. This means many 12 and 13-inch fish will be jerked off hooks and many of these may die. Bill Davies thinks that a 12 to 15-inch "protection" limit might be best for a fishing water. By this he means that fishermen could take out bass less than 12 inches and longer than 15 inches, but release those fish measuring in between.

However, I contend that "fun"--prize or money--fishing would dissolve all problems that exist today because of the big tournament emphasis for bass. Research--this is a laugh--is not going to appreciably improve bass. bass populations that much over what nature is now producing with safe water management.

At the Marion fish hatchery a few years ago Jack Snow coaxed largemouths to feed on pellets and grew 500 to a thousand pounds of bass per surface acre--as, as I remember, five to ten dollars per pound of fish produced.

Lake drawdown--which I advocated as Alabama Extension Service Fish and Wildlife specialist 15 to 20 years ago, will help some bass populations. I got this idea from the late brilliant Dr. R.W. Eschmeyer, whom I met and consulted with often and whom I considered a good friend, because he and I shared the same thoughts about pond fishing and management. Raising water levels in early spring could save some fingerling bass because you flood good bass cover vegetation. Stocking bait fish, such as threadfin shad, may benefit bass populations, as it has in Lake Martin.

But stocking bass is not the answer! We simply must reduce our emphasis on the bass--truly a magnificent but over-fished group of species!

Panthers whip Bibb County 26 to 20

by Richard Crosby

The Panthers are alive and a winning record was started last Friday night as Bibb County was the first to fall prey. Pelham marched off to a big lead and then had to hold on as Bibb staged a giant comeback try that fell short.

A 21 to 0 halftime lead was proved to be the difference as the Chocktaws collected 20 points in the second half compared to Pelham's 7. The final score had the Panthers as the winners 28 to 20.

"We played very good the first half but very poor the second half" coach Steve Rivers told the Reporter. "Tell you the truth, it's my fault. We weren't in condition. We got tired and just were not able to continue the caliber of play we had displayed in the first half."

River's added that the problem should be solved by Friday night when his chargers take on Dora. "They're real well coached and polished. They have an outstanding tradition and we're expecting a fight" Rivers said of the upcoming contest.

Against Bibb County, the Panthers got rolling early as Ricky Needham scored the first score of the year on a 2 yard run. Tommy Roy toed true on the PAT making the score 7-0.

Dale Busby got the second score of the night in the first quarter. His TD came on a short run set up by a long drive by the Pelham squad. The PAT attempt failed.

In the second quarter, Busby scored again, this time on a 6 yard run. Steve Rye carried the ball for the two-point conversion making the halftime score 21-0.

Busby carried for the Panthers' final score of the night in the third quarter. Roy again split the uprights for the PAT giving the Panthers a commanding 28-0 lead.

Bibb County took advantage of the pooped Panthers and started making things happen. In the third quarter, the Chocktaws broke for a 93 yard run for the touchdown. Grant Abercrombie thrilled the visiting fans with his running ability. Bibb scored again in the same quarter.

In the fourth quarter, pelham threatened to score as a 35 yard pass from Rye to Tracy Sweeney moved Pelham into striking distance, but a fumble on the one yard line turned the ball over. Bibb's Abercrobie got the call from there and scrambled 95 yards for his second and the team's third score of the night.

Leading rushers for Pelham were Needham with 48 yards, Busby with 61 and Rye with 46.

Woody Woodson punted four times for an average of 43.6 yards.

Specializing in big juicy sandwiches with steamed buns, manager Keat de la Torre recommends his famous New York Reuben.

Cheeses and meats are sold by the pound. When you're planning a party, Keat's party trays provide the perfect answer to pleasing your guests and you don't have to slave in your kitchen.

According to de la Torre, the thing that makes Keat's different from most grocery store delicatessens is that their meats are deli-cut meats, high quality smoked, aged and seasoned meats that can't be bought in the grocery stores.

Even if you're simply in the mood for a hot dog, Keat's offers you a different kind of hotdog--a big fat juicy all meat weiner inside a homemade bun.

Everyday Keat's gives you a $1.95 special...you get a sandwich, a bowl of homemade soup and a medium size drink.

Keat's is not another fast food place because food is prepared while you wait, the way you request it. But Keat's has a casual atmosphere complete with pinball machines and juke boxes for little kiddies as well as grown-up kiddies to enjoy while they wait. And when you taste the difference in quality, you'll be glad you waited.

So if you're traveling through Alabaster or just live there, satisfy all those hunger pains--at breakfast or at lunch--stop in at either The Breakfast House or Keat's Deli, which ever fits your tastes at the moment.

Calera library gets more space in former medical building

Book filled shelves have replaced medical equipment in the neat brick building adjacent to Calera High School.

The transformation from medical clinic to library began two weeks ago when members of the library board began carting volumes from the old library to their new quarters just a stone's throw away.

When doctors and dentists moved out of the city owned building, it was turned over to the library. Librarian Mrs. Era McClain and members of the library board are delighted to have more room for shelf space and reading areas.

In order to show off the new facility, an open house has been scheduled for Sept. 9 from 2-4 p.m. A program has been planned and the public is invited to attend.

During the past couple of weeks while city workers and board members were busy making the move to the new building, three young people were hard at work at the Shelby County Library.

Their part in establishing Caleras' new library, was to make a card catalog under the supervision of Library Director Pam Williams.

According to the new county librarian, the three UM students made cards for the 2,500 books in the Calera Library. Since a number of the books will have more than one card, Williams said that the three will be refiling a total of 6,500 cards.

The three students engaged in the project are: Tim Beiro, Rebecca Luker and Vickie Yarborough.

In hospital drill

Acteens become 'victims'

by Bert Seaman

When an Acteen group from Bay Springs Baptist Church in Shelby decided to take part in the Candy Striper program at Shelby Memorial Hospital, they never dreamed they'd wind up as patients.

But the six girls were all victims of a disaster at Thompson High School. Actually the roof collapse of the THS gym was a mock disaster drill and the girls enjoyed the part they played in it.

The teenagers have been working at the hospital every Monday afternoon from June through the middle of August to fulfill requirements in their Acteen Studiact program.

According to their sponsor, Mrs. Robbie Etress, the girls had to spend 50 hours on some type of service project. Remarking on the program at the hospital, Estres said, "It has been a fascinating experience for the girls and I think they've all enjoyed it and have grown because of the responsibility they've had."

And while the girls were working at their tasks at the hospital, Etress also did her bit for the patients. Working on First Floor North as a Pink Lady, the Acteen sponsor reported she did anything that needed doing.

In order to work "on the floor" in the hospital, Candy Stripers have to be 14. Since Paula Sparta and Susan Whitten aren't that old, they worked in the purchasing department and made octupus dolls for children entering the hospital.

The emergency room and pharmacy were two other stations where the girls helped out. Taking patients to their rooms and delivering flowers were also part of their duties.

"We got a good idea of what doctors and nurses do now," remarked one of the girls. "Now I see why they have to run so fast," she added.

All of the group, except for one who is graduating from high school, expect to return next year.

In the Acteen program, Ann White and Cindy Jones are working on their Queen Regency In Service, Jane White is working toward Queen Regency, Becky Keenum, Susan Whitten and Paula Sparta are all trying to reach the Queen level.

Sandra Cole, who is serving on the staff at Shocco Springs this summer, is also trying to achieve the Queen level.

Athletes' lounge

Columbiana's city council has purchased this house near the football field and has offered it to the High School as a lounge for athletes.

Deaf interpreters to meet

A Workshop for Interpreters and Workers with the Deaf has been set for First Baptist Church, Birmingham, September 7-8.

David Richardson, consultant, Alabama Baptist Special Missions Department, says the workshop is planned to help persons improve interpreting skills and become more effective workers with the deaf.

Program leaders are Mrs. Peggy Terrell of Childersburg, an instructor at the Alabama School for the Deaf; Mrs. Winnie Pace, Dothan, an interpreter for the deaf; and Harvey Williams, Birmingham, state coordinator of interpretation services for the deaf.

Sessions are set for Friday at 7 p.m. and Saturday at 9 a.m., with the workshop ending at 3:30 p.m.

County adds 3 mills to raise tax revenues

by Marcia M. Sears

Shelby County Commissioners voted Monday to restore a one mill tax for health purposes and to impose a two mill tax for repaying the cost of the reappraisal program.

The moves were made to help the county through the coming fiscal year, and were based on estimates of the amount of tax revenues expected.

Last spring, the Commission removed one of the four mills assessed for the county hospital, because the hospital board of directors said it would no longer be needed. But the Commission pays for several health-related services out of the general fund. By re-imposing the one mill tax the county can pay for costs at landfills, the county Health Department, and other services.

The two mills are legally allowed to replace the almost $1,000,000 cost of the court-ordered reappraisal of county property. The county had to float bonds to make payments on the program as it proceeded during the last five years.

It will take almost three years of collecting the additional tax to pay for the program, but the tax will then be discontinued.

Tax notices will be sent to property owners as soon as the county computer can get them prepared possibly by September 25. The time is running late and county officials are concerned that many errors in the process will make this a difficult tax-paying season for everyone involved.

Pelham faces 19% property tax loss; Council puts on new 1.5 millage

by David Moore

Pelham residents will see the addition of 1.5 mils to this year's ad valorem taxes, but will have to wait until next week to see if land located near the Indian Hills entrance will be rezoned for business.

The Pelham City Council Monday night voted to increase the ad valorem tax by 1.5 mils in hopes of countering the 19% decrease in the tax affected by the lid bill.

The assesment value of homes, decreased by the lid bill from 15% to 10% means a loss of $18,000 to the city in revenues, according to estimates by Mayor Burk Dunaway and City Clerk Willie May Dennis.

Dunaway pointed out that 19% was an estimate figure from the county tax assessor.

The added millage, which will come to about $7.50 on a home assessed at $50,000, will bring in $20,000.

"If by chance the assessor's estimate is high and we don't need the extra money, we won't enforce the mil and a half. But if she's wrong in the other direction, we're sunk," Dunaway said.

Councilman Ray Hamilton, calling the lid bill a "dadburn joke," proclaimed, "Pelham is not going backwards." Hamilton moved that the increase in millage, allowed for on a one shot basis by the lid bill, be set at 1.5. The motion was seconded by John Tanner.

Several residents in the audience said they would not mind seeing the millage increased by more than 1.5 to make sure that services could be continued.

Councilman Roy Jowers said at least a 2 mil increase was needed.

The motion to raise the tax by 1.5 mils passed by a vote of 3-1.

A public hearing was held at the meeting for the rezoning of the Thurman Wilson property from A-1 to B-2. The property is located on the west side of Hwy. 275 near the entrance to Indian Hills subdivision.

About a dozen residents from the area turned out to vocalize their protest against the zoning change.

One resident, Doug Jones, said that the Wilson property had gone "downhill". "If this is any indication of what commercial zoning will bring, then we don't want it. If this keeps up we'll have a city nobody wants to live in" he told the council.

Another resident pointed out that property protection against unwanted commercial encorachment was one of the main reasons the area voted for annexation into Pelham. He pointed out, too, that the planning and zoning board had recommended that the property not be zoned B-2. He noted that the board had, however, suggested a possible O-I zoning for the land.

Wilsonville talks train tie-ups

A speeding motorist wouldn't be surprised to be pulled over by a policeman and given a ticket.

But how is the engineer of a coal carrying freight train going to feel when Wilsonville Police Chief Sherman Humphries presents him with a citation?

Such a situation could occur if Southern Railway trains going to the Wilsonville Steam Plant continue to block crossings on highways 103 and 61 for more than 15 minutes.

Discussing the problem which causes traffic tie-ups and late to work motorists, the Wilsonville Council Monday night agreed some action was called for.

Councilwoman Dot Scruggs reported waiting in a line of traffic at the crossing for more than 20 minutes last week. She reminded the panel that the railroad had paid $250 a few years ago for the same violation.

The situation improved after that, Scruggs said, but she reported a new man with the line had recently taken over the scheduling.

Councilman Bill Bob Ray suggested giving the engineer a warning. However, Scruggs replied that the line had had plenty of warnings. And she noted that an official of the line had told her it was unnecessary for the train to be on the crossing any longer than 10 minutes.

She asked Mayor Austin Mitchell to instruct the town's police chief to keep track of how long the trains were blocking crossings and to give tickets to those in violation.

It was noted that besides being irritating, the situation could end in calamity if a fire truck or ambulance were held up.

Another order of business was an announcement by the Mayor that a notice of an increase in the tap on fee for sewer and water service needed to be posted in several places.

The largest crowd ever flocked to the Shelby County Fair when it opened Monday.

And more spectators than ever before watched the crowning of the Farm Bureau Queen Monday evening in the auditorium of Shelby County High School.

The title and crown went to Andrea Lovelady of Montevallo. Second runner up was Robin McQueen, Montevallo, and the third place winner was Pamela Dean Horton of Columbiana.

Playing their way to a first place award in the talent competition were the Blue Diamond Band from Calera. Members of the group are: David Gilreath, Jeff Stewart, David Bradshaw, and Tim Pardue.

Cliff Anderson of Montevallo copped second place with a ventriloquist act and Melody Acker of Alabaster came in third with a vocal selection.

Activity is always brisk around the dunking machine every evening. And there should be a record crowd Saturday when Sheriff Buddy Glasgow and courthouse personalities mount the platform and take their seat on the contraption.

Musical entertainment will be provided Friday and Saturday nights by the O.J. McCall and Charlie Simpson bands, both from the county.

The Fair opens every evening at 5 and besides taking in the Early figures show

Tax income may soar by 53%

by Marcia M. Sears

All the officials in the courthouse are afraid to believe the optimistic figures they heard Monday.

After months of fearing that county tax revenues would drop this year, County Commissioners were told they could expect at least a 20 percent increase, and that it might go as high as 53 percent over the current year's revenues.

The optimism came after State Department of Revenue supervisor Johnny Hayes interpreted computer printouts last Friday.

Hayes had been called in to assist the county in putting together all the tax reappraisal figures. He in turn, called in a computer expert from Montgomery, Jim Green, who wrote a special program for the county computer.

Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds expressed initial surprise over the increase in taxes because the $2000 homestead exemption had reduced the property taxes for many indviduals whose taxes she had figured. But later Reynolds affirmed Hayes' estimates.

In a special meeting last Friday when Hayes finished his projections, he said the assessment on farm lands and timberlands had been increased, and this helped raise Shelby County's income. The other factor is the increase in all real estate values that has taken place in recent years. Most old assessments were well undervalued before the reappraisal program.

Factors that lower the tax income include not only the homestead exemption, but the removal of business inventories from the tax list, and a reduced tax on vehicles.

According to the preliminary figures, taxes that support education will also increase up to 53%. Even the hospital, which had one mill cut from its tax base this year, will show a 15% increase.

The reappraisal had some unusual patterns for the cities of Shelby County which get a small percentage of the ad valorem tax collected. Each city will get additional money, with the exception of Montevallo and Pelham.

Ad valorem tax revenues will be below last year's in those two cities for several reasons. One reason is that neither city has much farmland or timberland. In addition, Pelham and Montevallo, with several businesses and industries, have lost the tax from business inventories.

Montevallo will lose 17% of the ad valorem taxes it collected last year and Pelham's drop is even greater - 19%.

Columbiana showed a gain, but only of 14%. According to state law, any city that does not show more than a 20% gain may replace the loss by adding up to two mills to its tax base.

Montevallo added the two mills Monday night and Pelham added 1.5 mills.

On the other hand, Wilsonville's ad valorem tax will show an increase of 177% largely because a great deal of farm and timberland are included inside the city limits.

Vincent shows a gain of 166% and Harpersville shows 104% for the same reasons.

Helena's tax take will be up 63% and Wilton's by 56%. Alabaster's has increased by 28% and Calera's by 26%.

The projections do not include industrial exemptions or public utilities, but those figures are not expected to lower percentages.

Industrial exemptions will not be ready until the end of the week. Men are going into the field this week to measure all industrial buildings that are allowed exemptions, so the Tax Assessor's office can figure how much to allow.

Even if the increase materializes as projected, county officials predict tight budgets for the coming year, because of heavy borrowing to finish the current year, and increased demands for services.

Talent winners

Talent winners in the Monday night competition at the Shelby County Fair were, left, Clifford Anderson, Montevallo, second place winner; the Blue Diamond band of Calera, first place winner, composed of David Gilreath, Jeff Stewart, David Bradshaw and Tim Pardue. The young woman is Melody Acker of Alabaster who won third place.

Runaway car smashes seven autos

by David Moore

If you think the fairy tale character who swatted seven flies with one blow made a smashing hit, consider this: early last Thursday morning an unknown driver lost control of a vehicle on Hwy. 31 in Pelham, smashing into seven parked vehicles in front of Car World.

According to PPD officer William Lewis, at 4:34 a.m. Thursday, he found a wrecked 1976 Chevrolet abandoned in front of Car World. The driver of the car apparently lost control and struck four display vehicles, knocking them into three others.

Six of the displayed vehicles were totaled, ranging in models from a 1969 Dodge Dart to three new Dodge trucks. A seventh truck sustained a bent tailgate.

The abandoned car, which was also totaled, belonged to Carol Woods of Alabaster.

Police report that Mrs. Woods and her husband claimed to know nothing about the incident.

Several hairs found in the abandoned car's broken rearview mirror are currently being analyzed by police to determine the identification of the driver.

Girls Ranch faces delays

Wade Acton has denied a report that the new Girls Ranch Home in Harpersville is being considered for sale.

At a meeting of the Business Professional Women's organization Board of Trustees, it was reported to the Shelby County Reporter, Saturday, that in order for Girls Ranch to get out of debt the selling of the Harpersville Home was being considered.

Acton denied that over the telephone, Monday, stating that if anyone did make the statement it was not him and that he could have told those present that the selling of the home was not planned.

Acton told the Shelby County Reporter that there were many boys and girls in Alabama who need the Girls and Boys Ranch homes and that there was too much at stake to give up a home in Harpersville. He told this newspaper that he just had to turn three girls away due to the lack of space at Girls Ranch homes.

He expressed his gratitude to the Birmingham Builder's Association for donating the home in Harpersville and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brush of Birmingham for the generosity in donating the property there.

Concerning the debt of Girls Ranch, Acton said, "Things are beginning to look good." He stated that both the Shelby County and Talladega County Sheriff's Associations were raising money for the Harpersville home and that both the Girls and Boys Ranch should reap from $130,000 to $200,000 from the annual Barbara Mandrell Golf Tournament.

He told this newspaper about the opening of the Harpersville Home, "It is a policy of Girls Ranch and a state requirement that you have one year's operating budget before a home can be opened." He stated that right now, no one could say when the home would be opened but definitely denied that there were any plans to give up.

The sum of $50,000 is needed for the first year's budget, according to Shelby County Sheriff Buddy Glasgow.

The houseparents who have been at the Harpersville ranch for several weeks, have reportedly been asked to go to one of the other girl's or boy's ranches in the state, pending the opening of the Harpersville ranch.

Others connected with the program are tyring to get a grant to help with financing.

Gambling spree ends with 13 men in jail

An afternoon's gambling spree ended in a trip to jail for 13 men in Columbiana Sunday.

It was rumored that the men's wives reported their activity which took place on a dead end road known as Hook's Corner. The road branches off from the Egg and Butter Road.

Columbiana policeman Mickey Kirkland made the arrests and was assisted by Sheriff's Department deputies in transporting the men to jail.

The gamblers were rounded up late in the afternoon and were reportedly brought to the jail around 6 p.m. All of them made bond.

Arrested were: Frankie Cotton, Julies Davis, John Henry Cotton, Curtis Barnett, Billy Pickett, Jerry Pickett, Lonnie Hayes, Billy Carter.

Ray Carter, Willie Washington, Roger Pickett, James Cotton and Bonnie Pickett.

New budget year

Walker gets $22,0000 at YAB

Project cost estimates for the Shelby County Youth Aid Bureau, Inc., for the 1980 fiscal year amount to $78,050.

To meet this budget, project director C.P. "Red" Walker has applied for a $32,953 LEPA (Law Enforcement Planning Agency) grant to cover 57% of the costs. The remaining 43% of the costs will have to be raised locally by the bureau coporation.

Last year a $34,636 LEPA grant was awarded the bureau, but in July that grant was revised to $26,548. The original project cost for 1979 was $86,590, according to LEPA officials.

The 1980 grant comes before the State Executive Committee for final consideration on September 19 in Dothan, Alabama. The grant has already received the recommendation of the regional board.

Walker, who initiated the Youth Aid Bureau in 1973, became its director after Larry Acton resigned the post late last year. Acton charged the bureau was not serving youth and was being used as a political tool. Acton's salary, according to LEPA officials, was $16,200. Walker's salary, which he began collecting in June, was set at $22,000, and will be the same for 1980.

This is the same salary Walker received as director of the now defunct Shelby County Inmate Rehabilitation Program.

The Shelby County Youth Aid Bureau, Incorporated provides a counseling service to CHINS (children in need of supervision) and delinquents who are referred to it by local police, schools, parents and the Juvenile Probation office.

Sponsorship of the bureau was originally provided by Alabaster, and later by Helena where the bureau is located. The Youth Aid Bureau incorporated itself after sponsorship from these cities was discontinued.

The Youth Aid Bureau worked a total of 174 cases during 1978, and thru August of 1979, had worked 178 cases.

During the last year the bureau has worked with a staff of four workers: project director, two community service workers and a secretary. During the upcoming fiscal year, however, the staff will be cut by one community service worker.

30 year highway veterans retire from county service

Two men who have played a part in developing and maintaining Shelby County's highways will be leaving the Department of Public Works in a few weeks.

Together, Elvis Frank Roach and Howard "Buck" Foster have put in over 60 years working for the county.

At a meeting of the Shelby County Commission Monday, commissioners and Public Works Director James Ray signed a resolution commending the two long time employees for their years of effective and dedicated service.

October 5 will be Roach's last day with the department where he is now shop superintendent. he has been on the county payroll for more than 31 years and is credited with playing an important part in the success of the department's nationally recognized programs.

Foster will retire Sept. 28 after being in the county's employ for 30 years, 2 months, and 12 days. During the years he worked for the department. Foster operated almost every type of heavy equipment used in the construction and maintenance of the county's highway system.

The Jury Commission has completed its work for Shelby County for the year and submitted requests for payment to the County Commission Monday. Jeanette Braden, Albert B. Datcher and Michael C. Dorrough are each entitled to $600 and Dot Henry to $700. The Commission approved payment "when money is available."

B.J. Harris requested that 13/100ths of an acre be deeded from the county to him. The property is in a corner of Highway 119 southwest of the New Hope Presbyterian Church and is no longer of any use to the county because of re-routing of roads. The county Commission agreed to begin the legal work and public hearing necessary to make the change.

The courthouse will be open on only one Saturday during tag season this fall, Commission Chairman Tommy Snowden announced Monday. In the recent past, the offices have been open on Saturday mornings, but this year will be open all day on the last Saturday of the tag-buying season. Snowden indicated the crowds did not justify opening every Saturday this year.

A sheriff's automobile was totalled last week, according to a report to the Commission from Chief Deputy James Jones. Deputy Larry Doss reportedly spun out of control on County 26 hit a tree, and the automobile burned up. Jones said Doss was forturnate not be injured.

The garbage and trash collectors' contracts were discussed at Monday's Commission meeting, with the county being divided into three districts. Chairman Snowden said he wanted to talk with the contractors themselves before signing contracts. He said he wants to make sure service is better. A report that Wayne Archer of Kleen Kounty Service is developing his own landfill, surprised Snowden. Commissioners commented they raised the fee and installed fees at landfills to provide better service and buy new dozers. If Archer dces not use the county landfill, it could lead to closing of the Westover landfill, County Engineer James Ray remarked.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

This is a tale about a man and three boys and four dogs and a campout that turned out to be a strange rabbit hunt.

Howard Brasher lives on the road to Brasherville, with his wife, Patty, and his three boys, David and Eric and Neal. His house on a little hill, is about two miles below Shelby, bordered front and back and on either side by other folks named Brasher, since his father, Robert Brasher, settled here and raised his family, most of whom stayed on after getting grown and married and having families of their own.

Howard decided years ago that his boys should know how boys used to live and has spent endless hours doing the things with his boys that they did years ago when he and his brothers were boys.

I guess that's why, one cool autumn morning, they waked up half-frozen in Finch's Bottoms. But after a hot breakfast cooked over an open fire they were ready for a rabbit hunt. They turned the dogs loose next to Walksie creek and waited on a little hill for them to strike. And that's what they did. A big "canecutter" the dogs trailed through a long hollow and up the side of the hill where Howard shot him.

And so, after no more than two hours, they were back at the fire again. Maybe there's something better than a wild rabbit, something a boy would like to have for dinner, but if there is, nobody ever told boys about it. There's meat on a rabbit's back and on his two hind legs that is about the best meat a boy ever tasted. And if you grew up without ever eating a wild rabbit you missed a part of being a boy that was something.

After dinner, still on the bank of Walksie creek, the dogs struck again. A sly old buck, too lazy to run, who used his wits to out-do the dogs. Every time they got close on his heels he'd jump in the creek and swim to the other side. And when the dogs got over there he'd swim back again. All the dogs except one. A young beagle named, Ono, who was sporting a fancy new collar, and who refused to swim the creek, although the rabbit had led the other dogs across it a dozen times.

The race lasted all afternoon. The dogs must have crossed Walksie creek a hundred times. But Ono, with his new collar flashing in the sun, didn't get a paw wet.

On the way back to camp at sundown, with the dogs trotting along behind, Neal, the youngest boy, said: "I've figured out why Ono wouldn't cross the creek."

"Why wouldn't he?" Howard asked.

"He didn't want to get his pretty new collar wet."

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

Wasn't there a time when folks used to relax on Sunday?

Although it's only a vague memory, I think that I once spent the afternoon hours in such leisurely pursuits as browsing through the newspaper or watching a ballgame on TV.

Of course, that was after the dinner table had been cleared and the dishes washed.

Nowadays, there's so much to do I sometimes don't even have time to eat the noon meal.

It was like that this past Sunday when I sped up and down the highway trying to take in three events. I don't know if there are more events being held on Sunday than there used to be or if I'm just more aware of them now.

In any case, I no longer think of Sunday as a day of rest.

My first stop this particular Sunday was close by. A homecoming was being held at my church and it was really a treat to spend some time visiting with friends I hadn't seen in years as we moved along in the lunch line.

However, I never made it to the serving table. Before I reached that point, it was time to scoot off to my next event.

Punch and cookies were being served there, but I didn't get to taste either. By the time I took pictures and got the information, I needed, it was time to hit the road again.

My last stop of the day featured country music in an outdoor setting. Although a dress and stockings were appropriate for church and a library opening, I felt a little out of place in a crowd of blue jean wearing music fans.

Somehow, I fear I failed in my attempt to be inconspicious as I stumbled through the grass and over rocks in my purple dress with a camera equipped with a two foot long lens dangling from my neck.

Well, so much for the confessions of a reformed Sunday snoozer.

Walters' fund established

A scholarship fund has been established at the University of Montevallo in memory of Dr. John B. Walters, Jr., who was dean of the UM College of Arts and Sciences.

John Van Valkenburg, director of Development, said that the Walters family and friends of the family have established the scholarship to aid outstanding junior students who have attended UM for two years.

Applicants will be selected from students with at least a 2.5 grade point average out of the 3.0 possible and who are majoring in liberal arts subjects.

Dr. Walters died July 31 after serving UM since 1956. He was UM's first dean of men in 1957, when UM, then Alabama College, first admitted men students. He became academic dean of Alabama College in 1959.

Anyone who wants to contribute to the fund can send a check to: Development Office, St. 301, University of Montevallo, Montevallo, Al 35115.

Writer urges citizens to attend Wilsonville Council meetings

As a citizen of the town of Wilsonville I feel Mrs. Ilo Powers was in her rights by writing the Shelby County Reporter with her complaint against the Mayor and Town Council. I also feel that other citizens of Wilsonville should voice their opinions not only in the County Reporter, but by attending the Town council meetings. I attend these meetings and I for one am very displeased by the way most matters are handled.

The letter which Mrs. Powers mentioned was originated by me, and approved by the Town Council while I was temporarily driving the garbage truck for Wilsonville.

I felt the town needed more guide lines so as to let the citizens of Wilsonville know which days their garbage would be picked up, how and where the town wanted the garbage handled and placed. I also felt that the patrons that were physically unable or the elderly should write a letter explaining why they were unable to place their garbage by the roadside.

Several patrons have written such letters, and the letters were approved at previous meetings. Nothing was ever mentioned about a doctor's certificate until Mrs. Powers letter was read before the Council. In fact the Mayor stated he felt the request should be approved due to Mrs. Powers disabilities that are well known by all members of the council. But the request was not to be approved until a doctors certificate is produced.

I know most of the elderly and disabled people of Wilsonville, and I feel the council should also.

Therefore, as small as Wilsonville is, I do not feel that a doctors certificate is really needed at this time. I also feel we citizens of Wilsonville should take care of our elderly and disabled citizens with this service.

I believe matters of this nature would never have happened if the citizens of Wilsonville would take part by attending the town council meetings each month.

The intent of this letter is not to cause hard feelings among the citizens of Wilsonville and the Town Council, but, to try to make the citizens aware of the importance of attending the council meetings so they will be aware of the Town's workings and leadership.

Day care upswing marked

With more mothers working, day care for children has become a big industry in Alabama and, in fact, throughout the country. As more alternatives are sought to the high cost of institutionalization, day care for the elderly and disabled is also growing remarkably.

Pensions and Security Commissioner Gary Cooper says that day care for children is the most widely used service available through county offices of the agency. Statewide, there are 827 child day care centers and 2,381 day care homes licensed by the Department of Pensions and Security. These facilities provide care for approximately 43,000 children.

"Our agency purchases day care for about 12,000 children," the Commissioner points out. "Many are children of very low income mothers who need day care in order to work or take job training. Some are children who may be in danger of abuse or neglect. We have found, more and more, that day care offers one of the best ways of helping a child to continue living at home while family problems are being worked out."

Day care services for children are so much in demand and so needed, Cooper added, that Pensions and Security's day care caseload has skyrocketed in recent years.

Children receive day care either in family day care homes or in day care centers. Both kinds of facilities must be licensed by the Department of Pensions and Security and must meet minimum standards as to health, fire, safety, staffing and other requirements. A day care home is a private home in which a single operator cares for up to six children each day, while a day care center is a much larger operation with facilities to care for larger numbers of children.

Day care facilities for adults, although not as widespread as those for children, are definitely on the increase. Only five years ago, Alabama had just one approved day care center for adults, and now it has 44. The agency pays for the care of about 1,200 elderly and disabled people in all 44 centers.

"Like day care for children, day care for adults is limited to adults with very low incomes," the Commissioner explained. "This service is for people who cannot stay at home alone all day because of disabilities but who are not so disabled as to require institutional or nursing home care."

Family day care for adults--day care provided in the homes of people who want to care for a few adults during the day--has not grown as fast as the day care cebter program, but Pensions and Security is always on the lookout for families who want to participate and who want to earn some extra money by doing so.

Weekend resident deplores 280 plant

I have been a week-end resident for over 20 years in your fine county.

I go by way of 280.

That section of 280 between Mt. Brook and the foot of Double Oak Mountain is one of the finest stretches of 4 lane roads in the state. Very few billboards - a minimum of filling stations, etc.

But recently some zoning or planning agency of Shelby County has allowed (of all things) a cement plant to be erected along this stretch of road (in Shelby County).

This group apparently has no sense of beautification - and we need more of it.

Let us hope that they will stop here and think more about what is good and beautiful. Of course the cuts eliminating the narrows should be a real scenic drive - if ugly signs are not allowed.

Yours truly,
Gus Petitt

Wilsonville hires new city clerk

MARGARET CAIN

It's not your everyday, run of the mill job. But it is an everyday, run of the town job. And that carries some responsibility. But Wilsonville's new town clerk, Margaret Cain, says she can handle it.

"I want to do the best I can. I haven't been faced with any problems that I couldn't handle, yet. And I've probably handled most everything that could come up," she told the Reporter.

Mrs. Cain took the job four weeks ago last Tuesday. Robert Lankford, who recently resigned the post, trained Mrs. Cain for about two weeks before bidding the job farewell.

Mrs. Cain, who lives on Walter's Drive just outside the city limits, is a 1968 graduate of Vincent High School. In 1971 she graduated from Nunnelly State Technical College in Childersburg.

"This is a good job," says Mrs. Cain. "You learn a lot. You put into action what you learned in trade school."

As for her specific duties, Mrs. Cain says, "there's a whole list of them." They include such responsibilities as billing for water, making out payrolls, responding to mail and filling out accident reports for WPD Chief Humphries and the monthly traffic court.

Mrs. Cain said she has already joined both the County and State League of Municipal Clerks.

"I like the people of Wilsonville and I really like the job. It gives me a challenge. Something pops up everyday that I have to deal with," she declares.

Besides her 9-12 job at Wilsonville City Hall, Mrs. Cain also has another job--or jobs: a husband and three children. Her husband, John Thomas Cain, Jr., works at National Standard in Childersburg. Her three children are Keith Dewayne, Teresa Anne and Karen Amy, ages 9, 6 and 3, respectively.

Scouts rally for membership

The Boy Scouts of America will hold a membership rally Tuesday, September 18 at all Shelby county elementary schools.

Scout representatives will be at the schools at 7:30 p.m. to explain the scouting program and sign up boys from 8 to 19 who are interested in joining.

All Shelby County boys interested in camping, canoeing, bike rodeo and swimming are invited to attend.

The rally is part of a nationwide membership push to sign up new members for both the Boy and Cub Scout programs, and to sign up parents interested in being leaders.

Yearly scouting fees are $5.60, which includes a subscription to Boy's Life magazine.

The scout program is designed not only to introduce boys to the outdoors, but to provide them with the opportunity for individual achievement and advancement.

Wilson's attorney, Doug Corretti, said that leaving the land A-1 was unrealistic considering the development around it, and that the land should be rezoned for optimum usage.

Coretti indicated that O-I zoning would be acceptable to him and his clinet, and asked that his request for B-2 be accordingly revised.

Since the meeting was advertised as a public hearing for a change from A-1 to B-2, this was not allowed.

At a motion from Hamilton, seconded by Tanner, the decision was tabled until next Monday's council meeting (September 17).

The council approved the appointment of librarian and director Mary Carver, and assistant librarian Frances Bullard.

PPD Chief D.O. Watson reported that his department issued 289 citations in August, and worked 39 traffic accidents. Five narcotic cases were investigated as were ten vandalisms (two closed), eight grand larcenies (two closed), eight petty larcenies (five closed), eight burglaries (four closed), seven assults, one suicide, and two stolen cars (one closed).

PPD Chief William Bryars reported that his department answered 66 calls in August, 28 of which were fire calls and 38 of which were rescue responses.

Stellar performance

The Troubadours, Montevallo High School's marching band has added some new touches to their uniform and a bigger sound to their brass section this year. And the majorettes are still as pretty as ever. Here Jimmy Brown belts out a trumpet solo and Rhonda Walker waits for her baton to return after a high throw.

More lustre added to Troubadour show

by Bert Seaman

There's a difference in the Troubadour Marching Band from Montevallo High School. Musicians have a new look and the music has a stronger sound. Not only that, but one-fourth of the entire student body is in the band.

With 116 musicians, this year's band is probably the biggest the school has ever had, says Band Director Jim Weese. And the great new sound football fans have been hearing comes from an expanded brass section.

Judging by the enthusiastic response the unit received from the crowd when they took the field for their first show Aug. 31, all the changes are A-OK.

Carrying out the Troubadour look, the band has added navy blue cavalier hats with white plumes and gauntlets over their gloves.

Some new music also conveys the idea of troubadours parading on the field. Weese has written a new song for the band entitled, "El Troubadour Espanol."

Even a new exit formation has been worked out this year. As the Troubadours leave the field they form an eight point star and a circle inside a square.

Another difference in the band is a bigger color guard. There are now 12 members in the unit which is under the leadership of Grethchen Riesner and Claudia Sailes.

Danny DeLage is the group's new drum major and majorettes are Cindy Nash, head; Rhonda Walker and Kathy Kirkland.

The charge needed to be raised, the mayor pointed out, to cover the cost of labor and equipment to have the work done. A fee of $150 will be charged beginning in October.

Since a teenage disco failed to materialize in the Main Street building owned by Frank Owens, Mitchell said that Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Dennis from Sunrise Cove planned to open an antique store there.

No objection was raised to the couples' proposal that the shop be opened from 1-5 on Sunday afternoons.

Consideration is being given to retaining a new city attorney and a resume from Pelham attorney John F. Tanner was read to the panel. However, no action was taken since two members of the council were absent.

Expert speaks to faculty

The faculty of Elvin Hill Elementary School spent their session on Professional Development Thursday listening to an explanation of the scoring of the California Achievement Test.

The idea was to show teachers how to use the test scores of their own students in helping those students improve.

Students in Shelby County and in school systems across the state were given the test in the spring as part of Gov. Fob. James' campaign against illiteracy.

After receiving the test scores, educators determined how students in Alabama compared with students across the nation.

Floyd C. Replogle, an evaluation consultant with McGraw Hill, the company that puts out the test, told the faculty at the Columbiana school that Alabama youngsters were usually above the national average in the lower grades.

He went on to say, however, that somewhere in the upper grades, they fell behind.

The evaluation consultant went over the meaning of the various types of scores such as stanine and percentile, explained what they meant and showed how they could be used to improve the students performance.

Discussing the importance of attitude and motivation, Replogle reported that competency testing went a long way toward improving achievement test scores.

When students in Mobile were required to pass the tests before being promoted, Replogle noted that achievement scores took a dramatic jump upward.

"If we accept less from students, it follows they'll give us less," Replogle remarked.

By studying the evaluation profiles of students who had gone through all the grades in a particular school, the evaluation consultant said that teachers could determine if there was any dificiency in the curriculum.

At the conclusion of Replogle's talk, Principal Ann Head said "You've given us a tool that enables us to take a look at ourselves and make improvements where they're needed."

Next week, the principal said, the teachers at the school would be setting goals for themselves, their school and the school system.

Valley PTO to consider new budgets

The Valley Elementary PTO will hold its first meeting of the year Monday night, September 17, at 7:30.

School and PTO budgets for the upcoming year will be submitted for approval. Shelby County school superintendent Charles Knowles has announced that he will probably attend the meeting.

Parents who have not yet had a chance to join the organization will be able to do so at this time. The meeting will be held in the school's cafeteria.

Officers for this year's PTO at Valley are co-presidents, Emily Fulmer and Martha Knight, vice president in charge of programs Nancy Richard, vice president of ways and means Lorraine Ashcraft, co-treasurers Kaye and Dave Taylor, and secretary Peggy Haskell.

Scoring explained

Floyd C. Replogle, an evaluation consultant with the company which puts out a test taken by county students last spring explains the scoring to teachers at Elvin Hill Elementary School during a professional development session.

Calera Library moves

by Reporter Staff

"We're looking for great things to happen in our library now that we have room to expand and grow," remarked Calera Mayor George Roy Sunday.

Calera librarian Era McLain cut the ribbon officially marking the opening of the facility which has relocated in the building formerly used for a clinic.

State Library Association Consultant Bill Crowley and County Library Director Pam Williams were both on hand for the event.

Complimenting the Library Board on doing an outstanding job, Mayor Roy said that the Council would be willing to help with future plans in any way they could.

"We're going to try and meet the needs of everyone," noted Library Board Chairman J.B. Denham. He reported that one of the new magazines that have been ordered for the library will be for driver's ed students at Calera High School.

Other teachers may also be ordering magazines for their classes, Denham said. "We want high school students to know they can do research here," the library board chairman said.

Members of his board pitched in to make a magazine rack over a sink they enclosed, Denham reported. Items that were purchased for the new building included a circular reading table, a newspaper rack and a card catalog.

The next renovation project that is expected to be undertaken in the building is the removal of some of the partitions to make a large open area for such activities as the story hour.

Usually only a summer program, the story hour is extending into the winter months this year. But looking toward next summer, Denham said one of the board's plans is to hold a Movie Night for the entire family in the roomy new building.

Members of the Library Board are Betty Pilgreen, Sabra Carden, Ozella White and Evelyn Pearson.

Candy stripers end summer work at SM

Candy Stripers who started working at Shelby Memorial Hospital this summer will be able to add to their uniform when they take up their duties again next year.

Everyone will be given a cap to wear and girls with 100 hours or more will be presented with appropriate emblems to wear on their uniforms.

The program officially ended Aug. 31. In addition to learning new skills, participants also derived satisfaction from being able to help others.

And social events were also held for the group throughout the summer with one more still on tap. Some of the activities the girls took part in were a swim party, cookout, skating party and ice cream social.

Adults who helped with special programs were Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Tedford, Mrs. Etress, Mrs. Hocutt, Mrs. Hocutt, Mrs. Covington and Mrs. Shrew. And Standard Service Station provided a place for the girls to hold a car wash.

Anyone interested in joining the Candy Striper program next year should contact Pam Hartle at 663-1011, 9-5, Monday through Friday.

Calera chamber talks city promotion

Ways and means of promoting the City of Calera, its businesses and industries, was the central theme of this month's meeting of the Calera Chamber of Commerce.

Twenty members of the organization met for a noon luncheon Tuesday to map plans to promote business activity and the expansion of Calera's influence on Central Alabama. The meeting was held in the city's new Civitan Building on South Main Street.

The possibilities of a Saturday afternoon Christmas Parade to be held immediately after Thanksgiving were discussed. Tentative plans were made to co-sponsor the parade with the Calera Civitan Club. Additional promotional ideas will be discussed during the organization's October meeting.

The membership of the chamber also voted to send a letter to the Alabama Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, requesting that Calera be considered favorably for the location of an ABC store.

Members of the chamber also voted to formally ask the Calera City Council to increase its efforts to expand the Calera City Limits. Limits.

Responding to a request from the Calera Municipal Library, chamber members voted to contribute $100 toward the purchase of a motion picture projector for the city library.

David Downs reported that the chamber officers have established a dues structure for the chamber. Members voted to approve the following schedule of dues: individuals and commercial businesses $25 per year; industries employing 24 or fewer employees $50 per year; industries employing 25 or more, $100 per year.

Presiding at Tuesday's meeting was Carl Prichard.

Miss Lybrand marries in antebellum home

Miss Deborah Susan Lybrand, daughter of Mrs. Wilma Jean Lybrand and the late Mr. Hubert E. Lybrand of Westover, and Mr. Barry Madison Marcus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin M. Marcus of Hoover, were joined in marriage on Saturday, August 25, at 6:00 p.m. at the chapel of Hargis Christian Retreat in Chelsea, Alabama.

Grandparents of the bride are the late Mr. and Mrs. Luther H. Lybrand of Westover, and the late Mr. and Mrs. James Marcus of Woodbury, Georgia, and Mrs. Virginia Findley of Warm Springs, Georgia.

The bride wore a formal white gown of sataglow and chantilly lace with a U neckline, an empire waistline, and a chantilly lace and pearl bodice. The gown had long straight sleeves of chantilly lace with a ruffle at the wrist. The skirt of the gown was circular and had a triple lace tier, each tier trimmed with chantilly lace. The gown fell to the floor and swept back into a chapel length train; chantilly lace completely encircled the skirt and train. The veil was sheer illusion and fell to waltz length from a head piece covered in chantilly lace and adorned with pearls. The bride carried a bouquet of tropicana colored roses and babies breath with an orchid in the middle.

Attendants to the bride were Mrs. Sharon Bailey of Fairfield - matron of honour, Mrs. Brenda Brasher of Westover, Miss Cathy Cox of Birmingham, Mrs. Sue Joiner of Columbiana, and Miss Lisa Marcus of Hoover. Groomsmen were Mr. John Cousar of Atlanta - best man, Mr. Joey Brasher of Westover, Mr. Price Harding of Atlanta, Mr. Miles Hazzard of Mountain Brook, and Mr. Steve Scott of Hoover.

The bridesmaids wore floor length apricot colored gowns with spaghetti straps and pleated skirts. Sheer apricot colored shawls covered their shoulders.

Flower girl was Miss Melody Arledge of Westover and ring bearer was Mr. James Marcus of Atlanta.

Following the wedding was a reception held at Giltner Lodge at Hargis Retreat. Civitan gift Montevallo Civitan President Mike Benson presents a check from his club to Dr. Loretta Brown, Director of the Speech and Hearing Clinic at the University of Montevallo.

Montevallo Civitans donate to clinic

"You've given our faculty a shot in the arm," declared Dr. Loretta Brown as she accepted a $100 gift from the Montevallo Civitan Club Thursday.

The Chairman of the Department of Speech, Pathology and Audiology at the University of Montevallo reported that the money would be used to purchase a primary typewriter.

Supervisors in the department, Dr. Brown said, had asked for the typewriter because of the large letters it produces. She noted this would make it easier for students who attend classes at the UM center to read lessons which teachers cut on a stencil for them.

Youngsters between the ages of 5 and 16 with speech and hearing impairment or who have learning disabilities are enrolled in the center's program.

Dr. Brown thanked the club for recognizing her department's work and for supporting it. The check was presented by Montevallo Civitan President Mike Benson who said the group planned to make other donations in the future.

Joey's Dad can't give him the one thing he needs to stay alive.

He'd give him one of his kidneys, if he could. Both of Joey's have failed. Unfortunately, willing relatives don't always have kidneys that will match.

So Joey waits.

A kidney machine can buy precious time. But the longer kids like Joey have to wait for real kidneys, the more their growth and development are stunted.

And living with a kidney machine—hours and hours, several days a week—is living only half a life. It's emotionally and socially crippling. It's very expensive.

There are thousands of children and adults whose only chance for a full, normal life is a donated kidney. Their odds for a suitable match improve every time someone signs and carries a donor card.

To be an organ donor is a decision you should make for yourself. What would you do if Joey were your child?

For more information, ask your local kidney foundation. And for a free booklet about all kinds of anatomical gifts of life (including a nationally recognized uniform donor card), write Liberty National.

Anticlimax

Montevallo Methodists looked forward to examining the contents of the churchs' cornerstone when it was opened Sunday. However the decayed Bible that was found had to be removed gingerly by Dr. Mike Mahan. The crumbling book is in the plastic container held by Richard Anderson.

During Heritage Sunday

Montevallo Methodists open cornerstone

Agee Kelly predicted that a Bible would be one of the items placed in the cornerstone by the Montevallo Methodist congregation who built the church he'd attended since boyhood.

He was right. But when Methodists opened the cornerstone in observance of Heritage Sunday Sept. 9, the Bible and whatever message it may have contained, threatened to crumble upon contact.

When Kelly spoke briefly during a recognition service for 50 year members, he reviewed some of the history of the church and guessed that a Bible would be one of the things placed in the cornerstone when the present church building was constructed in 1911.

Although the concluding event of the day was a disappointment, everything else about the observance was an overwhelming success.

An estimated crowd of 400 members, former members and friends took part in the program emphasizing the history of the church which is the oldest in Alabama south of the Tennessee River.

The church was founded in 1818 by Rev. Ebenezer Hearn and occupied three sites before being built at the present location at the corner of Middle and Oak.

Rev. James Chesnutt, who served the church from 1956-1961, preached the morning service to a packed auditorium. At the conclusion of the sermon, the crowd filed downstairs for a Heritage Walk in the Fellowship Hall.

Church members dressed in outfits from various eras depicited in tableau scenes some events in the history of the church.

Two young ladies examining charred pieces of wood represented the burning of the third church building which was rebuilt but once again destroyed by a cyclone which swept through the area in 1874. The first church had been erected on the site where the Montevallo Cemetery is now located.

Bringing out the strong Sunday School program undertaken by the Montevallo Methodists, one scene represented the 1936 era when the educational wing of the building was completed.

Another still life showed the ground breaking ceremony for the present building. And the contribution of church members in times of war was portrayed by several men clad in military garb from several wars.

The portrait of the only church member who didn't return from WW I was displayed. He was Cliet Hendrick.

A barbeque luncheon on the grounds followed the Heritage Walk and a Bluegrass band provided entertainment during the noonhour.

Other musical entertainment consisted of shaped note singing under the direction of Doug Morris followed by an organ concert performed by James Dorroh in the church.

During the service of recognition for the 19 longtime members, the downstairs parlor of the church was named for Dr. and Mrs. M.E. Lazenby, a distinguished Methodist family who had played an important part in the life of the church for many years.

A former minister was also recognized during the service. Paul Gauntt was called forward to receive a certificate of appreciation for the years he served the church.

Mrs. J.P. Kelly and Tom Potts were also given plaques during the service for their work in making the day a success. Mrs. Kelly worked on gathering information on the churchs' history and Potts served as chairman of The Heritage Sunday festivities.

Closer look

Taking a close up look at the decaying Bible found in the cornerstone are Ellen Arnold, Laura Arnold, Wesley Anderson, Margaret Eddings, and Richard Anderson.

Montevallo gas users to absorb price hike

by Reporter Staff

The cost of natural gas continues to go up.

Southern Natural Gas Company, principal suppliers of natural gas to Alabama's cities and industries informed the Montevallo gas system last week that a 27 cent per thousand cubic feet of gas increase went into effect for the system on September 1.

At this week's meeting of the Montevallo City Council, council members decided the city could no longer absorb price increases and authorized City Clerk Don Hughes to pass along the increase to the city's gas customers. The increase will become effective during the present billing period.

In other business Mayor Ralph Sears informed council members that Montevallo and Pelham are the only two municipalities in Shelby County that will realize a decline in revenues from ad valorem taxes under Amendment 373.

Sears then pointed out that recent legislation authorizes cities that will realize a decrease in revenues, to pass local ordinances raising the ad valorem tax for the current fiscal year.

Sears stated that the recent legislation makes a provision for cities such as Montevallo and Pelham to recover their losses by increasing ad valorem millage. He went on to say that Montevallo's loss amounts to 17 percent and that the addition of two mills will permit the city to recover the loss.

After studying sample ordinances provided by the Alabama League of Municipalities, councilmen unanimously passed an ordinance increasing Montevallo's ad valorem millage from 5 mills to 7 mills.

The ordinance was forwarded to the Shelby County Tax Assessor's office. The additional two mills will become effective for the 1978-79 year.

Montevallo Fire Chief Mike Mahan appeared before council members and outlined plans for observing the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Montevallo Volunteer Fire Department. The department was founded in 1929, according to Mahan, and is the oldest volunteer department in the state, he said.

The last day of National Fire Prevention Week, October 13, will be set aside for the anniversary program, Mahan stated. The day long celebration will include a parade and will be concluded with a traditional fireman's ball.

City Clerk Don Hughes told council members that parking decals are now available for residents of areas affected by a recently passed parking ordinance. The decals are on sale at the Montevallo City Hall.

In other action, council members authorized the installation of a street illuminating light at the intersection of State Highway 25 and Hicks Street. Hughes was also asked to contact the state highway department to request additional street lighting at the intersection of State Highways 25 and 155 near the viaduct.

Present during Monday night's city council meeting was Ken Cochran, a senior at the University of Montevallo. Cochran is also the student representative on UM's board of trustees.

Union Camp veneer plant being built in Thorsby

A $13.5 million Union Camp veneer plant is currently under construction in Thorsby.

According to company officials, site work began three months ago and work is now under way on the foundation for the 50,000 square foot plant facility.

Projected for completion in April, 1980, the plant is located on a 50 acre site in the southern city limits.

A Union Camp spokesman said that the plant itself would employ between 110 and 125 people, and would create some 100 additional jobs in the logging industry.

The new plant will produce veneer for the Chapman Plywood Plant in Thorsby and wood chips for the Union Camp paper mill in Prattville.

Enrollment rockets at Thompson

by TES personnel

On Highway 119 there is a sprawling school plant that looks to many passers-by like a college campus. But the school facility is Thompson Elementary School. The school's enrollment for 1979 is 1304. Once Thompson Elementary served the small mill community of Siluria. But since the late 60's, the population growth in Shelby County has made it difficult for school officials to provide classroom space. The enrollment figures continue to skyrocket.

Principal Henderson Walker has directed the growth of the school since 1963. At that time the enrollment was about 300. Each year this number has steadily increased to this year's unprecedented mark. Mr. Walker and his staff pride themselves on the organization of the school. TES has been cited by visiting educators for innovative programs and outstanding academic achievements of its students. The school also serves the Teacher Intern program at the University of Montevallo.

Parents and guests marvel at the ease with which 69 teachers and 1304 students move through hallways, cafeteria, and library, on their way to and from classes. Mr. Walker has encouraged teachers to try new ideas and procedures. At present, Thompson Elem. students are found in various classroom arrangements. These include open classrooms, modular classrooms, traditional classrooms, and even mobile and make-shift ones. (hallways and stage areas). A new classroom addition to be completed soon will accommodate the growing student body, at least for a while.

Students at TES enjoy the benefits of extensive programs to meet the educational needs of every child. These include modular scheduling, ability groupings, mainstreaming, special programs for Physical Education , Art, Music, Speech, Learning Disabilities, Gifted and Mentally Retarded.

Students at Thompson have close relationships with teachers and exhibit great pride in helping keep the school looking nice . Class changes help students become responsible citizens early in their school career. Self-reliance and positive self-image are other advantages noted by parents and teachers. The academic program is designed to enable every child to achieve to his potential. Yearly testing programs were initiated in every grade several years ago. Standardized tests aren't new to TES students. Test results this year indicate that academic programs are highly successful .

The school's motto for many years has been "The school on the grow." This year is certainly no exception.

Acting UM chairman named

Dr. Angela Hernandez, a 17-year member of the University of Montevallo faculty, has been named acting chairman of the UM Physics and Mathematics Dept.

Dr. Hernandez was named department chairman after former chairman Dr. William Foreman resigned to return to industry, according to Dr. John Lott, acting dean of the UM College of Arts and Sciences.

A native of Puerto Padre, Cuba, Dr. Hernandez received her bachelor's degree at the Institute of Vedado in Havana and her Ph.D. in mathematics at the University of Havana.

She taught at the Institute of Vibora in Havana and at the French Dominican School before she came to the United States.

A member of several professional and honorary organizations, Dr. Hernandez is also active on campus as advisor to Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and Lambda Sigma Pi women's honor society, and as a member of several campus committees.

A formal search for a permanent chairman will be announced later this school year, Dr. Lott said.

IDEAS ON CARING FOR YOUR FURNITURE

The proper care of furniture can keep it looking fresh and new, even after years of use. So to help you, we thought it would be a good idea this week to present a few tips to remember in caring for your furniture:

Be sure to pre-test polishes and cleaning materials on an inconspicuous part of the furniture before applying to more exposed surfaces.

If liquid spills on furniture, remove it by a blotting--rather than by a wiping--action.

When dusting, waxing or making minor repairs, always work with the grain of the wood. Dust with a lint-free absorbent cloth.

Don't use nail polish remover on furniture. It can soften the finish.

Dust leather, don't wax it, because waxing can seal the surface and make it hard.

Plastics should not be cleaned with a solvent. Use warm water and mild detergent. Rinse and wipe dry.

In caring for upholstered furniture, brush it weekly; and another good idea is to reverse cushions to equalize wear.

And, don't forget that for all of your furniture and decorating needs, it can pay you to visit us, so stop in.

Eagles squash Holtville 32 to zip

by Richard Crosby

Calera combined a balance of passing and running to whip Holtville last Friday night at Oliver park 32 to 0. Bill Seay lead the rushing attack with 23 carries for 170 yards and quarterback Johnny Ryan connected in the air four times for 87 yards and two touchdowns.

Head coach Danny Alverson was pleased with the win but has some concern for his team if they should be hit by injuries. "We've been lucky so far that none of our players have been hurt but a few injuries could really hurt us both on offense and defense. Our offensive line is going a great job and our defense is looking better each game. I hope we can continue to improve each game."

Calera took its first possession 55 yards in 11 plays for the game's first score. Ryan sneaked it over from the one and then added the PAT with 5:37 left in the first quarter. Two minutes later Calera had its second score which was set up by punt attempt. A bad snap by Holtville put Calera in business on the 19 yard line. On the first play Bill Seay raced for the goal line and the touchdown.

Ryan's PAT attempt was wide making the score 13 to 0.

In the second quarter the Eagles put together a 60 yard drive that only required three plays. Ryan passed 26 yards to Fran Blanchard for the touchdown and then added the PAT for a 20 to 0 halftime lead.

Calera polished off the win in the third quarter with a 41 yard drive in six plays. Ryan again hooked up with Blanchard for the fourth touchdown of the night. This time the duo scored on a 12 yard pass. The PAT went wide.

In the final quarter, Tim Loftin got his first touchdown of the year on a five yard run. The PAT failed, leaving the score 32 to 0.

In addition to Seay, Eric Lacey had 33 yards on 7 runs, Tim Loftin carried twice for 10 yards and Mike Roberson averaged three yards a carry with 15 yards on five attempts.

This week the Eagles hit the road and face an extremely fast Isbella High School team. The Mustangs have coach Alverson worried with their speed. "The Mustangs are going to be tough and their speed is going to be a factor in the game. I hope our defense can keep them contained."

Lineman of the Week

by Richard Crosby

Shelby County High School's Arthur Johnson has been named the Lineman of the Week for the first week of football in the county. Holiday hours prevented the announcement last week of the selection made by the Reporter staff. Johnson, 6'3", 180 pound nose guard for the Wilcats proved that being young doesn't mean you can't be tough. His play against Montevallo had a lot to do with the Wildcats' win that Friday night.

ARTHUR JOHNSON

Johnson made 18 tackles and knocked loose one fumble and made numerous quarterback sacks.

The Lineman of the Week for last Friday's game is Calera's Dale Smith. Playing offensive tackle and and linebacker, Smith led his teammates on blocking and tackles. "We ran behind Dale most of the night" coach Alverson said of his senior lineman. "He is consistently around the ball on defense and offensively manhandles his opposition.

Both Johnson and Smith are elligible for Lineman of Year which will be announced at the end of the football season. Both will receive a certificate acknowledging their accomplishment and naming as Lineman of the Week.

Football Cash!!

Ten year old wins jackpot

Brett Arnold of Calera finally won the Football Cash. After three years of trying, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W.T. Arnold came through with a winning entry.

The ten-year-old is a student a Shelby Academy and correctly picked eleven out of twelve games to claim the cash.

Brett picked up his check Monday afternoon and was still uncertain as to what he was going to do with the money.

Second place was Mike Wakefield, also from Calera. Mike has won Football Cash twice before and almost made it three years in a row as he correctly picked ten out of twelve games. Many other participants got eight games right.

To get your entry in, turn to page 12, fill out the form and mail in it. You could be the next lucky winner.

Coosa Valley holds on for win against tough Shelby Academy

by Richard Crosby

Coosa Valley got revenge for last year's loss to Shelby Academy last Friday night. The Rebels won this year's slugfest 16 to 6 before a packed house in Harpersville.

"It feels good to win one" exclaimed Rebel head man Mark Green. "We made mistakes and had another punt blocked but our boys put their heart into the game. Our offensive line really improved from the week before and our defensive secondary played exceptional."

Shelby looked like a sure winner in the first quarter as the Raiders took the kickoff and marched downfield and put the ball into the endzone. "They just rammed the ball down our throats" Green said of the opening drive."

Coosa Valley came back with a drive of its own. Mike Wheeler put the points on the board with a 2 yard run that capped a 60 yard drive. Dan Smith kicked the PAT to put the Rebels on top 7 to 6.

Still in the first quarter, Coosa Valley added a second touchdown. This time with Eric Davis crossing the goal line with a 10 yard run. The PAT went wide leaving the score at 13 to 6.

The second quarter was a defensive struggle with both teams fighting for field position but failing to get an advantage.

Shelby's defense stood tall in the third quarter as Coosa Valley drove down the field and readied to score, but a fumble was knocked loose on the two yard line halting the drive.

In the fourth quarter, the Raider defense again came under attack as the Rebels mounted another drive that was stopped on the five yard line. Coosa Valley opted for a field goal with Don Smith kicking successfully from 25 yards out.

In the fourth quarter, Shelby started a drive toward paydirt but the Coosa Valley Defense turned into a wall at the five yard line and denied the Raiders a touchdown.

The Rebels gathered 230 yards total offense for the night with Troy Beavers as the workhorse with 98 yards rushing.

Wildcats slap Sylacauga for second win of the year

by Richard Crosby

The Wildcats are still without a loss and that's making a lot of folks happy. Coach Mark bradley's crew turned back an aggressive troup of Sylacauga Aggies before a packed house last Friday night. The final count read 13 to 6 on the scoreboard.

"I'm awful proud of our kids for winning" Bradley stated. "Our defense played extremely well and took the ball away seven times. Of course there's always room for improvement but giving up only six points in two games is something for our kids to be proud about.

Shelby County took advantage of an early Aggis miscue by recovering a fumble on the 24 yard line. Harold hughes knocked the ball loose with Dana Vansant recovering. The fumble came on Sylacauga's first offensive play after receiving the opening kickoff.

On the Wildcats' second play, Arthur Johnson skipped across the goal line for the six points. Dan Head added the PAT to make the score 7-0.

Late in the second quarter, Sylacauga drove down the field and on fourth and goal passed successfully for the touchdown. The PAT was missed after a bad snap.

Shelby County got its other six points in the third period. Two Sylacauga fumbles were converted into field goals by Shelby County's Dan Head. The first boot was a 30 yarder and the second a 27 yarder.

Shelby County gets this Friday off while the fair is in town, but goes back to work preparing for B.B. Comer next week. A jampacked house is expected for that game so come early if you want a place to sit.

Briarwood stumps Chelsea 19 to 0 with second half blitz

by Richard Crosby

Briarwood Christian High School claimed a win over the Chelsea Hornets last Friday night with second half scoring that left Chelsea dazed. The final count was 19 to 0.

"I'm glad it's behind us" said Briarwood coach Gary Flemming. "Chelsea is always real tough and their defense and our mistakes really made the first half tough. We came out in the third quarter with more confidense and played loose. That made the difference for us."

A scoreless first half was dominated by defense. Briarwood lost five fumbles to the eager Hornets who couldn't seem to put the ball in the endzone. Several times Chelsea was knocking on the door but didn't get a reply.

In the third quarter, Briarwood came out and drove the ball 66 yards for a touchdown. Peter Wright carried for a six-pointer on a three yard run. The PAT failed.

In the fourth quarter, Lion quarterback Pat Trammell connected with Jim Nelson for a 47 yard touchdown pass. The PAT again failed but Briarwood had the lead 12 to 0.

With Chelsea trying to play catchup, Pat Trammell intercepted a Hornet pass on the 25 yard line. Seconds later, Jim Bradford carried for the six point play on a three yard run. Mike Chor kicked the PAT making the final score 19-9.

"Our offensive line needs a lot of work but the kids are young and inexperienced so thay'll have a chance to play and should improve" coach Richard Conkle told the Reporter. "Our defense looked good and our backs ran real good. They're willing" Conkle said of his players, "And they have the right attitude. We're going to win some games before it's all over.

The leading rusher for Briarwood was Peter Wirhgt with 105 yards. Jim Bradford collected 48. On defense, Coach Flemming named Paul Barber, Gary Newton, Steve Chambers and Randy Cox as his standouts.

Briarwood faces marion Institute this Friday while Chelsea hosts Pelham.

Vincent claims first victim with win over Lincoln 25-22

by Richard Crosby

"We got on them early and held on" is the way coach Gary Garrett described Vincent's first win of the year. The Jackets defeated Lincoln 25 to 22 to get a notch in the win column.

Vincent didn't waste time lighting up the scoreboard. On their first possession, the Jackets marched 45 yards with James Oden bursting across the goal line for the first score. Rodney Driggers added the PAT to put Vincent in the lead 7-0.

A minute later Vincent had its second touchdown as Lincoln fumbled on its own one yard line. Oden carried for the score. The extra point attempt was blocked.

Lincoln did get on track before the first quarter ended though. A 64 yard drive and successful PAT made the score 13 to 7.

In the second quarter, Vincent got a break as Rodney Driggers blocked a Lincoln punt and ran the ball back to the five yard line. On the first play Oden scored his third touchdown of the night. The try for two failed. Lincoln closed the scoring gap with just over five minutes before the half with a 17 yard scoring pass. The PAT was good making the halftime score 19 to 14.

Vincent's final score of the night came in the fourth quarter. Lincoln threw a complete pass to the tight end that was knocked loose by Everett Abrams and the Jackets recovered. Four plays later, Sidney Yowe bulled his way across the goal line for the touchdown. The try for two points failed, leaving the score 25 to 14 with 10:22 left in the game.

The game looked like it would end with that same score as both teams displayed tough defense, but in the final minute of play, Lincoln scored with a 15 yard pass and a two-point conversion which made the score 25 to 22. The on-sides kick failed to yield a turnover and Vincent ran the clock out.

"We're pleased to get out of it with a win. The real story of the game was our defense which gave us scoring opportunities. Lincoln is a real strong and physical team and is about as good as anybody we'll play" Garrett told the Reporter.

This week the Jackets host first home game with T.C.T.S. as the visitors. "They're much improved over what they've been and are going to be a good ball club" Garret said of the competition. "They're real tough on defense and I expect a real dogfight."

Defensive standouts for vincent were Rodney Driggers, Danny Tilley, Mark Brasher, Everett Abrams and Ronnie Gates. Offensively, Sidney Yowe led the Jackets with 118 yards on 10 carries and one touchdown. Quarterback James Oden garnered 31 yards on nine carries with three touchdowns.

Richard's Picks

by Richard Crosby

I didn't do as good last week as the week before but confidence is the key to good prediction so, this week I'll keep my faith in my ability and guess again.

Thompson-Clanton-The Warriors need win number three and against Clanton it won't be to tough to get it. The game will have some exciting moments but Thompson will be on top at the End Prediction: Thompson 26, Clanton 12.

Pelham-Chelsea-The Hornets are buzzing mad about last Friday's loss to Briarwood but that will just add fuel to the fire as the Panthers get their second win of the year. Prediction: Pelham 32, Chelsea 13.

Vincent-T.C.T.S.-The Jackets would like their second win of the year this Friday night and they'll get it according to my crystal ball. Talladega may be improved but Vincent is better by three touchdowns. Prediction: Vincent 33 T.C.T.S. 6.

Calera-Isbella-The Eagles take to the road and meet some fleet-footed Mustangs. That'll be all she wrote for the Eagles as Isbella gets a big win while the Calera kids come home on a silent bus. Prediction: Isbella 45, Calera 16.

Briarwood-Marion-The Lions beat Chelsea the hard way but wins won't always come your way if you wait for lucky breaks. Improvements by coach Gary Flemming will make the difference. Prediction: Briarwood 23, Marion 12.

Coosa Valley-Chambers-The Rebels had better forget about the win last week and keep their minds on the game at hand. That won't be easy to do as Chambers takes an easy win from a day dreaming bunch of Rebels. Prediction: Chambers 36, Coosa Valley 6.

Shelby Academy-Faith-The Raiders face last year's head coach Gene Hulsey for a tough night of football. Hulsey isn't going to be sentimental tough as the Raiders will learn early. Prediction: Faith 22, Shelby 8.

Shelby County-Open-This week looks like a good one for the Wildcats as they add their third win of the year. It'll be close though. Prediction: Wildcats 3, Open 2.

Montevallo-Open-The Bulldogs will get their first win of the year against an idle Friday night. There won't be an easier game on the schedule so savor this one. Prediction: Montevallo 99, Open 0.

New outdoor license rates go into effect

New prices are ineffect for Alabama hunters and fishermen. Governor Fob James signed into law a bill that doubles the olf price of a fishing and hunting permit.

The new prices are $6 for a fishing license and $10 for a hunting license for Alabama residents. Out of state permits have also increased.

The monies generated by the law will go toward conservation efforts that have been seriously under-funded in the past.

Shelby County residents may purchase their new licenses in the county courthouse in the probate judge's office. The conservation departments hunting and fishing season and guide book are also available in Columbiana.

For Better Hunting and Fishing

Dove hunting advice

Come Sept. 15 and grain fields north of U.S. Highway 84 will echo with thousands of bangs.

At noon that day the 1979 - 80 mourning dove season will open. Many dove hunting friends tell me there are more doves this year than last. I can't prove this, but I, too, have seen many doves in late summer on wires along the highways. I've kept a watchful eye in the afternoon when these graceful members of the pigeon family pick up gravel for their gizzards to grind seed, and the birds appear plentiful.

Dove hunting is the greatest challenge to the "pass" or flight shooter, because this featured airborne gymnast can make you burn more powder than at all other game birds. If there's a high wind and it's cloudy and threatening rain, doves may dip and dart about at unbelievable speeds. I clocked a fast flyer along the highway several years ago. The bird stayed with me at 54 mph speed for one mile. I under-stand doves can barrel along at 60 mph. I don't care how good you are at skeet and trap, you'll miss 'em!

There are a few good rules to follow for a successful dove afternoon. If there are plentiful birds in grain sorghum, harvested corn, browntop or proso millet, soybean or sunflower fields two or three days before the season opens, try to find the "flight lines" of the doves as they come over. This may be a tree-studded fence row or a gap between small fields. Wear dull clothing. Last year a shooter wearing a white cap came on the field in which I crouched. He stuck out like a sore thumb. I moved down the field about a hundred yards. Doves gave him a wide berth and came over me.

One gadget that makes dove shooting more comfortable is the shell box with swivel seat. Take along plenty of non-alcoholic iced drinks or icewater. You cry out fast those early hot days of the season, especially if you stumble about looking for downed doves.

Now that shotshell prices are out of sight, you need to concentrate more on pulling that trigger. Average gunner may drop a dove with four to six shots. Many years ago I learned to lead by dove lengths instead of feet. A dove measures 12 inches in total length. At close ranges -- you can see the bird's beady little eye -- I swing about three dove lengths ahead before I pop the cap. I go to four to six lengths at slightly longer ranges. Too many of us are caught up in the fever on opening day and shoot at doves at extreme ranges. This can result only in crippled birds. I suggest you hold your fire until the bird is close enough to bag with a first sized rock. Too many hunters fail to mark down and pick up downed doves. While they stumble about looking for that drab, gray bird, they cut down their hunting time by pacing up and down the field. I have tried to discipline myself to immediately marking the spot where I drop a bird, going to it and sticking it in my bag before I look skyward again. I lose shots at good targets but I seldom lose a dead bird.

I like maximum loads when I shoot. However, every bird I bag represents a chunk of money. Figure about five dressed birds to the pound of edible meat. Say I average five shots per bagged bird. That's a box of shells costing $7.50 this year. Tack on 38 cents tax and I'm buying littler dark meated poultry at the cost of $8! And I'm not even figuring gasoline mileage, depreciation on everything, including my tightwad nature. Fryer chickens were on sale at 38 cents a pound last month! But that dove is an epicurean delight.

Sorry I don't shoot pigeons. They're plentiful, but that first one my wife parboiled 30-odd years ago could have been used as a boot in a spare tire.

I've been saving up since last year for a mess of fresh doves with brown rice and gravy. I'm not going to disappoint myself in a week or so.

'79 dove season opens Saturday

Dove season opens for area hunters this Saturday, September 15th. Hunting hours are from 12 Noon till sunset.

Dove is the frist game of the season that hunters can seek but those grey ghosts aren't the easiest critters to bag.

Dove shoots are being held in Vincent, Pelham and Alabaster and the lastest report is that the annual Wilsonville shoot may not be held this weekend. If you're uncertain, start calling around and you'll get the straight scoop.

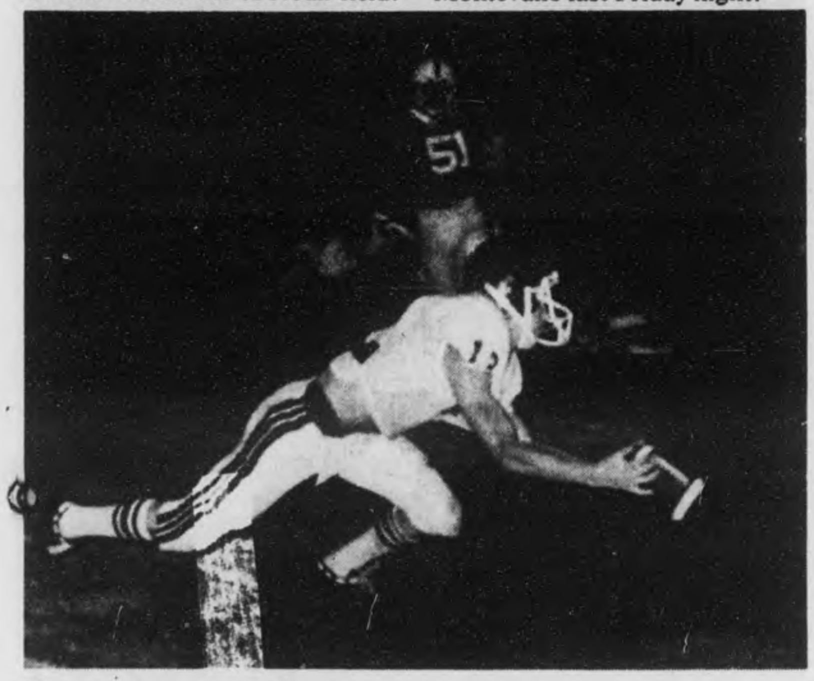
Fumbles dictate results as Montevallo falls

by Richard Crosby

Montevallo's Bulldogs will have two weeks to regroup and make adjustments before facing another foe on the football field. That won't soothe the Bulldogs though who have lost the first two games of the season. Dallas County tagged the Dogs 18 to 6 in Montevallo last Friday night.



Pass incomplete

A Dallas County pass receiver drops a pass that might have scored it it had been on target.

Fumbles seem to be the one thing that has taken its toll on coach Richard Gilliam's crew. Montevallo fumbled nine times last Friday night and lost seven of them. Those mistakes gave Dallas County every opportunity and they took advantage of several.

With less than three minutes gone in the game, Dallas County scored after recovering a Montevallo fumble on the 19 yard line. The PAT was missed.

In the second quarter, with 2:57 left in the half, Montevallo fumbled on its own six yard line. On the first play Dallas County made the Dogs play for their mistake, making the score 12-0 at the half.

In the third quarter another Bulldog fumble set up the visitors on the 22 yard line.

Behind 18 to 0, Montevallo put together a 79 yard drive for its only score of the year. Paul Russell passed 27 yards to Derick Stewart to keep the drive alive, and then carried to ball in from one yard out for the score. The drive was not without more Montevallo fumbles, but both loose pigskins were recovered by the Bulldogs.

Steve Melsoni blocked a Dallas County punt attempt late in the game which put Montevallo in business deep in Dallas County territory. The Bulldogs were ready to score with second down and nine from the nine yard line, but a fumbled pitch ended the comeback try as Montevallo suffered its second loss in as many weeks.

"I anticipate changes" Coach Gilliam told the Reporter. "Our kids were whipped by Dallas County but they never gave up. We just have some problems that must be overcome. We've got to stop hurting ourselves. The Bulldogs have a Friday night off before taking to the field in quest of the first win of the year. You can bet that when they return to action there won't be many if any fumbles.

Pelham bows to Dora as mistakes take toll

by Richard Crosby

Pelham's Panthers put on a tough show at Dora last Friday night but it wasn't enough to come back home with a win. The Panthers lost to Dora 0 to 14.

"A couple three mistakes cost us the ballgame" head coach Steve Rivers said. "We had our chances to score but couldn't get the ball in the endzone where it counts."

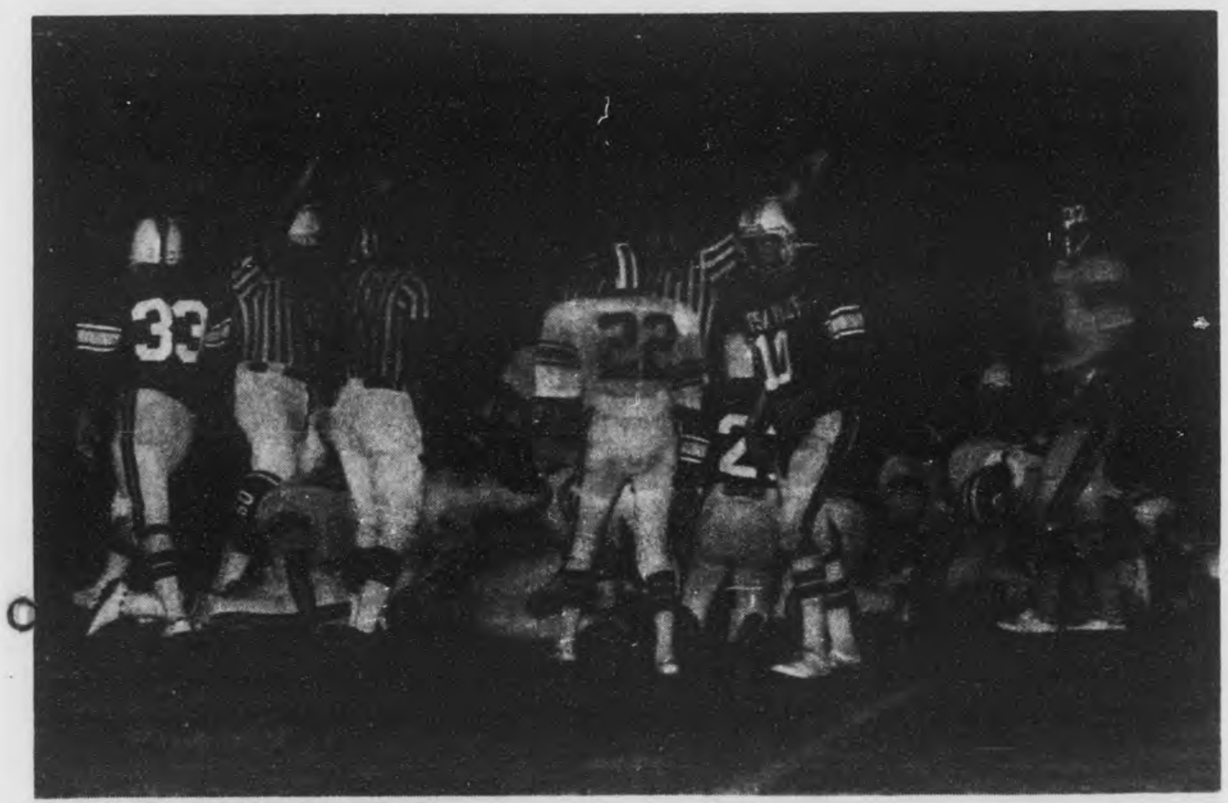
On Pelham's first possession, the Panthers drove 65 yards to Dora's five yard line where it was first and goal but after four downs to ball was still not on paydirt.

Dora acculmulated its points in the second and third quarters. A forty yard pass with 19 seconds left in the half counted for seven points and a drive downfield early in the third quarter accounted for seven more.

Ricky Needham lead the ground attack for Pelham with 62 yards. Dale Busby had 40. Steve Rye completed 7 of 12 pass attempts for 96 yards but was intercepted four times. Woody Woodson punted five times for a 41.6 average.

Coach Rivers named Jeff Mathis, Brad Jacks and Jerard Johnson as his defensive standouts. "I was real pleased with our play even though we didn't win the game" Rivers said of his team's performance. "They have improved since the first game and that is important to us.

"We play Chelsea this week at their place and I know they'll be sky high. We'll have our hands full."



Private school pileup

Private school players from both Shelby Academy and Coosa Valley form a large pileup that seems to have even the officials confused as to which team has the ball. You can bet that the player with the ball at the bottom of the pile is ready to get up. All those players weight can knock the air out of you. (photo by Gardner)

Warriors win big over Bibb Choctaws

by Richard Crosby

Thompson's Warriors rolled up their second win of the year in as many weeks last Friday night. Coach Larry Simmons' crew whipped Bibb County 28 to 7 to keep a perfect record.

"We played better than last week" Simmons told the Reporter. "We didn't make some of the mistakes we did the week before and we played with more enthusiasm. Our pass defense is looking bright," the head coach said.

The Thompson defensive backs have intercepted eight passes in two games. "We're blocking better and coming off the ball better. We looked quicker than we have."

The Warriors got rolling in the first quarter with a 50 yard drive that culminated with Pete Lint bursting two yards for the touchdown. Steve Smitherman added the PAT making the score 7-0 with 2:12 left in the first quarter.

David Cofer accounted for the next Thompson score that was set up after Bibb County fumbled a punt. Cofer dashed the final two yards for the score. Smitherman toed true for the PAT.

With 10 seconds remaining before the half, Cofer threw a 50 yard bomb to Alan Adelburg for the third Thompson touchdown. Smitherman continued his streak with another successful PAT making the halftime score 21-0.

In the third quarter. Cofer got his third touchdown of the night with a one yard run. Smitherman made his fourth PAT to end the Thompson scoring. Early in the fourth quarter, Bibb County got its only score of the night on a four yard run. The PAT was good.

The leading rusher for Thompson was Randy Anderson with 76 yards. Thompson had a total of 312 yards offense while holding Bibb County to only 115 - 20 of those yards rushing.

This week the Warriors face an always tough Chilton County team. "It's usually a hard hitting ball game for us" Simmons said. "They've lost their first two games and you can be sure they'll be looking for that first win against us."

The Thompson-Clanton game will be played in Alabaster.

The recital, which begins at 8 p.m., will feature members of the UM Woodwind Quintet, including Judy Donaldson, clarinet; Les Fillmer, oboe; Leslie Van Syckle, horn; and Jack Sharp, bassoon, as well as Dr. John Owen, trumpet, Dr. John Stewart, saxaphone, and others.

Shelby Speedway report

Terry Wesley continued his domination of the Modified Feature race with yet another win last Saturday night at Shelby Speedway. The Hueytown driver has been a terror on the track for the past several months.

Racing second in the Modified Feature was Greg Buse. Moose Iebell placed third, followed by Bennie Pickett and Billy Masset.

In the Modified heat race, Wesley again placed first with Buse second and Isbell third.

Bennie Pickett continued his front-running position in the buggy feature. The Calera driver has won more buggy features at Shelby Speedway than any other driver.

Wayne Spratlin placed second in the race with Bobby Carter third, Jerry Carter fourth, Jerry Brasher fifth and Dave Lucas sixth.

In the buggy heat race, Brasher also took the first place check with Jerry Crater second and Bobby Carter third.

Bobby Carter showed up a Shelby Speedway with a new car and during the time trials, set a new track record, but spinouts in the feature race kept him from challenging for the top spot.

Tommy Payton of Calera won the Bomber feature race. Gordon Champion of Chelsea came in second with Gene Loggins third. Payton also took the checkered flag in the heat race with Marvin Booth second and Loggins third.

Of note in the night's racing was the Alabama Logger (John Lucas) who learned a new way of destroying a race car. He sets a fine example of what not to do according to track officials.

Racing will be held this Saturday night aT Shelby Speedwya with the gates opening at 5:30 and racing beginning at 8 p.m.

Shades of learning

Columbiana Middle School's science teacher Carol Hill used the shades in her room to teach a science lesson. Bulletin boards throughout the school are instructive as well as eye catching.

Bulletin boards enliven school walls

Students who walked into Columbiana Middle School for the first time when classes began this year didn't have any trouble finding their way around. A bulletin board in the entryway gave a complete and easy to follow layout of the entire school.

That board was one of many located throughout the building. Principal Lois Bentley and the faculty believe that the bulletin boards can be used as educational tools as well as a way to make the hallways and classrooms more attractive.

"We have a faculty committee," explained Bentley, "who assign each teacher two bulletin boards to arrange during the year." She noted that these boards were in addition to the ones in their classrooms.

One of the most interesting boards was done by Bob Hume and takes up most of one wall in the school's lunchroom. The theme of the display is the heart.

When he takes the present lettering and illustrations down, Hume said he would continue the theme by drawing comparisons of how the heart operates to local situations.

His next display, Hume related, will compare the amount of blood the heart pumps in 65 years to the amount of gasoline transported in the trucks of two local dealers.

Most of the bulletin boards at the beginning of the year, Bentley pointed out, are designed to get the student off to a successful school year. She said they related to such themes as good grooming and good study habits.

One of the more imaginative bulletin boards the principal mentioned used the window shades in a teacher's room as the backing. Science teacher Carol Hill put up cut outs relating to her subject on each of the partially drawn shades.

In some of the exploratory classes at the school, Bentley said that students have the responsibility of arranging bulletin boards.

"We're having a terrific year," the new principal exclaimed. "We have a hard working faculty," she remarked, "and everything is running smoothly."

An upcoming event that Bentley mentioned will be open to the entire community. A piano concert by witold Anthony Turkiewicz, a talented 17 year old music student at Samford, will be held at the school sometime in November.

There will be no charge to attend the event, and a coffee will be held afterward.

Columbiana studies retirement plans

by Bert Seaman

City employees attended the Columbiana City Council meeting Thursday evening to listen to the presentation of a retirement plan the city would like them to accept.

After hearing Liberty National agent William Rasco present his company's proposal, some of the employees still insisted the state plan would be more beneficial to them.

But Mayor Bob Bolton made it clear to the group there was no way the city could come up with the amount of money they would have to provide under the state retirement plan.

Pointing to the city's financial report for last month, Bolton told employees it showed the city to be $10,227 in the red. He noted that with the state plan, the city would have to pick up back pay for city workers which would amount to over $36,000.

Most of the objections to the Liberty National plan were voiced by older employees who Rasco admitted wouldn't get much out of it when they retired.

"I wouldn't accept it," declared one of the older workers who will retire in just a few years. "I feel as though I'm being penalized," she declared.

Under the terms of the Liberty National plan, city workers would have the option of choosing whether or not they wanted to be included.

It's an individual plan, Rasco explained, with the city paying 5 percent and the employee 5 percent. With the state plan, it was noted, every worker would be required to participate.

Bringing out some of the folders his company had prepared for each employee, Rasco cited figures on an employee who is now 23. When he retires at age 65, the agent reported, he will draw over $2,000 a month.

Referring to the folder of a 48 year old city worker, he told the group that man would get $279 a month when he retired.

Bolton finally asked William and Douglas Rasco if their company would try and work something out that would benefit the older employees and the two men agreed to look into it.

Scoutmaster Bob Hume and members of his troop were present for the proceedings to fulfill a requirement on their Communications merit badge.

The Columbiana scoutmaster also volunteered some of his boys to research ordinances enforced in other communities pertaining to over-grown lots.

Mentioning several in the community, Hume said that some of them are health hazards.

It was agreed that the scouts would draft an ordinance which will be presented to the council for approval.

In other business, the panel unanimously rejected a request to rejoin the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission.

UM calls for help from retired staffers

The secretary for five former University of Montevallo presidents, Ruth Ratliff, has been back on the UM campus recently lending her help to a project to locate and codify more than four decades worth of UM Board of Trustees official minutes.

Mrs. Ratliff, who lives in Fort Myers, Fla., returns to Montevallo every summer to visit friends and uses the town as a base for the travels she and her husband, D.J. Ratliff, make around the country.

This summer, she found that her experience at UM from 1948 to 1972 was needed in the Board of Trustees Minutes book update project. Vicky Dellinger, UM President Jim Vickrey's secretary, said she had intended to start work on the project since she began work at UM last year.

"When I found that Ruth was in town and knew about the time she had spent on the books when she was here, I called her and she came," Mrs. Dellinger said, "and she's given us the kind of help that nobody else could have provided."

Mrs. Dellinger said that when she had started the project, she first attempted to find the books, and Todd Jeter of Montevallo, a retired UM staff member, suggested to Mrs. Dellinger that she talk to her friend, Mrs. Ratliff, and to Bessie Merle Elliott of Montevallo, a retired UM assistant treasurer.

With Mrs. Elliott's help finding the books and Mrs. Ratliff's advice on codifying the minutes, Mrs. Delinger and Debbie Englert, who also works in the president's office, have gotten well started on the comprehensive task.

While they were searching for the old minute books, they found many old files, including files on building asnd landscape plans, personnel files and scholarship files, most of which they transferred to the library for storage. Librarians Mary Frances Tipton and Julia Rotenberry, Mrs. Dellinger said, are keeping an archives section of UM and Alabama College documents and photographs in the library. "They were delighted to get them" she said.

Going through the old files, Mrs. Dellinger and Mrs. Englert found an old shoe box filled with index cards. "They were the coding cards for the first 75 years of the university's history," Mrs. Dellinger said. "The history of the University is in that box."

Looking through the old files and the minutes, Mrs. Dellinger, Mrs. Englert and Mrs. Ratliff found the price of firewood in the late 1800s, that board meetings took two days and that people traveled to them on horseback. "It's history right there at your fingertips," Mrs. Dellinger said.

"We found a dress code file," Mrs. Dellinger said, "and letters from faculty about proposed changes in the dress code.

Some of the answers were hilarious."

Mrs. Ratliff personally knows a good bit of history from having worked with the five chief executives preceding President Vickrey: Dr. John Caldwell, Dr. Franz Lund, Dr. Howard Phillips, Dr. D.P. Culp and Dr. Kermit Johnson. "They were all beautiful people," she said. "Each man had his own personality, his own way, yet each one was great."

Her involvement in the development of the university, she said, helped her appreciate what University President Dr. Jim Vickrey and his staff were doing to preserve the University's written heritage.

"What you're doing is a commendable project," she said. "I love this place, and I'm glad you're doing it."

Mrs. Ratliff will still use Montevallo as her "home base" for a few more weeks before she returns to her condominium in Fort Myers and her activities as a volunteer for several civic and charitable groups in the area.

But next summer, she said, she'll be back in town. "When I talk about going home," she said. "That's Montevallo."

New Church of Christ seeks out members

An informational meeting concerning the nearly completed Riverchase Church of Christ will be held Sunday, September 16, at 3 p.m. in Pelham City Hall.

The purpose of the meeting will be to seek out those in the county who are interested in being a part of the new church and familiarize them with the plans of the church. A film will also be presented at this public meeting.

The new church, nearing completing of its Phase I construction program, is a project of the Central Church of Christ in Birmingham.

The modern, half million dollar structure is located on Hwy. 31 South near Valleydale Road. The 8.25 acre lot was purchased in 1976 at a cost of $125,000.

The church is expected to hold its opening services on or before November 4.

The 15,000 square foot, multipurpose building will serve as a temporary sanctuary with a seating capacity of about 500. The structure will also house 17 classrooms and nursery facilities, as well as a library and office.

Additional classrooms are planned for Phase II of the construction, and the culmination of the complex will be a sanctuary in Phase III.

Minister John Mills states, "The growth potential in the area of the Riverchase church building is unlimited. Because of this factor, combined with our desire to make the church community oriented with a family type atmosphere, we feel our opportunities for service are tremendous."

Mills, who recently moved to Helena, attended Alabama Christian College in Montgomery and graduated from Abilene Christian University in Texas and Harding Graduate School in Memphis, Tennessee. He has worked with churches in Alabama, Georgia and Arkansas.

Don McKeever, longtime secretary of the Central Civitan Club, was presented the club's Citizenship Award last Thursday by President Herchiel Meadows.

Possum talk dominates

Clanton Mayor Frank Clark had some tall tales to tell about opossums when he spoke at the Central Civitan Club's Ladies Night Banquet Thursday evening.

And before the affair concluded, the opossum breeder produced one of the animals which he handed over to Civitan's District Governor Walt Davis.

The Clanton Mayor, known for his humorous talks, also made Davis a member of the Opossum Breeders Association.

Between the humorous stories, which kept the crowd who gathered at the Alabaster restaurant laughing throughout the evening, Clark managed to weave some of his homespun philosophy of life.

During the annual affair, a member of the Alabaster club was singled out to receive an award. Civitan president Herchiel Meadows presented the club's Citizenship award to Don McKeever.

Pageant set for November

Bob Robinson, chairman of the 1980 Shelby County's Junior Miss program announces that the competition will be on November 10. The location for the program has not yet been decided.

It is a preliminary to Alabama's Junior Miss held in January in Montgomery.

Junior Miss awards scholarships to high school senior girls who exemplify academic achievement, poise and citizenship.

Shelby County's Junior Miss is sponsored by the Cahaba Valley Jaycees. Any high school senior girls who are interested should contact Bob Robinson at 879-4274. There will also be an informal meeting on September 30 at 2:00 p.m. in the Pelham City Hall. Senior girls and their parents are invited to attend.

With former Columbiana resident

Italian visitor renews friendship

by David Moore

He flew from Italy to Alabama,... came to Shelby County to visit a close friend... to see a far country.

They sat upstairs in the Reporter's Columbiana office, talking Luigi Narciso Rigoni speaking in animated Italian, his friend Wade Walton interpreting. Even without understanding what they said, you could tell they were good friends. Something about their laugh.

At one time, Walton, now 34, lived in Columbiana and went to Shelby County High. Later, with the Army, he went to Vicenza, Italy. There he met Rigoni, lived in the man's apartment building for a year and half, and became a close friend, a part of the family.

"Rigoni's mother still calls me 'baby boy,' and asks, 'When are you coming home to stay?'" Walton said.

He explained that he returned to the States in April and is now stationed at Ft. Benning, Georgia, as a sergeant. Walton took leave to visit with Rigoni when he flew over for a three week visit. He introduced him to his mother, Mattie Walton of Columbiana, showed him around the area and planned a two day trip to New Orleans.

Rigoni said that he was at first apprehensive about coming to America because of the language barrier. But on the flight over he met an Italian speaking man from Miami who helped him through to Atlanta. When he got off the plane in Birmingham on August 25, Walton was waiting for him, so their were no problems.

One of the things about the area that puzzled Rigoni was why the streets were so clean (compared with Italy) and yet he never saw a street cleaner.

Too, Rigoni wondered why we call Double Oak Mountain a mountain. "It is just a hill," he said. Near his hometown the Small Dolomiti Mountains soar to elevations of 3000 meters.

As a visitor to a foreign country, Rigoni was subjected to numerous other American oddities, such as the lack of bidets (a commode type sink common to European countries) in bathrooms, the spaciousness of farm lands and even urban areas, and, alas, the sad, unavailability of a place to socialize on Sundays over a glass of wine and a game of cards.

It took Rigoni only a short while to notice the difference in driving habits between American and Italians. In Italy, he explained, everyone tries to get where they're going first, with little or no respect for red lights, stop signs and such.

Rigoni kidded Walton about driving so much like an Italian while he lived over there. Walton claimed that he's changed since moving back home.

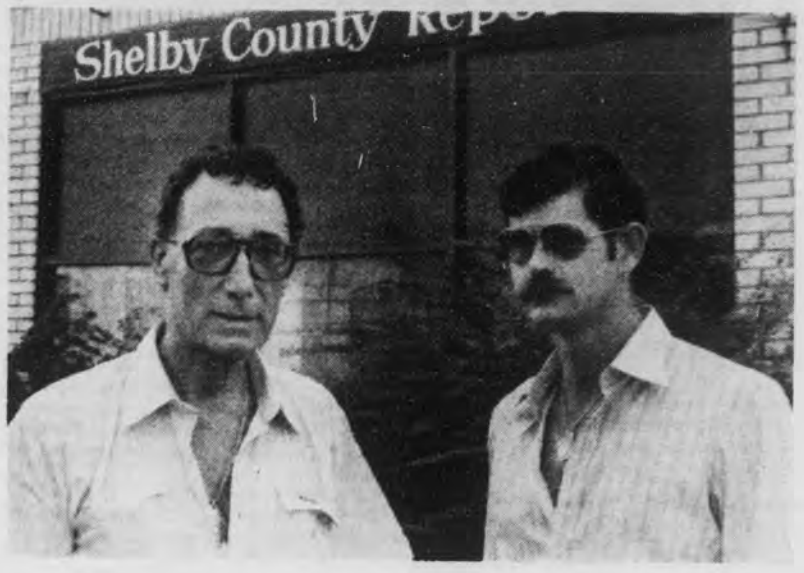
Waving a State brand MS cigarette in the air as he talked, Rigoni told about how friendly he had found Americans to be, especially at discotheques, where people spoke to him. Though the words were lost to the language barrier, their general message was not.

Walton said that Rigoni is an excellent dancer, and added that dancing is an art of the Italians.

Besides owning the apartment where Walton lived in Vicenza, Rigoni is a goldsmith by trade, an art he has practiced with great pride for 46 years. Walton wears a three-ounce, ram head ring of solid gold, designed and handcrafted by his Italian friend. The ring was two months in its creation.

"If I had a masterpiece, that would be it," Rigoni said through Walton, who proudly showed the ring.

The two men spoke to each other, their Italian flowing smoothly, and again it was obvious that the many miles which normally separated them and their cultures, did little to deminish their friendship.



Luigi Narciso Rigoni (left), flew over from Vincenza, Italy to get his first look at America and visit his friend Wade Walton, formerly of Columbiana. While giving an interview with the Reporter, Rigoni made a special request to have his picture made in front of the office. Speaking in his native tounge, Rigoni said, "As far as buildings and people go, I've seen the small and tall of all."

Columbiana firm changes landscape

Earth movers ready 4-H center site

Shelby County is growing and one obvious sign is all the heavy equipment we see working throughout the county.

When new construction begins, the first phase is cleaning and grading the property.

Harold McCord in Columbiana owns all the equipment necessary to handle the heavy-duty jobs of preliminary construction.

With eight years experience in heavy equipment construction work, McCord and his crew know how to make the land fit your construction needs.

More and more businesses are opting to build their offices off major thoroughfares, into the natural setting of forrests and mountain lakes. But this means roads have to be built to reach the area.

McCord and his crew specialize in building quality roads, with good drainage and that are less apt to need repairs.

Besides offering you quality road work, McCord has equipment needed to build beautiful lakes and lagoons, basements and clear forrests.

Among his earth-moving monsters, McCord has front-end loaders, back hoes, dump trucks, and grading machines.

Presently, several of McCord's crew are at work on the new 4-H center, off of Hwy. 28 near Columbiana.

The new center will have a huge conference center, four full-sized dormitories, a swimming pool, football field, and tennis courts.

But before construction can begin McCord's heavy equipment is preparing the land first.

For any construction need which requires heavy earth-moving equipment, call Harold McCord at 669-6040 or 669-7096.

Don Barnes, a member of the McCord crew, moves stumps and trees with this heavy front-end loader. Barnes is presently working on the new 4-H project Center for Shelby County.

Teachers fight Knowles' plan

by Bert Seaman

There was a noticeable chill in the air as Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles spoke to members of the Shelby County Teachers' Association Monday after the group voted to revise his Professional Development plan.

After teachers had been given an opportunity to express their views on the plan, which requires weekly two hour after school sessions with no extra pay, the association members present voted 218-19 against the plan as it now stands.

Knowles told the group that the 237 members who voted couldn't speak for the more than 600 teachers in the system.

One of the teachers in the audience made it clear to Knowles that more of the 456 members of the association would have been present at Shelby County High School if they hadn't been afraid of the consequences of attending the meeting.

Vincent teacher Dale Sumners, who proposed the resolution to elect a new steering committee to draw up another professional development plan, pointed out that the association represented two thirds of the teachers in the county.

Everyone seemed to want to take pot shots at Knowles, and the new superintendent may have felt as though he were on the firing line as UNISERV Director Pat Keener shot questions at him in rapid fire order.

However, he answered with a resounding No when Keener asked if he were going to ignore what the teachers wanted done, and if he would suspend his program.

There would be no objections to the teachers electing a new steering committee, Knowles said, but he refused to suspend his plan until a new one was implemented.

When asked what would happen to teachers who refused to attend the Thursday professional development meetings, Knowles promised that no action would be taken against them.

During his remarks to the group Knowles pointed out, as had the two teachers who defended his plan, that a steering committee had been duly elected by teachers in each school.

Some of the group had contended that teachers had no input in formulating the plan and didn't even know of its existence until the beginning of school.

One of the most outspoken members of the group, Wayne Sumners, pointed out that most of the teachers in the system and not even the Board of Education had known much about such a plan being drawn up.

If something is not going to be done to correct what teachers felt were shortcomings in the plan, Sumners indicated he might initiate a class action suit.

Saying he'd talked with lawyers, Sumners informed the group that "The superintendent has no legal right to require us to spend this time" (The weekly two hours after school).

Steve Shoemaker, an AEA staff member addressed the teachers before they voted on Dale Sumner's resolution. He compared the Shelby County teachers situation to the plight of striking Walker County teachers.

Fearing that the AEA representative was urging them to take similar action, one Shelby County teacher spoke out saying, "Let's don't cloud the issue. Our problem is trying to reach a compromise, not consider striking."

Urging the teachers to go ahead with their election of a new steering committee, Knowles remarked that he didn't know if it could be done within the time framework on Sumner's resolution.

The Vincent teacher had set Sept. 20 as the election date and Sept. 26, as the time for the results to be presented to the Board of Education.

Calera bank plans expansion program

A half million dollar building expansion program is being announced this week by Central State Bank in Calera.

Announcement of the project that will add some 3,000 square feet of floor space to the Calera financial institution is being made by William M. Schroeder, president and chairman of the board.

Work on the bank's new addition has already begun. The project is expected to be completed in May, 1980, Schroeder told the Reporter.

The new addition will be located to the rear of the existing bank building and will be connected to the present building's north wall.

When completed the bank will have seven new private offices and two more indoor teller windows, bringing the total number of paying and receiving teller windows to seven with three loan stations. An additional drive-in window is being added which will give the bank a total of four drive-in windows.

The new construction will also double the bank's bookkeeping area, triple the size of the fireproof record keeping area, add additional lobby space, increase the number of safe deposit boxes and greatly enlarge the bank's vault area.

Exterior of the addition will be brick that matches the present appearance of the bank.

Bank Building Corporation of America of St. Louis and Atlanta is the firm serving as both architect and general contractor. Local subcontractors are being used extensively, according to Schroeder.

In commenting on the building program, Schroeder told the Reporter, "This project reflects the confindence we have in the predicted growth of the Central Alabama area."

Joe Ball, Executive Vice President said, "Our expanded facilities will allow us to provide faster, more efficient banking services to the citizens of this part of the state."

Officers of the bank in addition to Schroeder and Ball are: Deegee Schroeder, vice chairman; Mrs. Carlene R. Hadaway, Cashier; Mrs. Irene H. Northcutt, Assistant Cashier and David Downs, Assistant Cashier.

Directors of the bank in addition to Schroeder, Ball and Mrs. Schroeder are Richard E. Ballentine and W.L. Lawler, Jr.

Reviewing expansion plans

Object of the attention of this trio is a set of blueprints detailing a half-million dollar expansion program for the Central State Bank in Calera. Left to right are William M. Schroeder, president and chairman of the bank's board of directors, Deegee Schroeder, vice chairman of the board and Joe Ball, executive vice president. Construction has begun. Plans call for completion of the project in May, 1980.

Man hangs himself in Alabaster jail

by David Moore

A man hanged himself in the Alabaster jail September 11 after being arrested on a charge of armed robbery.

Joseph Traub, 26, who carried a Seattle, Washington driver's license, was found hanging by his own belt by reserve officer Phillip Walker about 10:47 at night according to Alabaster Chief "Bull" Carter.

Traub was picked up by Chilton County officials in Clanton shortly after robbing a man at gun point of $10 at an Alabaster service station.

Police report that Traub was in good spirits when he was brought into the Alabaster station for questioning and booking.

Chief Carter said that the prisoner's belt was not removed because he was still going through the process of questioning and was being taken in and out of his cell.

Traub attached his belt to the top of the cell bar near the door. The prisoner in the adjoining cell reported hearing no unusual noises.

Efforts by Alabaster paramedics to revive Traub were fruitless, as were efforts by Shelby Memorial Hospital emergency room doctors who worked for 40 minutes trying to revive the man.

Traub, who was described as a rambler, had several previous charges against him. A woman he met in New Mexico, Sandra Zuard, was picked up with Traub and charged with carrying a concealed weapon. She had traveled with Traub for three or four weeks, according to reports.

In a statement made to police several days after Traub's death, Zuard said that he "was planning to destroy himself at one time or another...he seemed not concerned about anything at the time other than his parents and myself."

Chief Carter said that some past prisoners in the jail had made attempts on their lives, but that Traub was the first to succeed. "If they're going to do it (suicide), they'll find a way," Carter said, explained that others had tried to use sheets to hang themselves and broken light bulbs to slash their wrists.

The toxicologist's report on the autopsy of Traub's body was hindered by the fact that embalming fluids had already been injected due to a mix up at Bolton's Funeral Home. Bob Bolton is currently serving as temporary coroner because Coroner Billy Thompson is hospitalized.

According to Dr. Joseph Embry of the state department of forensic sciences, amounts of amphetamine and a chemical found in Valium were present in Traub's body.

Frederic's wrath misses County

Storm damage in Shelby County from Hurricane Frederic last week was minimal. Countians breathed a collective sigh of relief Thursday as the storm center bypassed Shelby County some 50 miles to the west.

Compared to havoc wreaked along the Gulf Coast, with damage estimated at $1.25 billion in Mobile alone, Shelby County escaped the fury of Frederic relatively unscratched.

According to Civil Defense director Bill Tucker, "As far as we're concerned, officially, it was just another big rainstorm."

Tucker said that flash flooding was a concern for a while, but the flooding never materialized since the ground was so dry and only about two inches of rain fell in the county.

The main damage to the county was caused by toppled trees and branches which knocked out power lines.

The U.S. Weather Service reported wind gust average beween 45 and 52 mph.

In Alabaster, police had to direct traffic on Hwy. 31 for more than an hour and a half when power to the traffic signals was knocked out.

Alabama Power officials reported 3500 customers in Northern Shelby County were without power for at least part of the day, due to seven substation breakers being knocked out. All but 75 scattered customers had their power on again by midnight; power to these customers was resumed by Friday afternoon.

Montevallo officials report numerous large, old trees down in that area. Street crews are still removing several hundred truck loads of debris from houses and businesses throughout the city.

President keeps order

Billy Wayne Bramblett, president of the Shelby County Teachers Association presided at Mondays called meeting. He's shown talking to Dale Sumners who presented the resolution to revise the professional development plan. Teachers were given three minutes to express their views on the plan.

Pelham property up for rezoning

by David Moore

The Thurman Wilson property, located on the Old Montgomery Highway near the entrance to Indian Hills has been denied B-2 zoning. The land in question, however, will now be considered for an O-I (office and institution) change in zoning.

The action was taken Monday night by the Pelham City Council after Wilson's attorney David Ovson requested that the council adopt a resolution to resubmit the original B-2 request as O-I. The land is currently zoned A-1.

The original B-2 request, which came up at a public hearing September 10, met with strong vocal protest from residents of Indian Hills, and action on the matter was tabled until this Monday.

Councilman Ray Hamilton, seconded by John Tanner, moved that the B-2 rezoning request be denied. The motion passed 3-0.

Hamilton then moved that a resolution be passed resubmitting the rezoning request as O-I. This also passed 3-0.

The O-I request will come before the planning and zoning board on Wednesday, October 10. A public hearing will be held on the matter.

By a vote of 2-0 (Hamilton and Tanner), a request for a change in ownership of beer licenses was approved for the Smoke Shop and Pasquale's.

By a vote of 2-1, a request for a liquor license was granted to the Pig 'N' Whistle. The restaurant already serves beer. The opposing vote was registered by Willard Payne, with Hamilton and Tanner voting in favor of the motion.

James Duncan of Indian Hills asked Mayor Burk Dunaway if the council yet had any plans for appointing another councilman to fill the vacancy left by Leslie Todhunter's resignation last spring.

"Once again, tonight, we had two people deciding matters brought before the council," Duncan pointed out.

"I think everyone agrees we need another member," the mayor answered, saying, however, that the council had not yet agreed on whom it would be.

"The appointment will probably be soon. Probably," Dunaway said.

In three county raid

'Bust out' nets 30 drug users

by Bert Seaman

Lawmen from a three county area launched a massive drug raid in the pre-dawn hours last Wednesday hoping to round up 68 persons charged with drug abuse.

Three Shelby County residents were among the 30 or so persons that UNDO (United Narcotics Detail Operation) led teams found at home and arrested.

A fourth suspect was also found, but because there was a child in the home to be cared for, she turned herself in later in the morning.

Shelby County Sheriff's Department Investigator John Pratt and Robert O'Connor, an investigator with the District Attorney's office took part in the raid which involved 103 different cases in Shelby, Chilton and Jefferson Counties.

Capt. George Howze, commander of UNDO, said that agents would continue looking for the suspects until all of them were arrested. According to Pratt, several more arrests are expected to be made in Shelby County.

The "Bust Out," was the culmination of a 4-5 month effort by UNDO undercover agents. And warrants for the 68 suspects were obtained after grand jury indictments were handed down against them.

Those arrested in Shelby County were: James Oden, 31, of Alabaster; Donny Kelley, 28, of 6028 Cahaba Valley Road; and Linda Kelley, same address. David Seals of Calera was arrested in Chilton County.

All of the suspects were released on bond which was reportedly set at $2,500.

Fifteen agents took part in the raid which is the second one the agency has launched within a four month period. Several Shelby County residents from the Vincent-Harpersville area were arrested in the drug crackdown in May.

Reporting that his office expects to try all ten drug cases which are coming up the next term of court on Oct. 15, District Attorney Billy Hill said that he was taking an agressive stance against drug abusers.

He stressed that his office has implemented a policy that anyone convicted of selling drugs will have to serve time.

Explaining his reason for being tough with drug pushers, the District Attorney reported that more and more hard drugs are coming into the county. And he went on to say that one of his main concerns is the effect the increase in drug traffic may have on youngsters.

Hill also pointed out that drug abuse and burglary are the two crimes that most affect the day to day lives of Shelby County citizens.

He credited the agency and the Sheriff's Department with bringing in an increasing number of drug cases.

Good reasoning behind school plan

Shelby County's public school teachers have traditionally been an easy going group who took note of pronouncements that came from the Columbiana Board of Education offices, but really did not pay much attention to them if they differed from the teacher's traditional way of doing things.

Under the former superintendent, each school principal had great autonomy and there was little cohesiveness in the county school system. Principals were left to make most of the decisions on school operation, within the curriculum guidelines of the state. As a result, there was great variation in what was taught from one school to another, and many teachers taught what they wanted, when they wanted, and in the style they wanted.

But the new superintendent, Charles Knowles, said long ago that he wanted a child in the seventh grade, for instance, in one Shelby County school to study math or English in the same style as a child in any other county school. He wants a uniform learning level for every student in each grade throughout the county. When a student has to transfer from one school to another in midyear, he or she should be able to make a smooth transition, taking up the academic subjects in the new school at the same point as in the old school.

This is just one of the reasons why Superintendent Knowles felt it imperative for teachers to devote two hours a week to professional development.

Other reasons probably include the widespread disaffection of the taxpaying public with the uneven results the schools are turning out in their graduates.

Knowles wants a strong learning experience to be available to all students in the county schools. Undoubtedly, the teachers do too.

But some of the teachers seem to feel Knowles' plan would encroach on their own free time and are protesting loudly.

Surely this problem can be worked out to the advantage of the children of the school system. Knowles was the overwhelming choice of the teachers last year of the four candidates who ran for the office. The teachers felt then, and know now that he has strong leadership qualities, that he knows the Shelby County system, and most of all that he considers the children first.

The public should follow this matter with interest, and make their views clear to both teachers and superintendent. Shelby County has too much going for it to be sidetracked with an unseemly fight among educational forces.

War on illiteracy affects school life

by Constance Kidd

What with Governor James and his war on illiteracy and Superintendant Knowles with his new ideas, now that school has started, what effect do their plans have on students?

As a student of Thompson High School, I feel that there has definitely been a beneficial effect on students. There have been some changes.

First, Thompson lost three teachers this year. One was lost to retirement and two others because of the shortness of funds with which to pay teachers in Alabama.

Another change is that up until this year THS students were given plenty of free time. For a few years up until last year, they had an "open lunch" period. This was where the students could make their own choice of whether to go to the cafeteria and eat, or to do almost anything else they wanted or needed to do. This privilege was taken away last year because of disciplinary problems. The students were made to go to the lunchroom and stay the entire period which was shortened from one hour to 35 minutes. Many students thought that this was unfair to them and were angered by it. But this change took place towards the end of the school year and there were no incidents.

Students returned to school in August prepared to accept this change and were confronted with yet another. There were to be four separate lunch periods and each student was required to have a twenty-five minute reading class. In the reading class, students can read anything at all whether it be the back of a chewing gum wrapper, homework, or a book as long as it is not obscene. There is no writing, no talking.

With the other classes longer, and the reading class, every minute of the school day is utilized. Most students are getting more out of school. Many will agree that the reading class is not as bad as they thought it would be. They feel it allows them to do reading that otherwise they would have no time to do, or simply would not do.

Whether or not these changes are a direct result of the governor's and the superintendent's war on illiteracy, it seems that there is being a new emphasis placed on education in Alabama. Seemingly, the war has begun.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

Notebook Time: This is for Dock Jones who thinks I ought to do it and I agree with him. It has been a beautiful summer weather-wise, with just enough rain to make a garden grow and not a day over 100. I hope somebody found out how to order one and will do it again next year. I had four plantings of corn and we had corn out of every patch, good corn with milk in it. I wore Grandpa's ladder slap out climbing up and picking Kentucky wonder beans. And, for the first time in our lives, Leona and I are really tired of tomatoes.

And did you hear about the turnip patch on the Egg and Butter Road? He planted his turnip seed early and got four showers on 'em. When I went by there today he had greens a good ten inches high and a sign out front, stuck on a pole in front of his patch, which said: "If you don't see anybody, blow your horn, and somebody will come out and pick you a mess."

I started off with a bush arbor, about as fancy a bush arbor as a guy would want to see, four posts strung together with old wire, and covered with corn stalks I cut in my garden. Right off we got two showers and Jack Stone told me they needed sun to grow so I took the arbor down and let the sun get at it. And the sun got at it. For ten days it has been getting at it. That turnip patch is cooked as brown as a pan of burned toast. But I ain't worried a lick about that shriveled turnip patch. Hubert Kirkland told me I could get turnip greens and mustard anytime I wanted any. And he's got 'em. He has 'em every year, and watermelons and cantaloupes, and anything else you'd want in a garden. But that's not surprising to anyone who has been around the old town for a lot of years. They'd know, the same as I know, that a boy who had Mr. and Mrs. Till Kirkland for his Mom and Pop would have to know everything about a garden.

On the 30th of September in the year 1929, Percy and Thelma Acker tip-toed up the aisle and said 'I Do'. So come September 30, these two fine folks will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary. It'll be in Trussville, given by their two children, and they'd like to have all their friends drop by. But wasn't it just yesterday, Percy, that we started out, sitting together in a double desk in Aunt Louella's first grade. And wasn't it the day before yesterday that we were knocking scaleybarks in Mrs. Rosa Teague's back yard and a rock came back and busted your head. I remember we went to my house and patched it up and your folks never knew about it, with all that bushy hair covering it up.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

I had a day last week that can only be described as "one of those days!"

No sooner did I leave the house on that fateful morning than I had a wreck. What a wonderful way to start the day, right?

Although I had some close calls in the hours that followed, the fender bender was actually the worst thing that happened to me.

The accident, in which the driver of the other car backed into me, happened because I was in a hurry and took a short cut. That should be a lesson to me, I guess, to always go the long way around.

Anyhow, as I climbed out of my car to survey the damage, a friend driving by stopped and called me over to her car. I thought she might be going to offer assistance, but instead she proceeded to tell me about a tap dancing class that was starting.

She and I had been buddies in a class that had folded and she was obviously all excited about getting back to the shuffle, shuffle step, step routine.

Although I was interested in what she had to stay, it didn't seem to be the time or place. Fortunately, drivers behind her started honking and she made a hurried departure.

When I finally got underway again myself, I decided to scout around for some of the damage inflicted by Hurricane Frederic. I had heard that lines had been down across the road in the narrows, so I set out in that direction.

Finding the location was no problem, but those who are familiar with the area know there's no place to park a car.

I finally left my vehicle half way up the mountain and walked back along a narrow wall that separates the highway from the creek below.

Stepping carefully over the weeds that covered the wall in places I managed to reach the spot I wanted to photograph.

Everytime one of those huge 18 wheeler trucks whizzed past just inches away from me, I thought sure I was going to be blown off into the road or down the steep, rocky creek bank.

I did go down that bank, of my own volition however, in order to get a better picture. How I managed to reach the bottom upright I'll never know. Every rock I stepped on wobbled and broken glass was everywhere.

But down I went without mishap and back up again only to meet another potential disaster down the road a ways.

Suddenly spying a huge tree in a church yard that had been felled by the storm, I decided to turn in and get a picture. However, sudden turns don't always work out too well. Noticing a big, old truck coming up behind me pretty fast as I applied the brakes, I started to turn and then saw another monster on wheels barreling around a curve toward me from the opposite direction.

I don't think that accelerator had ever been stomped on so hard. It's a wonder I didn't wind up inside the church.

Nothing much happened after that. I made it safely back to the paper and then home.

But a strange phone call seemed an appropriate ending to the kind of day I'd experienced. The caller informed me I'd been selected to take part in a survey and she didn't give me a chance to refuse.

However, I bombed out on the first question which was, "Are there any male members in your household 21 years of age or over?" I almost wish I'd strung the interrogator along to find out where the questioning was leading.

As I'd found out earlier in the day, being a little bit daring (otherwise known as being stupid), sure does make life more interesting!

School trustees play important role

Letter to Editor:

I have been a resident of Shelby County for only four years. It was the school year of 78-79 that I found out the importance of school trustees. It is my understanding that this is the year for re-election of trustees.

All Shelby County news papers could be of great help if they would publish the requirements, duties and obligations of trustees. Most importantly, we need to be aware of just how much control these few people have over our schools. It would also be a great service to the parents of all Shelby County school children if the papers would print the dates of these elections.

I feel as though it is in the public interest for all residents of Shelby County to realize the importance of these positions. As it has been proven over the last several years in Shelby County; the trustees carry more weight where school decisions are concerned than our own Board of Education. It is all parents obligation and responsibility to get involved and know the people running for trustees. These trustees' elections are the only voice we, as parents, have in the way our schools are run. We all must get involved and vote.

Annual picture draws apology

Open Letter to Patrons of Shelby County High School:

We the administration and 1978-79 Annual Staff would like to apologize to the students and parents for the picture and its caption appearing in the 1979 Shelana.

No dishonor, disrespect, or malice was intended in the printing of said picture. We do agree that it was in bad taste and had no place in a high school yearbook.

We are truly sorry for our mistake.

Where's disclosure on special lobbies?

Open Letter to
The Honorable Richard Shelby
United States House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

I am writing in response to a poll I recently received from you. I find it difficult to give a simple yes or no answer to the majority of the issues put forth in your poll. I thought it best to write and express my overall opinion of the poll itself.

I must say I am deeply disappointed. As I see it, the poll clearly shows the pressure put on you and the Congress by the special interest lobbies. I do not base my opinion on the questions that were asked or how they were worded. What I find most disappointing about your poll is the omission of one issue in particular. I refer to the lack of any question concerning lobby disclosure legislation.

It is easy for me to understand how the commercial press will allow this legislation to keep a low profile. After all, they are in a position to benefit directly from the failure of Congress to pass this type of legislation. They will profit from advertisements and solicitations of support for whatever legislation the special interest grou[illegible]ing before the Congress.

I consider it a betrayal of the public trust for you to omit any question concerning this vital issue. President Carter clearly pointed out in his State of the Union message the need for reform in this area. The President has demonstrated his concern over the growing lack of faith in our government by the people of this country. Because of this loss of faith in our government, the people have withdrawn their participation and support. Do you think the people do not remember "Korea-gate" and "Cargo Preference"? It is these things and many others that is at the root of this loss of faith. A republic that looses the participation and support of its people is in peril.

For the good of the Republic I strongly urge your active support for H.R. 4395. I also urge the reporting of efforts to influence grassroots campaigns and the reporting of contributions of over $3,000 by lobby groups. It is my opinion that this is the most important legislation under consideration in the Congress. I see it as a vital first step toward restoring faith in our government.

Yours very truly,

Dr. Vickrey recounts SALT conference with President Carter

by Jim Vickrey

President, Univ. of Montevallo

There aren't many people on this planet I'd get up before 5 a.m., drive 40 miles, and then fly another 680 miles via Atlanta to see for less than an hour. But, the President of the United States is one of them.

So, when the telegram inviting me to join a delegation of other Alabamians at a White House SALT-talk arrived, I immediately responded "I'll be there" -- despite the necessity of getting up before dawn. I'm glad I did, and I'm glad I was.

The Delta flight to Washington's National Airport was in and of itself worth all the bother. Dignitaries from throughout the state (including Shelby Countian Frank Ellis) helped fill the Boeing 727 that air-ferried us to the nation's capital: judges, educators, attorneys, business executives, politicians and others. I sat by my good friend Clyde Williams, President of Miles College.

Upon arrival in the City of "magnificent intentions," as Dickens once described it, I hastened first to the State Department to witness first-hand a press conference by its spokesman Hodding Carter, III, the Mississippi editor whom I met a few years ago at a symposium in Tampa. Most of the other Alabamians taxied to a reception on Capitol Hill, hosted by Senators Howell Heflin and Donald Stewart.

The press conference, conducted daily in Room 2108 of the large rectangular Department of State facility, was expertly presided over by the still-young Carter. With occasional humor but always with an air of assurance, he deftly fielded increasingly probing (and some downright silly) questions about the major breaking news story of the day -- American and Russian discussions about the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba and Pravda's recent editorial on the subject. By accident or design or habit, Carter's appearance perfectly matched the style of his responses as well as the room crowded with more than a hundred reporters and a few interlopers such as I.

Along with about 300 other Alabamians, I met with the other Mr. Carter thereafter in the East Room of the White House. He walked into the impressive, gold and white-dominated room about an hour after opening remarks by his assistant Anne Wexler, and a free-wheeling "discussion" led by Dr. Harold Brown, secretary of Defense backed up by arms control expert General George Seignious. The colors in the spacious hall made its 78 degree thermostat setting seem even warmer than it was.

Much as a campus head addressing his faculty, Secretary Brown reviewed for about 25 minutes (it seemed longer) the administration's rationale for submitting the SALT II Treaty to the U.S. Senate and the major provisions of the landmark agreement. He used four nicely printed charts, propped up behind him on the podium at the center of the large rectangular room, to emphasize his points. Unfortunately, those of us seated beyond the first few rows of seats could not read them.

Among the points he stressed was the verifiability of Russian compliance with the requirements of SALT II -- verifiability, he noted, which is enhanced by the Treaty rather than diminished by it. That point was emphasized also in the materials we found at our seats as we entered the Gold Room. It was a focus of the session with the Secretary as well, and was raised in connection with the matter of the recent discovery of Soviet troops in Cuba, which had been discussed at the other Carter's press conference.

As the President entered the East Room, the reverberation of a dozen questions-and-answers being drowned out in the crescendo of applause accompanying his appearance, I was suddenly moved by the inspiring spectacle of what was happening -- a free people directly questioning their national leaders on a matter of trenscendent political and military importance.

President Carter's remarks and bearing served to accentuate that feeling as he addressed us in a now familiar way, noting the many advantages of Treaty ratification and the serious disadvantages of its rejection. After his brief speech, he also took questions from us Alabamians and handled them and the questioners with aplomb.

It was the first time I had ever had the privilege to ask the President of the United States a question to his face.

The question addressed the dilemma faced by what James MacGregor Burns recently labelled the "transforming leader" -- the dilemma resulting from the heightened expectations created by such a leader, one of whom President Carter is. Such expectations, usually unrealistic at some stage, cause followers to become disenchanted and, when the ideas that originally enchanted them are implemented to begin to talk about "the credibility of leadership." That, I told the President, was what was happening to him and, in my judgment, was one of the major reasons he's having some of the difficulties he's having on the SALT Treaty and other issues. Accordingly, I asked him how "we who voted for you before and are inclined to do so again can help you."

In the gathering quietness of the room, his response was sincerely direct, even eloquent. It reflected an understanding of the underlying problem I was trying to lift up from the intricacies of the treaty debate. He seemed to agree, especially in regard to the difficulty of negotiating with other nations in the open while not destroying the effectiveness of such discussions with premature disclosures of results -- as Carter's noon-time press conference verbal tight-rope act so well revealed. He reminded us that the details of SALT II were known by more Americans before it was signed than was the case for any other treaty and that, while such openness created its own problems, he believed that that approach was better than the more secretive processes of previous administrations.

As we applauded his answer, I couldn't help but feel that President Carter has a firmer grasp on the realities around him than was evident (to me) before -- and that made me feel better about the treaty. Indeed, as we adjourned to a delightful reception with Southern-style iced tea and french pastry in the nearby State Dining Room, I found myself thinking that he's the kind of man one would find easy to turn to at dinner and say: "Please pass the SALT, Mr. President."

Returning to Montevallo at day's end -- again via Atlanta -- I reflected upon these impressions and found myself inspired anew that we yet live in a land where few Americans reside "below the SALT," as novelist Thomas Costain might have phrased it.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"Will There Be Degrees of Reward in Heaven?"

People who go to heaven will be rewarded in differing amounts for their faithfulness and purity on earth.

Daniel stated, "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever." (Daniel 12:3) God will "render to every man according to his works." (Romans 2:6) The works ("doing" in the Greek) is different for each, thus differing rewards.

Paul stated, "If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire." (I Corinthians 3:15) Paul is saying that an evangelist's converts may fall from grace and be lost; however, he will be saved. This means a loss in reward, but not of salvation. Christ spoke of "a prophet's reward" and of "a righteous man's reward." (Matthew 10:41) Thus, there are differing rewards for the righteous.

The explanation is this. All of the righteous will go to heaven and enjoy the blessings to his fullest ability. However, the capacity for enjoying heaven will differ from one Christian to another. Those who have served faithfully for thirty years have a greater capacity to enjoy heaven than those who, for example, pass from life into eternity shortly after obeying the gospel.

Dear reader, to become a Christian, you must hear (Romans 10:17) believe (Hebrews 11:6), repent (Luke 13:3), confess (Matthew 10:32, 33), be baptized for the remission of sins. (Acts 2:38; 22:16)

International flavor

Foreign students add flair to ISS

by David Moore

They feel very lucky, and who wouldn't. After all, it's not everybody who gets the opportunity to attend school in a foreign land.

But to these students, that foreign land happens to be Shelby County.

The students--there are ten of them this year--are enrolled at Indian Springs School, and will be living on campus while attending classes. Some of them will be here only for the year. Others hope to stay until they graduate, maybe even longer.

The students range from the eighth grade to seniors, and represent seven different countries: Bangladesh, Belgium, Japan, Iran, Jordan (Palestinian), Thailand and Taiwan.

The students all attended American schools or studied English in their respective countries. Most speak English quite fluently.

According to Julia Richardson, Indian Springs public relations secretary, the foreign students are well accepted on campus. Their influence on other students is very good, she says.

"Students learn about different cultures from them. It's really an education in itself," Richardson points out.

Iqbal Ahmed, a junior from Bangladesh, "People are very friendly. The school's building their minds in this direction. The faculty is very friendly and helpful, too."

He goes on to say that he likes Indian Springs because "it's sort of a natural place for a school. It's out of the way of disturbances."

Ahmed came over from Bangladesh with a friend of his, Obaidur Rahim, another junior. The boys said they had heard from people several years ago that they could expect racial problems in America. To their pleasant surprise they found things "quite to the contrary."

Rahim notes that "everything's faster here. People even walk faster." He found this amusing.

Two Palastinian students from Jordan, Jamil Hamdallah and Terek Dahdah, are returning to Indian Springs for their second year. The two 16 year old seniors said that it was good to get home last summer, but they were glad too, to get back to their friends here.

Dahdah says the sports programs here are much better, and back home there are no boarding schools.

There are no private schools in Belgium either, points out senior Marnix Galle, who goes on to say Indian Springs is "very good because of the quality of education."

Mohammad Ali Eslami, a 14 year old from Iran, feels a little less far from home because he not only has a brother attending Jefferson State in Jefferson County, but has an uncle, Parviz Tehrachi, living in Vincent.

His parents in Iran had intended for him to finish the seventh grade back home, but when fighting broke out there earlier this year, they sent him on to the States. He attended Lyman Ward Military Academy for the rest of last school year, but didn't care for the regimentation.

"Here, I can just walk around where I want to in my free time," he says, adding that "in Iran, three-fourths of it's desert. But over here everything's green with the trees everywhere."

Eslami, who says he wants to graduate from Indian Springs and hopes to go to college in America, concedes that school is going to be hard for him because he has never "read" algebra or biology.

Before leaving Iran, his father told him, "Try your hardest." Eslami said, "I'm going to try the hardest I can."

Countians aid hurricane victims

A number of concerned organizations in Shelby County have made efforts to aid hurricane riddled South Alabama.

The Women's Auxiliary of V.F.W. Post 5963 in Alabaster donated a check for $1,000 to aid homeless veterans in Mobile. The Auxiliary is also collecting bedding and blankets to send to the disaster area.

Civil Air patrol units from Birmingham and Bessemer, using a coordination point in Alabaster, flew generators, chainsaws, gasoline, medical supplies and other goods to Mobile from Thursday through Saturday.

Among the countians participating in the Civil Air Patrol mission were Nick and Barbara Stribling and their son Nicky, from Alabaster.

Members of Alabaster Cub Scout Pack 394 collected a pickup truck load of canned food to send to hurricane victims.

Pelham Mayor Burk Dunaway and city clerk Willie May Dennis told the Reporter that anyone wishing to send food and supplies to victims of Frederic could turn them into either the Pelham fire or police departments.

Alabaster Church of God plans 'Pentecostal Explosion'

Alabaster Church of God will hold a "Pentecostal Explosion" September 23-30. The revival will feature Rev. Sam Luke of Georgia as guest evangelist.

Rev. Luke has conducted crusades throughout America and several foreign countries. Author of "Signs of His Return" and "The Holy Spirit," Luke will preach on topics such as divine healing, Baptism of the Holy Spirit, and demon possession in the 20th century. Ministering to the sick will be provided at every service.

Rev. H.M. Massey of the Alabaster Church of God extends a warm welcome to everyone interested in attending the revival. Services will begin nightly at 7:15 and on Sunday at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Alabaster adopts budget

A $964,278.00 budget was adopted by the Alabaster City Council Monday night and the panel also voted a $50 across the board cost of living increase to city employees.

Finance Committee Chairman Charlotte Burke recommended that the city give longevity benefits to employees who had three years of service and over. The panel also agreed to this proposal.

Counting time of employment from Oct. 1, the annual payment to be made each December will be $100 for 3-5 years of continuous service, $300 for 5-10 years, $400 for 10-15 years and $500 for 15 years and over.

The largest chunk of this year's budget, which has increased by $188,278, over last year, will go to the police department. Their askings amounted to $329,946.

Money deemed necessary for the Sewer Department during the '79-'80 fiscal year amounts to $155,135, and projected administration costs were totaled at $135,729. The Fire department's budget was set at $120,847.

Alabaster's sales tax is expected to bring the most revenue into city coffers. With the additional one cent added this year to the existing penny tax, the projected income from that source is $400,000.

Privilege license fees are projected at $170,000 and income from sewer fees should amount to $110,000.

The city's revenue from ad valorem taxes has jumped 28 percent to $95,000.

Following the recommendation which Councilwoman Burke brought from the zoning board, the panel voted to rezone a 1.6 acre piece of land adjacent to the Siluria Baptist parsonage on Hwy. 119.

Owner Eric Kuhnel had asked that the land which had been R-1, be changed to B-1. It was reported that some members of the church attended the zoning board meeting and were opposed to a B-2 designation, but went along with the proposed change.

It was reported that Kuhnel plans to put an office building on the property.

In other business the panel heard YMCA Executive Director Molly McGregor ask for the lease on the Y building to be extended from five years to 20 years.

Even when a new facility is built, the present building will still be needed for a branch, McGregor told the council. And in order for the Metropolitan Y to hand over funds for needed repair work, she said assurance was needed that the organization could have the use of the building for an extended period of time.

Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek said that the city's attorneys would be contacted about extending the lease.

Due to Pelham Moncrief's resignation from the Park and Recreation Board, three names were submitted to fill the vacancy, but no action was taken. Those now under consideration are: Joseph Lewis, Richard Kidd and James Cofield.

Gary Lee Glover was present at the meeting to hear the council agree to change an off-premises beer license from Tom's Mart to G and L Grocery which he now owns.

FOP honors members

The Shelby County Chapter of the Fraternal Order of Police honored ten men last Thursday night for their work with the organization. The men received lifetime memberships to the lodge.

Eddy Nelson, Marvin Hall and Glenn Naish were also presented cards of appreciation for their outstanding service. The presentations were made by FOP president Lyle Mitchell.

Two new members were initiated into the order at the meeting, Dr. Richard Ward from the UAB department of criminal justice, and Sgt. Mark Austin of the UM police department.

A training film on police shooting techniques was shown by Dr. Al Graves, also from the department of criminal justice.

The FOP has been meeting at its newly remodeled lodge off Hwy. 26 for three months. About 30 law officers and associates attended last Thursday's meeting.

Busy family finds time to move to County

Newcomers entertain

Pianists Anna Yow Briscoe and James Clyburn (seated) from Meredith College in North Carolina recently stayed at Deborah and Joe Bledsoe's home in North Shelby when the duo came to play a concert at Samford. The concert was sponsored by the Birmingham Music Teachers Association, of which Mrs. Bledsoe is president. (Photo by Moore)

by David Moore

You know how it is when you get a certain catchy tune in your head and you can't seem to get it off your mind. Well, that's similar to what happened to Joe and Deborah Bledsoe and the house they wanted to build in Shelby County.

"I've had this plot for ten years," says Joe Bledsoe, refering to their two acres on Indian Crest Drive in North Shelby. "It took us that long to move here. We should have moved sooner, but we were so busy we couldn't."

When his wife is busy--as always--it is usually has something to do with music. Deborah Bledsoe, began playing the piano at the age of six, has been teaching since she was 14 and now has some 40 students from around the county and surrounding areas.

As if that's not enough to fill up a day, this energetic lady is also president of the 200-member Birmingham Music Teachers Association. A couple of weeks ago, she held a board meeting for a group in their new home.

"We have updated everything to make the Society more applicable to today's teacher," she says, going on to add that she hoped the organization can now start bringing in more music teachers from UM and around the county. Among other things, the Society sponsors concerts and workshops.

"It's called the Birmingham Music Teachers Association, but it's open to anyone who wants to come and can benefit from and enjoy our programs," she points out. "We're not just limited to Birmingham, we're open to people from Calera to Forestdale." Currently only about four or five county music teachers belong to the organization.

Besides all her music activities, Deborah Bledsoe and her husband have two children to help them pass the time. Debbie, 22, is a radiologist at Bessemer Caraway Hospital, and David, 21, works at Pullman Standard. Both are currently living with their parents.

Joe Bledsoe, who also answers to William and Buck, is a project manager for Performance Systems, Incorporated in Roebuck, which designs and sells filtration systems.

The Bledsoes' home is a rather remarkable study in contrasts. Contemporary in design, it features a balcony kitchen looking down one story on a large living room, complete with cathedral ceiling. It has four bedrooms and three sun deck porches.

Almost everywhere you look, is a piece of beautiful antique furniture, offsetting the contemporary design. The house is almost formal, but it also carries an easy, casual atmosphere. Like their elegant, grand piano, the furniture is there to be used and not just looked at. All of which boils down to a very comfortable home. And of course the Bledsoe are there, making it all the more so.

The Bledsoes had carried the tune of their new house in their minds since the days when Indian Crest was just a dirt road. Finally, back in July, they moved from Bessemer to their new home in Shelby County--a home that's almost their dream house.

Almost?

"This isn't my dream house til I get a maid," laughs Joe Bledsoe. "And I get a gardener," his wife jokingly adds.

Montevallo Rotary hears former Probate Judge

Former Shelby County Probate Judge, Conrad Fowler, was the guest speaker at the Montevallo Rotary Club on Thursday evening.

Judge Fowler is currently Director of Public Affairs for West Point Pepperell, Inc. in Lanett. He indicated to the Club that he was enjoying his new role of advocacy for the free enterprise system.

Fowler was asked by Gov. Albert Brewer in 1969 to convene a committee to revise the Alabama Constitution. The committee was made up of citizens throughout the state. It met for several months and produced a proposed new constitution stream lining the outdated 1901 constitution. The section on the judiciary was adopted by the legislature and new emphasis is being placed on passing the remainder by Gov. Fob James.

Fowler stated that some matters should be left in the hands of the legislature to deal with situations which arise, rather than to tie their hands by enforcing a cumbersome State Constitution.

Calcis road claims rich heritage

by David Moore

In the beginning was the mountain. Running from the northeast to the southwest, it stretched between the Coosa and Cahaba Valleys, a wall of trees and rock more than 1000 feet tall.

Indians came to the region and hunted the woodlands along Shoal Creek in the valley north of the mountain, and Bear Creek to the South. Eventually, over the mountain, the Indians beat a steep trail.

Homesteaders settled in this mountainous region after the Creek-Indian War in 1814. They called the path over the mountain Winding Stair Trail. By virtue of mule and ox cart usage, the rough trail attained the dubious status of a "road".

With the coming of the railroad, small towns named Dunnavant, Vandiver, Sterrett and Calcis would grow up in this region of Shelby County. But to build the railroad, the mountain would first have to be conquered.

In 1871, the Central of Georgia Railroad cut a half-mile long tunnel through the dank, rock mountain. Used today by Southern Railways. the stone tunnel facing still bears the soot smudges of steam engines which thundered through the mountain enroute between Birmingham and Columbus, Georgia.

According to some local stories, it was during the building of this tunnel that the legendary sledge hammering John Henrv died in his race against the spike driving machine.

Whether or not John Henry actually left his mark on the mountain may be questionable. But one man who did leave his mark on the mountain was Sidney Word Lee.

Today, a sign on Alabama Highway 25 near the top of the mountain reads:

"In honor of Sidney Word Lee, whose suggestions and influential support was the first factor in establishing this road across Double Oak Mountain connecting Cahaba Valley with Coosa Valley, started in 1914 and opened in 1921."

(Contrary to popular opinion and the words of the sign, the highway here actually crosses Coosa Mountain. Double Oak Mountain, which is part of the same ridge, begins at a deep hollow somewhat west of Highway 25.)

The founder of the Buffalo Rock Company in Birmingham, Sidney Word Lee also owned a 3000-acre camp on Kelly Creek near Calcis. James Lee, Jr., who is still with the soft drink company, says his grandfather visited the camp at least once a week, and considered it one of the most beautiful places in the world.

According to the grandson, Sidney Word Lee was fond of saying, "Whether I go to heaven or hell, I'm going to be sure to go through Calcis!"

Lee felt like the area should be opened up more and he pushed for the building of a road over Coosa Mountain. In later years, when he could drive to the camp, he would load his car with candy and throw it out to children in Calcis.

To build the road over the mountain, was no piece of candy.

Over the mountain

For scenic enjoyment there are few drives in Shelby County to rival Hwy 25 over the Coosa Mountain. Not only is the entire area rich in natural beauty, but it is also steeped in heritage as well. This article is first-in a three part series on the mountain and the road between Dunnavant and Calcis. (Photo by Moore)

"I want the highest yield I can get, from my crops and my savings."

Let's face it. Farming's a tough business. You depend on high yields. In fact, with the cost of everything in the farming industry going up, you've got to have them.

I look at savings the same way I look at farming; getting the highest yield I possibly can. Because high yields in savings is like high yields in farming. It helps you on down the road; next year's planting season, farm expansion, college for the kids, retirement.

United Federal pays the highest interest rates allowed by law, whether it's on a regular statement account or an 8 Year Certificate of Deposit.

But besides high interest rates and high yields, United Federal offers still more; like friendly, personal and professional attention. The way I look at it, a savings and loan should be sort of a financial partner, honestly concerned about the welfare of my business. That's just the way United Federal operates.

Sure, United Federal gives you a lot of interest, but it doesn't stop with your money.

Chelsea preacher recounts 90 years

by Shelba Nivens

On Sunday, September 9, John E. Ferguson, Sr. of Chelsea, celebrated his 90th birthday with members of his family and the K-Springs Church of God congregation.

"Brother Ferguson," as he is known to most people of the area, began preaching some twenty-odd years ago, and has helped to establish several church congregations around the state.

As a member of the Methodist Church, he helped to organize the Palmerdale Methodist Church, around 65 years ago. About three years ago, he went to Homecoming at the Palmerdale church. He is the only person yet living who helped organize it, he says.

According to Brother Ferguson, "The church of God was revealed to me one night." That was around 1914. A short while later, he and a Brother McClure came to K-Springs from Stewartville and held a series of services in the old K-Springs School House.

John Ellis Ferguson was born in Stewartville, Alabama, on September 7, 1889 to John L. Ferguson and Sintha Farris Ferguson. He was raised on a farm in Coosa County, and moved to the Chelsea area in the 1930's.

He was married in 1920, at the age of 30, to Alien Sanders. "I'd said I would never marry," he recalls, "But I ran into her, so I did." He smiles, recalling how he met her. He was at a hospital in Memphis, Tennessee to have his tonsils removed. "It was a little, old shotgun-type house that they'd made into a Presbyterian hospital. I was sitting on the porch that first night with a nurse and I saw my wife and another girl and a boy sitting under a big hedge. And, Boy, it hit me! I asked the nurse which of them girls that boy was going with, and she told me the small one. The other one was his sister. And, was I glad!

"She was a nurse, and they were getting ready to take out my tonsils the next morning when she came in and gave me a glass of salts. I told her I wasn't going to take any salts, but, boy, could she put up an argument. She said yes, I was, because it was on the orders. I argued with her just to tease her, but I took it. It made me feel really terrible, and when they came to get me to go to surgery, I asked the doctor why he ordered salts for me when I was having surgery. He said, 'Who gave you salts?' I told him, and they went and checked on it... She told them that the orders were on my door. They looked, and the orders was there, but they were for another man who had been moved out....

"When I got ready to go home, I asked for her address. She put up an argument again, but she put it down.... I wrote to her, and I went to visit her twice before we married."

John and Alien Ferguson had six children. Their first, died at age three. Oldest son, John E., Jr. died in 1973. He had made his home at Chelsea. Daughter, Eva Dean (Johnnie) Duren lives in Huntsville. Son, Harold, lives in Boise, Idaho. Sons, W.J. Ferguson and W. Devon Ferguson, live in Chelsea. Alien Ferguson died in 1942. John never remarried.

"My baby, Devon, was eight years old when my wife died," he recalls. "When I was off preaching, my sister-in-law kept him. I raised him, and spent a lot of time praying for the Lord to help me. I prayed 'Lord, I've never seen a man with a mother's love, but I want you to give it to me! You know how we have warm nights, and it gets freezing before morning? Well, I use to wake up at night and see his mother tucking the covers around him, so I'd do that, too. One night I realized, Now, that's a mother's love!"

During the years, Brother Ferguson worked as a barber, farmer, storekeeper, and minister. For many years, he ran a nursery, growing flowers and shrubs in his front yard in the K-Springs community.

"I took a years bookkeeping course after I married," he recalls. "It was at Massey Business College and my teacher was Mr. Alverson, who started Alverson Business College.... he said, 'Looky here fellow, this is not hard to you, is it?' I said, 'No,' and he said, 'Then, you hold it down, and I'll pour it in'... One thing I'm thankful for is my mind. I could go to school today and learn...."

Brother Ferguson demonstrated the sharpness of his mind when he delivered the sermon in the Sunday evening service at K-Springs. Afterwards, he was honored with a surprise birthday reception in the church fellowship hall.

New real estate firm begun in county

Tom Cory, a veteran Shelby County realtor, is announcing the establishment of his own real estate firm.

Tom Cory Realty-ERA was incorporated during August and began business this week with a staff of seven agents.

In making the announcement of his new business, Cory told the Reporter, "While others are worried about a recession, we find Shelby County is still booming and is a good place to live and do business."

The new company will concentrate its activities in Shelby and Chilton counties, according to Cory, and will deal primarily in commercial, residential and acreage type real estate transactions. The firm is affiliated with Kingsberry Homes, Electronic Realty Associates, the Farm and Land Institute and the Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers Society.

Cory, who is president of Tom Cory Realty, is a native of Birmingham and is a graduate of Woodlawn High School and Jacksonville State University. He also attended the University of Alabama and Samford University and is a graduate of several real estate seminars and the ERA Sales Training School.

Cory is a certified appraiser and is a member of the National Association of Real Estate Appraisers, the National Farm and Land Institute and is an associate member of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers.

Before entering the real estate business five years ago, he served with the Birmingham office of the Social Security Administration for four years. Prior to that he was an executive with the Boy Scouts of America.

His military service includes four years of active duty with the U.S. Coast Guard.

In addition to Cory, staff members of the new company include Wilson Alexander, broker-builder; Beth Conner, ERA coordinator; Peggy Hand, A.V. Jannett and Joan Alexander all ERA Sales Specialists; and Peggy Dye, S.D. Zeanah and Gail Owens, sales associates.

The new company has offices at 1130 Highway 31 in Alabaster, across Highway 31 from the Western Sizzlin Restaurant.

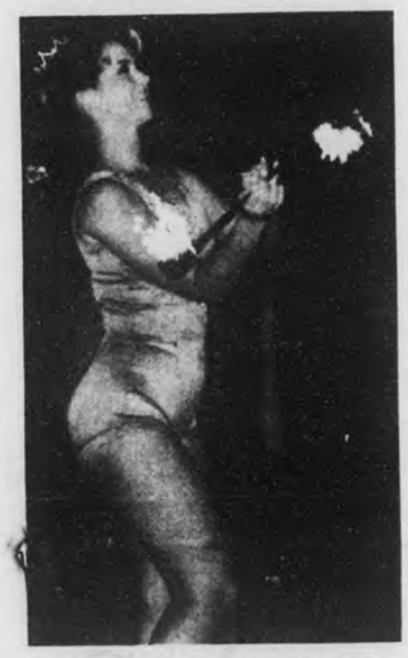
Panthers reign again as Hornets fall 34-0

by Richard Crosby

The Panthers from Pelham showed a lot of offensive punch last Friday night with a 34 to 0 whipping of the Chelsea Hornets. Coach Steve Rivers' crew from Pelham kept the Hornets on defense almost the entire game.

Chelsea cheerleader Karen Bradberry urges on the Hornets during the game last Friday night.



Pelham's majorettes provided some firey highlights during the halftime at Chelsea last Friday night's game.

"We stayed backed up the whole first half'' Chelsea's Coach Richard Conkle said of the game. "Our kids have a good attitude and they're willing to work and I believe we'll start winning some ball games.''

"I realized right off we were more physical on the lines than Chelsea was'' Coach Rivers told the Reporter, "and we took advantage of it.'' Chelsea gave up right at 20 pounds per man on the line and also in the backfield.

"We're still improving'' Rivers said of his team's performance, "That's been our main objective since the season started. Chelsea battled us every play of the game and I'm proud of our kids.''

Chelsea started off in trouble as the kickoff was fumbled with Pelham taking over deep in Hornet territory. But Chelsea wouldn't let the Panthers capitalize on the error as the defense held on against four tough plays by the Panthers.

On Pelham's second possession the Panthers drove 50 yards for the game's first score. Dale Busby carried for the final yard and six points. Woody Woodson added the PAT making the score 7 to 0.

In the second quarter, the Panthers again drove for paydirt. This time the drive carried 43 yards with quarterback Steve Parsons sneaking over. Woodson again toed true for the extra point. The score remained 14-0 at the half.

In the third quarter, Pelham drove the ball 85 yards for what turned out to be the clinching touchdown. Busby got his second touchdown of the night with a six yard run. The PAT went wide to the right.

In the fourth quarter, Busby got his third score of the night as the Panthers put together an 84 yard drive.

Busby got the call for the final two yards. Woodson added his third PAT of the night making the score 27 to 0.

The game's final score came late in the game with Chelsea trying to play catchup. Defensive end Woody Woodson intercepted a flair pass and raced 35 yards for the touchdown. The senior also added his fourth PAT conversion of the night to make his contribution to the win amount to 10 points. Woodson also handled the punting chores for Pelham, booting the ball three times for a 44 yard average.

Leading rushers for Pelham were Busby with 148 yards on 28 carries, Parsons with 56 on 7 attempts and Barry Faulkner with 59 yards in nine carries. Coach Rivers named Woodson, Jeff Mathis and Chris Cutcliff as his outstanding defensive players.

This week the Panthers host Winterboro in Pelham. Last year the Bulldogs defeated Pelham and this year brings an undefeated record into the contest.

Meanwhile, Chelsea travels to Talladega County to play T.C.T.S. in what may be a tougher match than reckoned. The Hornets will have their hands full in trying to win their first game of the year.

Lineman of the Week

TOMMY ROY

Pelham's Tommy Roy has been named the Lineman of the Week for Shelby County. The Panther junior weak tackle was one of the main cogs in Pelham's win over Chelsea last Friday night.

Coach Steve Rivers commented that his team rushed for over 200 yards behind the blocking of Roy.

"Roy has done an outstanding job for us on the offensive line'' Rivers said of his player. "He's improved each week and is an asset to our team.''

The 16-year-old wears number 63 for the Panthers and is elligible for Lineman of the Year.

Going down for the catch

Vincent whips Tigers 16 to 6

by Richard Crosby

Vincent's Yellow Jackets met a scrappy bunch of Tigers from Talladega County Training School last Friday night but the 'Jackets defense held on as the team won its second game in as many weeks. The final count showed Vincent with 16 points to the Tigers 6.

"We're improving'' stated head coach Gary Garrett. "We're still a little inconsistent offensively, but overall we played a pretty good football game.''

The 'Jackets scored first in the second quarter. After holding Talladega, Vincent but the ball in play on Talladega's 30 yard line. On the first play, Sidney Yowe raced to the goal line. James Oden rain in the conversion for two more points.

Five minutes later, the Vincent defense scored two points as Cecil Ford blocked a T.C.T.S. punt out of the endzone for a safety. The score of 10 to 0 held until the fourth quarter.

Vincent added some icing to the cake midway through the final period as quarterback Oden passed 24 yards to Rodney Driggers for the score. The conversion failed as Vincent took a comfortable 16 to 0 lead.

Talladega did get a consolation score in the final four minutes of the game but not with a vicious fight. With first down and goal to go from the one yard line, Talladega fought for three plays before finally nudging the ball over the goal line. The conversion ended as did the scoring with Vincent on top 16 to 6.

Sidney Yowe led the rushing attack for the 'Jackets with 68 yards on 11 carries. Rodney Driggers gained 55 yards on five carries. Coach Garrett commended Steve Riggins and Tony Abbott for their outstanding offensive blocking.

Defensively, Mark Brasher, Eric Kelley and David Brasher earned praise from their coach.

This week Vincent travels to Cordova. Last year the 'Jackets lost 15 to 7 and most of this year's squad remembers that loss. You can be sure they'll be out for revenge.

SCHS faces toughy this Friday night against B.B. Comer

Will the Wildcats win their third straight game? That's the most asked question around Columbiana and the rest of Shelby County and the answer is still unclear.

The biggest hurdle for coach Mark Bradley's crew is offensive blocking. As yet this season, the line has yet to prove itself and that may well prove the difference in this week's ball game.

The first two games for Shelby County have been somewhat gifts from the opponents. Montevallo fumbled a touchdown to the Wildcats as did Sylacauga a week later.

Fact is, both games have been full of fumbles much to the delight of the Shelby County fans who have waited several years for a team worth cheering for.

This week a B.B. Comer offense that doesn't fumble is coming to Columbiana and Shelby County will either have to provide its own offensive punch or take a goose egg on the scoreboard.

Defensively, the Wildcats are far above any of its competition. Scoring won't be easy for any team facing the Shelby County crew....unless the Wildcats catch fumbleitis.

Well, anyway you look at it, this week will be the make-or-break week for Shelby County nd you can bet that seats will be hard to find as another record crowd turns out to watch the Wildcats go for win number three.

Collecting the cash

Shelby County Reporter employee Denise Baker presents the cash to Mrs. S.B. Ennis who accepted the prize on behalf of her husband who won last week's Football Cash. Mrs. Ennis took second place.

FOOTBALL CASH!!

S.B. Ennis of Columbiana won the Football Cash this past week. The two-time winner correctly picked 11 winners but it took the tiebreaker to determine that he was the winner.

Second place goes to the winner's wife, Johnnie Sue Ennis, who also had 11 winners, but who lost in the tiebreaker by six points to her husband.

Four contestants correctly picked 10 of the 12 games. Terri Nobles, Cary David, Paul Posey and Wayne Shaw came close but not close enough.

Over 20 contestants picked nine correct winners in last week's contest. This game must be getting easier so the games you'll have to pick winners from is going to have to get tougher.

You'll find this week's entry blank on page B-12. Good luck!

Ready to snap

Flag football league underway at YMCA

The whole family gets involved in the football program at the Shelby County YMCA.

It's flag football. And while it's still up to the youngsters who participate to get the ball across the goal line, parents pitch in to do their part as scorekeepers, timekeepers and coaches.

Parents fulfill another important function too. They turn out for the Saturday morning games to cheer for the team on which their boy or girl plays.

Everyone who plans to participate in the Y's second season of play needs to sign up before Sept. 29 when a clinic, parents' meeting and practice game will be played.

According to Molly McGregor, the Y's Executive Director, coaches are still needed for the teams on which youngsters from 6-12 years of age may play.

Pointing out one of the big pluses for flag football, McGregor says that every player gets a chance to get in every game for at least a half. "And the kids learn everything that players in tackle football do," she added.

The cost of the flag football program for Y members is $12 and the registration fee for non-members is $18. This includes the T-shirts with the Y emblem which serves as uniforms.

Practice sessions will be held after school on the campus where the child is a student. A tournament and banquet will be held at the conclusion of the season and each player will be presented with a banner for participation.

Calera defense still perfect

Eagles fly past Mustangs

by Richard Crosby

Calera's offense generated 340 yards and 45 points while the defense allowed Isbella only 39 yards total offensive and not a single point last Friday night as the Eagles won their third game of the season.

Calera's defense has not allowed a single poinnt this season and if those 11 tough players continue, they'll break records on a statewide level.

The Eagles got rolling early as Johnny Russell intercepted a Mustang pass on the third offensive play of the game and ran 28 yards to the 12 yard line. Two plays later, Bill Seay took the ball in from seven yards out. Ryan booted the PAT.

Two minutes later, Bill Seay returned the Isbella punt 44 yards for the second touchdown of the night. The PAT went wide. Seay added his third touchdown of the night and first quarter with 47 seconds left with an 11 yard run. The PAT was successful making the score 20 to 0 as the first quarter drew to a close.

Seay added his fourth touchdown of the night with 2:47 left in the half. The Eagles marched 89 yards with Seay racing the final 29 for the score. The PAT was true to make the score at halftime 27 to 0.

The third quarter opened with the Eagles again marching nearly the length of the field. Fran Blanchard shortened the number of plays required to cover the distance with a 52 yard run for the goal line. The PAT was again wide.

With reserves playing almost the entire second half, Calera still showed offensive and defensive muscle. Bobby Turnbloom recovered an Isbella fumble on the 8 yard line, and Eric Lacey scored on the first play. The missed PAT left the score at 39 to 0.

Eddie Posey got his first touchdown of his career at Calera midway through the final period. The senior scooted 12 yards for the score which was the final point-play for Calera.

Rushing leaders for Calera were Seay with 127 yards and four touchdowns, Lacey with 86 yards and one touchdown and Blanchard with one run for 52 yards and a touchdown.

Heading up the defensive were Dale Smith, Jeff Stewart. Curtis Barefield, Lloyd King, Kirk Ross and Cliff Smith.

Calera takes this week off before going back to the gridiron on search of another win that they hope will be a stepping stone into the state playoffs.

Bulldogs in for fight of their lives

by Richard Crosby

Montevallo has seen fruit-basket-turnover in the football team ranks. Twelve position changes have taken place since the Dallas County game. "The jury's still out on whether those positions are final" coach Richard Gilliam told the Reporter.

The Bulldogs have started the 1979 season in a manner completely opposed to the normal method they have used the last four years. Montevallo has yet to win a game and this week the Bulldogs face one of their toughest rivals.

Thompson is the foe this Friday night in Alabaster and the 3-0 Warriors are an easy favorite.

"On paper," Coach Gilliam said, "They're seven touchdowns better than us." Thompson whipped Jemison, who whipped Dallas County, who whipped Montevallo.

In the past five meetings of these two teams, Thompson holds a decided edge. Last year the Warriors edged Montevallo 21 to 20. The year before the teams tied 7 to 7. In 1976 Thompson eliminated Montevallo 40 to 0, and the year before a game without defense produced 86 points in a game. Thompson won that one 46 to 40. In 1974, Montevallo won the rivalry 30 to 28.

According to coach Gilliam, the Bulldogs will be trying to make Thompson quarterback David Cofer pitch the ball on the option. "I look for a lot of defensive problems for us in the game" Gilliam concluded.

Thompson, as host of the game, will be making the money in this game should the crowd be as large as expected. Two years ago, the game was postponed until Saturday night because of rain - a calamity that could have kept the fans away.

The crowds at this year's game may not be as big as last years but fans can expect a noisy show of support and one of the best half-time performances of the year as the county's two largest bands battle the break time.

Golf tourney set

"Final plans are being made for the Walter Hagen Golf Tournament State Playoff," announced Pete Scott, State Chairman. The tournament which benefits the American Cancer Society will be conducted on October 28, at Riverchase Country Club in Shelby County.

Montevallo offers recreation program for entire family

Ott Knight, Director of Montevallo Park and Recreation Department, is announcing the schedule of fall activities this week.

"There are activities for all members of the family, "Knight commented, "so we hope all citizens of the Montevallo area will get involved in some activity."

Among the activities being sponsored by the Park and Recreation Department is a class in gymnastics scheduled for Tuesdays and Thursdays. This class is designed for children and young adults from 4 to 18 years of age.

A slimnastics course will be offered on Tuesdays, beginning at 5:30 p.m. Slimnastics will be held in the new park and recreation building in Orr Park. This course is designed for adults.

A class in cheerleader skills will be held on Wednesdays at 3:15. This activity is designed for elementary and middle school age children. Classes will be held at Montevallo High School.

Swimming lessons will be offered. Time for swimming is still to be arranged.

Classes in karate designed for adults and teenagers will be held in the Park Building. Time of classes is still to be arranged.

Bowling for adults will be available on Tuesdays beginning at 7:00 p.m.

Plans call for establishing a volleyball league if at least six teams are formed.

Additional information may be obtained by telephoning 665-2626 or 665-7143.

Final shoot of the year draws crowd to Vincent

A one arrow shoot marked the final contest for the Creek Bowhunters. The club sponsors the shoot in preparation of the hunting season and if winning trophies and shooting high scores means getting game, then many members of the club will be putting wild game on the table this winter.

Buford Guthrie shot the best score of the day in the tournament which was held Sunday afternoon. The marksman shot a 548 out of a possible 560. Frank Rooks placed second in the men's division with a 544. Ray Wood carded a 532, and Larry Simmons a 512.

Deborah Gray was the high shooter in the women's class with a 492. Marilyn King took second place in a shootoff over Debra Simmons. Both women shot 420 on the 28 target course. Bonnie Watkins placed fourth with a 388.

Stoney Johnson shot a 340 to win the Youth Boys class. In Cub Boys, Brian Pritchard took first with a 556, followed by Shannon King, Rodney Abbott, and Donnie Gray.

Paula Wood led the Cub Girls with a 504. Pattie Wood, Tammy Abbott and April Watkins took third through fourth place respectively.

At the conclusion of the shoot, the scorecards were placed in a box with names drawn for gift certificates at a Birmingham Archery Shop. Getting lucky in the drawing were Rodney Abbott, Donnie Gray, April Watkins, Donald Gray, Frank Dupree, Brian Pritchard, Bonnie Watkins and Shannon King.

Winners of the 1979 fish contest were also announced. Killing the longest gar was Steve Salmon who took home half a dozen arrows. Dewey Harris placed second and Jerry Gardnner third. Deway Harris also won the heaviest carp contest with a monster that weighed just over 14 pounds. Mike Reinhart placed second in that category and Ray Wood third.

The next meeting for the archery club will be held early next year after the completion of hunting season.

Volleyball season begins

Briarwood Christian School and Chelsea High School began their volleyball season last week.

The Lions defeated Moody Christian 15 to 6 and 14 to 7 to open the year on a winning note. Chelsea also began the year in the win column, but Briarwood was the victim.

The Hornets defeated Briarwood 15 to 7 and 15 to 8. The games were played last Tuesday, September 11th.

Also fielding volleyball teams this year are Thompson, Pelham and Shelby County.

Briarwood's Peter Wright displays his running ability which enabled him to return a punt 65 yards for a touchdown last Friday night.

Briarwood demolishes Marion 46 to 0

by Richard Crosby

Briarwood's Lions opened a few football stadium in style last Friday night as Marion Institute was mauled in the arena 46 to 0. The Lions won their second game of the year in the newly christened stadium that saw a crowd of about 1,000 in attendance.

Head Coach Gary Fleming was understandably proud of his team which blitzed the visitors for 14 points before the Briarwood offensive unit had snapped the ball.

Lions' kick returner Mike Schor received the kickoff and raced 85 yards for a touchdown Paul Barber added the PAT. Briarwood kicked off, held Marion and then on the punt return, Peter Wright dazzled the home crowd with a 65 yard punt return for a touchdown. Schor added the PAT making the score 14-0 with just four minutes of the game completed.

Still in the first quarter, Briarwood added another seven points as Mike McCrary slipped into the endzone on a 20 yard option play. Schor added the PAT.

Briarwood added two more touchdowns before the half. Pat Trammell sneaked three yards and Schor scooted 10 yards for paydirt. Both PAT attempts failed, making the halftime score 33 to 0.

The final two touchdowns for Briarwood came in the third quarter. Peter Wright ran a sweep for six yards and six points, and Lawton Miller burst three yards for the final six-pointer. Barber added the first PAT and Schor the second.

This week the Lions face Westminster of Gadsden at Briarwood. The game will be played Saturday night with the kickoff scheduled for 7:30. It is the first conference game of the year for the Lions and, according to coach Fleming, is a big rivalry in the Christian Athletic Conference.

Richard's Picks

by Richard Crosby

It sure is tough being a football prognosticator. Every week someone tries telling me I'm just making up the results I publish. Fact is, this is the way it will be this Friday night.

Montevallo-Thompson- The Warriors are 3-0 and will be 4-0 after this little workout. All the smiles will be on the home side of the field as the Bulldogs get whipped like yard dogs. Prediction: Thompson 38, Montevallo 6.

Shelby County-B.B. Comer- The Wildcats will see another record crowd in Shelby Stadium but they won't go home happy like they have the first two games. The Wildcats just don't have enough muscle and experience on the offensive line and Comer's defense will win the battle on intimidation. Prediction: Comer 27, Shelby County (no fumble recoveries for touchdowns this week) 0.

Vincent-Cordova - I'm still not convinced that the Jackets have it all together this year. That will tell this Friday as Cordova hands Vincent its second loss of the year. Prediction: Vincent 11, Cordova 22.

Briarwood-Westminster- The Lions are off and rolling with two wins and I see no reason they should stop collecting goose eggs for the opponents score. Another easy battle for Briarwood. Prediction: Briarwood 26, Westminster 0.

Chelsea-T.C.T.S.- The Hornets will be looking to repeat last year's performance-gaining the first win of the year over T.C.T.S. - but this year it won't happen. A tougher than usual Talladega squad won't give the Hornets a chance and it just may be the third straight game of the year that the Hornets have failed to score in. Prediction: Talladega 18, Chelsea 0.

Pelham-Winterboro- The Panthers will avenge last year's lost to the Bulldogs with another combined effort on offense and defense. It'll be win number three for Coach Steve River's team. Prediction: Pelham 28, Winterboro 11.

Calera-Open: Boy, what a sandbagger that coach at Calera is. Telling me that Isbella was loaded and so forth..... This week I ignored everything he said about how easy Open would be and that match shapes us as a tough one. Prediction: Open 13, Calera 6.

Shelby Academy and Coosa Valley- Both teams had tough losses last week but I'm afraid this week will be more of the same.

Dove season opens with a loud bang

The dove season for 1979 was inaugurated with quite a bang around Shelby County Saturday at high noon.

Conservation officers report that a number of warrants were issued with the most often reported violation being the lack of a land permit.

The new hunting and fishing licenses are still not in stock at the Probate Judges' office, but Captain Ed Lightsey told the Reporter Monday morning that the office is giving receipts and that the licenses will be mailed upon their arrival.

Several calls were coming into the Reporter office late last week concerning where dove shoots were being held. The easiest directions given were, "Just drive out, stop the car and listen. Then follow the sounds of shotguns."

That proved successful for many hunters as large crops of birds were reported taken from Pelham, Helena, Vincent and Wilsonville.

No news has yet reached this office about dove shoots for this weekend.

ISS students win in national classics

Six Indian Springs students competing in the National Junior Classical League's 26th annual convention held on the campus of Michigan State University this summer have brought honor to their school and state.

Senior Robert Vance, now a freshman at Princeton University, won 1st in the nation for Latin translation level IV. Robert also placed 2nd in the Roman Life contest and 2nd in the Pentathlon, a special contest which tests the student's knowledge of the Latin language, Roman history, classical mythology, Roman literature and Latin derivatives.

Edward Shelswell-White, another ISS senior, won 5th in Latin translation level IV and 3rd in mythology.

Senior Ed Norman placed 10th in derivatives level IV.

Charles Vance, a junior at ISS, placed 2nd in the nation in both Latin translation and Latin grammar level III.

Sam Heldman, a freshman, placed 2nd in the nation in both Latin translation and Latin grammar level II. Sam also placed 3rd in the derivatives contest and 6th in Latin vocabulary.

Ben Hunt, another ISS freshman, won 1st in the nation in translation level I, 5th in the Pentathlon, and 8th in derivatives.

Several Decatur high school students who attended the convention also won awards.

Students from Indian Springs and Decatur High School amassed enough sweepstakes points because of their wins to place Alabama 6th out of the 36 states represented at the convention.

Alabama ranked 4th in percentage of students attending the convention and students winning awards.

The National Junior Classical League is a division of the American Classical League.

Next year's national convention will be held in Knoxville, Tennessee at the University of Tennessee.

Welding trainees sought

Fifteen trainees will be selected from Shelby, Chilton, and Bibb counties for a welding class. Scheduled to begin October 15, the class is funded under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

William J. Davis, director of the Alabama Department of Industrial Relations, said $60,580 has been allocated to the 24-week class. The department will contract with the State Department of Education to conduct the training at Montevallo.

Training is provided at no cost to the student, Davis pointed out, and each enrollee will receive an allowance while in training. To qualify for the CETA program, applicants must be economically disadvantaged and either unemployed or underemployed.

Interested persons may apply at the State Employment Service office in Tuscaloosa or Alabaster.

Score thrilling fourth quarter victory

Warriors perform miracle in Clanton

by Richard Crosby

Thompson's Warriors gave their fans a scare that will be remembered for a long time to come. Clanton was almost the spoiler in a fever-pitched game in Chilton County last week.

The Warriors game from behind in the last eight minutes to score 21 unanswered points to take the win from the Tigers.

"Clanton was after our hide and they almost got it" exclaimed Thompson coach Larry Simmons. "You're going to have some games that things don't go right and the other team moves the ball and that's going to present some mighty big problems.

"That's what Clanton did to us. We had two passes intercepted, big penalties, and Clanton drove the ball on us."

The Tigers took the lead in the ballgame in the second quarter after a long drive downfield, Tiger quarterback Maddox passed eight yards for the touchdown. The conversion failed.

In the third quarter Clanton again put together a sustained drive that scored six more points. The two-point conversion upped the score to 14 to 0.

The Warriors had an early opportunity to score when the ball rested on Clanton's four yard line, but the Warriors were unable to get the ball into the endzone.

Thompson finally got on track in the fourth period. Starting from their own 12 yard line, the Warriors moved the ball out to the 35. Clanton had been playing quarterback David Cofer on the option play all night, but this time the senior pitched the ball back to tailback Randy Anderson who broke around the corner for a 65 yard touchdown run. Cofer ran in the conversion attempt to make the score 14 to 8 with 8:35 left in the game.

Thompson kicked off and then held the Tigers, received the punt and started a 60 yard drive for paydirt. Cofer did the brunt oif the running for the Warriors. Anderson got the call from the ten yard line to earn his second touchdown of the night. Steve Smitherman added the pressure-packed PAT to put Thompson on top 15 to 14 with just two minutes remaining in the game.

Cofer put the final touches on the come-from-behind victory in the final seconds of the game by intercepting a Clanton pass and returning it 30 yards for the final touchdown. Smitherman was wide on the PAT but the victory belonged to the Alabaster school.

"I'm satisfied with our record" Simmons told the reporter, "But not with the way we're playing. I feel like we're not a real outstanding football team yet, but we're working hard everyday to correct out mistakes."

This week the Warriors host Montevallo in what has become one of the largest rivalries in the county. "I'm concerned. We've got to get ready for Montevallo the same way we do every year. Coach Gilliam will have his team ready and they have nothing to lose and everything to gain. We're still making mistakes and lacking speed and we're not as quick as we'd like to be. Our game against Montevallo is going to be a tough one."

In last weel's game, Cofer accounted for 94 yards while Anderson garnered 100. Defensively, Chuck Woody had ll tackles for the Warriors while Randy Hawkins made nine.

Touchdown

Vincent scored first in the game last Friday night against T.C.T.S. The 'Jackets drove the ball downfield almost at will at times against an improved Tiger team which is sure to make things rough for other county goes. (Photo by Gardner)

Scott-Long opens third office in Pelham - Riverchase area

Announcement of the opening of the third Shelby County office of Scott-Long Realty is being made this week.

The new Pelham-Riverchase office is located near the intersection of Old Montgomery Highway and State Highway 261.

Broker Dick Scott told the Reporter that ten real estate agents will be located in the newly opened office. "We feel this expanded facility, in addition to our offices in Montevallo and Alabaster, will help us better serve the residents and businesses of Shelby County," Scott explained.

"We, also, are interviewing for new agents," Scott added.

Scott-Long, with 25 active real estate agents, has been in the real estate business for the past 18 years.

Officers of the company are: Victor Scott, president; Reid Long, vice president; and Dick Scott, secretary-treasurer and general sales manager.

Shelby State names new manager

Geron Daniel, a native of Birmingham with 14 years experience in the banking business, has been named manager of the Columbiana Branch of the Pelham based Shelby State Bank.

GERON DANIEL

Construction of the new banking facility in Columbiana will begin this fall. Plans call for the new branch to be open for business in early 1980.

Daniel, who lettered in both football and basketball at West End High School, majored in business at the University of Alabama and is a graduate of the Consumer Banking School of the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, VA. He also holds certificates of completion of numerous banking and financial institutes.

The central Alabama business man currently lives in Thorsby where he owns a fast food service franchise.

While living in Birmingham he was affiliated with Birmingham Trust National Bank for 13 years and with Central Bank for one year.

He is a former member of the Eastwood Jaycees, the Eastwood Civitan Club and is currently serving as a member of the Park and Recreation Board for the Town of Thorsby.

Daniel, who began working this week in Shelby State's Pelham bank, told the Reporter that he and his family are excited about Columbiana and Shelby County and that they "are looking forward to growing with the rapidly growing Columbiana area."

Daniel is married to the former Richie Carmichael of Bessemer. Mrs. Daniel is currently employed by First Real Estate.

The Daniels have two children: Robin Diane, 14, a junior high school cheerleader and Michael Geron, 10, a student at Thorsby Elementary School.

The Daniel family plans to move to Columbiana in the near future.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Dealer keeps up with advances in TV technology

It has been said that the only thing constant is change. And the ever advancing state of art in television technology is a prime example.

Daryl Standifer, owner of Suburban TV in Alabaster, explains that the average life of a television set is 7-10 years, so by the time a person is ready to buy a new set the market has changed completely.

PHILLIP GLASS

"That's why we try and educate our customers and bring them up to date on the new sets," says Standifer. "We don't give them a hard sales pitch--we give them all the facts on a particular model."

Suburban TV features the popular Quaser line of products, because over the last few years, Standifer and his staff have found them to be the most reliable. And apparently a lot of people agree with them because a tremendous amount of Quasars are sold in Shelby County.

From the obsolete days of the tube TV (everything's now solid state to keep down the cost), Suburban's Quaser line has advanced to electronic tuning systems, three-way speakers systems and a one module curcuit design.

Standifer points out that most solid state televisions are designed with five to nine modules. Having a single module design makes service easier and quicker for the repairman, which in turn saves money for the customer when repairs are made.

"In buying any TV, you have to recognize that the set is going to have some service," says Standifer. Because of this, he points out that it is to the buyer's advantage to get a set from a store that does its own service work.

"Often larger chain stores farm out their service to other dealers. But when I sell a set to a customer and something goes wrong, you can bet I'm going to see to it that he gets service.

"At our store we're glad to do service on anybody's set, though," Standifer adds. "That way we gain potential new customers."

Standifer and assistant manager Phillip Glass are both technicians and do television repairs. Bill Cunningham, the manager, is licensed by the FCC to do CB repairs.

Suburban TV even makes in house television repairs, and will also install antennas.

Besides a complete selection of Quasar console cabinet sets and portables, Suburban TV also carries Philco televisions, Quasar one-touch microwave ovens and one of the newest advances in TV technology, the video recorder. In the near future, Standifer says he will carry portable recorders with color cameras.

With all the advances in video electronics, it makes you wonder what new products Suburban TV will add to their selection next year. In the meanwhile, if you're in the market for a television it would be to your advantage to contact Suburban TV, located on U.S. 31, South, in Alabaster, next to the Jessup Building. Or call 663-6411.

Suburban TV is open 8-5 every day but Wednesday and Sunday.

Because of teacher

Foreign languages zing at Pelham High

Back by popular demand

Spanish/French teacher Paul Huie is back at Pelham High School this year. His salary last year was paid by the Pelham PTO, but this year, due to the need of another teacher unit and popular demand of the students, Huie was added to the regular staff. (Photo by Moore)

by David Moore

"Te gusta esta pluma? (Do you like this pen?)," asks Paul Huie, holding the object in question up to his class.

Several "no's" answer back in English from different students in Huie's second year Spanish class at Pelham High School. The class snickers. So does Huie.

"No," the teacher says, pretending annoyance. "Repitan todas. (Repeat everybody.) Te gusta esta pluma?"

The atmosphere in Paul Huie's foreign language classes is casual. But not out of hand. Huie likes it that way. So do the students. And a student stands to learn more from a class which is enjoyed as compared to one which drags by boringly.

This is Huie's second year of teaching Spanish and French at Pelham High. August a year ago, the school's principal, Dr. Ed Belue contacted Huie and said he had 135 students signed up for language classes and needed a teacher. The problem, Belue told him, was that the county had no funds to add another teacher unit.

But area residents wanted their children to have a foreign language. Belue told the PTO that if they'd put up the money, he had a teacher. The PTO said go.

So Huie taught foreign languages, but the understanding was that it would be for only that one year. When summer rolled around the teacher found himself without a job.

Response to Huie's classes had been so great, however, that Dr. Belue told him there just might be a chance for him to come back.

"I felt an obligation to hold on and see what developed," Huie says. A community that thinks enough of education to pay a teacher's salary--well, I wanted to keep this thing open, so I didn't go anywhere else. I said, 'Kid, just ride with the tide.' And it came through."

Huie, who is 31, was the sixth child in a family of nine from Montgomery. In 1970 he graduated from Auburn with a B.S. in education. Afterwards, while teaching at Auburn High and Junior High Schools, he worked summers on his Masters of Hispanics Studies, earning his degree in 1974.

At Pelham, Huie teaches both first and second year Spanish and French classes (five periods), and has even managed to squeeze in four students who were interested in taking French III. Huie always seems to find time to reach students on an individual basis.

Gina O'Leary, a second year Spanish student, says, "I've never seen a teacher come into a school and be so liked the first year. I asked him to help me with some algebra and he did. He's just a good friend."

According to Huie, the average number of students a class should have is 25, but three of his classes have closer to 40 students. Says Huie, "You do your darndest, but it's next to impossible to get to every student."

Huie's method of teaching languages is to apply the grammar to written lesson and vice versa. Listening, speaking, reading and writing the language are emphasized in that order.

According to Carrie Hearn, a senior in Spanish II, "The tests are hard, in a way, but from what Mr. Huie teaches you in class, they're not bad. I like this class, Pablo (Paul in Spanish) makes it fun."

Paul Huie's style of teaching is very animated. He is constantly on the move, waving his hands about while walking around the class. There is usually much laughter. But there is much learning, too.

"I say all sorts of things," the teacher comments. "I don't act like a fool, but I don't put up any fronts, either. I'm pretty much the same person in class as out. I like to have a good time with the students."

UM gives Bach Tour

You can visit the Central European towns and villages where composer Johann Sebastian Bach lived and wrote his music without leaving Central Alabama during a film-lecture at the University of Montevallo, Tuesday, Sept. 25.

"A Tour of Bach Towns" will be presented in UM's LeBaron Recital Hall beginning at 8 p.m. by Dr. Ward Woodbury, conductor-in-residence at Brevard Music Center, Brevard, N.C., and director of music, Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla.

The public is invited, and there is no admission charge to the UM Music Department Guest Artist Series event, according to Dr. Ed Robertson of the UM faculty.

For more information you can call the UM Music Department, 665-2521, ext. 385 or 386.

In loving memory of Larry Pemberton who left us one year ago the 24th of Sept.

Your gentle face and patient smile with sadness we recall you had a kindly word for each and died beloved by all.

The voice is mute and stilled the heart.
That loved us well and true
Ah, bitter was the trial to part
From one so good as you.
You're not forgotten Larry, dear
Nor will you ever be
As long as life and memory last
We will remember thee

We miss you now, our hearts are sore as time goes by we miss you more, your loving smile, your gentle face, no one will ever fill your vacant place.

In Memory

In loving memory of our husband and father, Clarence G. Simmons, who passed away two years ago, September 24, 1977.

God looked around his garden
And found an empty space.
And then looked down upon this earth
And saw your tired face.
He put his arms around you
And lifted you to rest.
God's garden must be beautiful
Because it has our Daddy,
And He only takes the best.

Walker program gets LEPA axe

by David Moore

The Shelby County Youth Aid Bureau was denied grant funding by LEPA (Law Enforcement Planning Agency) for the 1980 fiscal year.

Without the grant, the seven year old bureau will likely go out of operation after next month. The bureau was designed to counsel youth in trouble with the law and keep them out of the court system.

The rejection was handed down September 19 by the Executive Committee of the agency's State Supervisory Board which met in Dothan.

LEPA grants administrator Ed Haslam, in Montgomery, told the Reporter, "The primary concern of the Board was that the only counselor (at the Youth Aid Bureau) had been terminated."

Executive director of the Youth Aid Bureau, former Shelby County Sheriff C.P. "Red" Walker said, "There was some misunderstanding down there (Dothan). We're going to appeal it (the grant denial) at the next meeting."

Walker explained that bureau counselor Kay Watts was "phased out" of her position on September 14 because she was looking for an out of state job. But the bureau, he pointed out, still has a community service officer, Linda Izard, who functions in a similar capacity.

Kay Watts, however, told the Reporter, "It was my understanding that I was being phased-out because the program was being closed."

Watts said that it was no secret that she had out "feelers" for another job, but that she was "shocked" when she found out that she was being phased-out so soon.

The Youth Aid Bureau requested two grants from LEPA. A $12,744 grant (against a 20% match by the bureau) was to pay for the community service worker. The second grant, requesting $32,953 (against a 60% bureau match) was to have covered general expenses, including Watts' salary and

Montevallo budgets $½ million

A balanced general fund budget, totaling $457,900, was hammered out in a three hour session Monday night, by Montevallo's City Council.

Representing the largest budget in the city's history, the document was two and a half months in the making by the council's finance committee.

The city's largest anticipated source of revenue continues to be the sales tax with projected revenues of $142,000. Other anticipated major revenues include privilege licenses, $78,000; fines and costs, $45,000; property tax and gasoline tax $25,000 each; gasoline excise tax, $20,000; beer tax, $18,000; tobacco tax $11,000 and auto licenses $10,000.

Other sources of revenue are expected to bring in less than $10,000 each.

The 1979-80 budget goes into effect October 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year.

The new budget includes very few increases for the coming year, except in the area of wages and salaries. An across the board ten percent increase in wages is included in the budget. It should be noted, however, that five percent of each wage earner's pay will go directly into the state retirement system. The city will match these funds.

items anticipated for next year is operation of the police department with $36,820 earmarked for law enforcement. Other disbursements will include garbage service, $30,0o0; Fire Department expense $23,698; appropriation for the public schools, $20,000; street department expense $22,000; employee retirement, $18,000; Park and Recreation expense $14,850; Workmen's Compensation, $7,950; ambulance fee, $4,000 and miscellaneous lesser items.

In commenting on next year's budget, Mayor Ralph Sears complimented the city's finance committee for preparing a balanced budget and went on to say, "I hope you were not too optimistic in projecting next year's revenues. If it were not for the prospects of a possible recession, I'd say it is a very realistic budget." Chairman of the budget committee is J.A. brown.

The city's gas distribution system, water and sewer board are separate entities and are not included in the general fund budget.

In other action Monday night, council members authorized City Clerk Don Hughes to employ the engineering firm Engineers of the South as special consultants to the city's gas system. Council members also authorized Hughes to alter the contract garbage pickup fees to cover the cost of garbage collection in the city's business section.

Council members elected Mrs. Essie Leach to the city's Library Board and nominated Mrs. Ann Milford for membership on the board.

Among visitors attending Monday night's meeting were Dudley Pendleton, Montevallo

Veteran retires

Bill Clark, Director of Veterans Affairs for Shelby County for the past 16 years (right) receives a certificate of merit from Roy C. McGinnis, Director of the Alabama Department of Veterans Affairs in ceremonies last week. The plaque is "in appreciation for service rendered to veterans and their dependents in the state of Alabama." Personnel Board men nominated Former Shelby County Commissioner Doug Ballard, Sr., of Montevallo, was the Commission's unanimous choice for a position on the Shelby County Law Enforcement Personnel Board.

The Board is being newly constituted following a legislative act this summer. The law establishing the previous board was declared unconstitutional last winter.

Under the new law the board will consist of five persons.

The legislative delegation has named Teddy Brasher and Grady Cox and Shelby County deputies have named Teddy Brasher and Grady Cox and Shelby County deputies have named Mickey Johnson as their representatives.

Sheriff Buddy Glasgow is empowered under the act to name one person to the board, but he has not yet announced his choice.

Bill aims at drugs

State Senator Lister Hill Proctor of Sylacauga has pre-filed a bill in the Alabama Senate aimed at prosecuting those big drug dealers who are bringing large amounts of marijuana, cocaine, morphine, heroin and other related drugs into Alabama for resale.

According to State and Federal law enforcement officials huge amounts of illegal drugs are entering the state through the Mobile Bay area and by airplanes landing at small airports located across the state.

Senator Proctor stated, "this bill is designed to help law enforcement officials by drying up the sources of the drugs now being sold throughout the state. Drugs are apparently so easy to buy that our local law enforcement officers do not have the manpower and other resources to stamp it out at the local level."

The bill, if passed in the next session of the Legislature in February, carries mandatory minimum sentences of up to 25 years and a $500,000 fine in certain instances. The bill forbids suspended sentences and also requires a violator to serve the minimum sentence without parole.

"This bill will give Alabama one of the strongest laws in the nation to deal with those who are making millions of dollars off of our citizens by trafficking in large amounts of drugs. Once we put a few of these people in the penitentiary under this law word will spread that the people of Alabama will not allow its state to become a dumping ground for these drug peddlers," the Senator concluded.

Wrong place, wrong time

The logging truck was straddling the tracks, waiting for a green light at the Alabaster intersection of 119 and 31 when the Northbound train rounded the bend. Royce Price, 33, of Green Pond, jumped for his life. The L&N locomotive, engineered by H.L. Smith of Birmingham, plowed into Price's truck at 23 mph, dragging it about 30 yards down the tracks. The accident, occurred Tuesday at 8:40 a.m., injured no one and did minimal damage to the engine. But the smashed truck was estimated to be a $35,000 loss. (Photo by Moore)

'Re-sign sheets or lose exemptions'

All property owners in Shelby County and in Alabama must reclaim any exemptions that they are now claiming on their property.

A notice to this effect was received by Shelby County Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds this week from the State Department of Revenue.

Mrs. Reynolds said, "This means that between October 1, 1979 and December 31, 1979, all property owners must come to the assessor's office and sign their assessment sheets for homestead exemption. This applies to the disabled, to people over age 65, to industrial exemptions, and to blind, mute and deaf exemptions."

She said that it is the concensus of all concerned that when Amendment One was passed into law in November, 1978, all previous laws governing ad valorem taxes and exemptions were done away with.

Mrs. Reynolds said she will schedule visits to various parts of Shelby County in the next three months as a convenience for citizens to sign their exemption sheets. Her schedule will be announced at a later date.

Garbage collector tells woes to council

by Bert Seaman

While it's usually the customer who complains about the garbage service, the shoe was on the other foot at Monday night's Wilsonville Council meeting.

Members of the panel listened to their garbage collector, Bobby Joe Fortner, tell of being bitten by a dog and having garbage sacks break open because brick bats had been placed in the bottom.

During the month he's been working fulltime at the job, Fortner said he had also observed that residents put their garbage out 2-3 days before he picks up, giving dogs an opportunity to knock over the cans and scatter the contents.

Councilwoman Dot Scruggs reminded the panel that letters had been sent to residents informing them to pick up days. She also called attention to an ordinance stating that 20 gallon metal cans with lids be used.

Fortner was told not to pick up garbage that had been scattered and Mayor Austin Mitchell asked the garbage collector to let him know at which residences heavy objects had been placed in the bottoms of garbage bags.

The Mayor said he would contact the people who lived in the homes to see if there were any good reason for the action.

He also promised to call the owner of the dog who had attacked Fortner to ask that the animal be tied. It was suggested that the garbage collector carry a can of mace.

Saying he had tried that tactic, Fortner reported it had no effect on the dogs he had used it on. It was suggested that something stronger be found for the garbage collector to use.

In other business, the panel voted to give $1,500 to the Wilsonville Elementary School. The donation was $500 less than principal Rosemary Liveoaks had asked for, but the council agreed the city was not able financially to give the full amount.

Liveoaks, who was accompanied to the meeting by school trustee Paul Roberson, was told that the money would probably be handed over $500 at a time.

After making the donation to the school, the Mayor remarked, "We do as well or better than any town in Shelby County on a per pupil basis."

The new school principal told the council that the money would be used strictly for instructional purposes such as purchasing workbooks. She noted that prorationing would probably take a big chunk out of the amount coming to the school next year.

County Republicans elect Dewey to head up party efforts for 1980

The Shelby County Republican Party began gearing up for next year's election by electing 14 representatives and four officers to the county committe. The elections were held Thursday night in a meeting at Pelham City Hall attended by 25 people.

"This is the first step and we've done a very good job," newly elected chairman Bob Dewey of Pelham told the Reporter after the meeting. "But we've got a lot of work in front of us."

Dewey replaced Ray Ledbetter as the county's Republican Party chairman. David Bradley of Pelham was elected vice-chairman, Linda Dewey was elected secretary, and Mary Martin Dodd of Pelham, was elected treasurer.

Dewey said his main objectives were to give the party direction and unity and to strengthen it on the local level.

Danny Cooper of Montevallo gave a talk on the organizational structure of the party, emphasizing that "the Republican Party at the local level is you."

Dewey, pointing out that Ford carried the county in 1976, said that Shelby County could be a "swing county" in the 1980 elections.

He said he has been in contact with all the Republican presidential aspirants for next year and that he feels confident that one of them will be available for a fund raising dinner here. Senator Howard Baker and former Ambassador George Bush were the two he said that appeared most interested in the dinner at this point.

If one of the candidates came to the county he would bring local Republicans "out of the woodwork," Dewey said.

John Sellers, Young Republican State Chairman, addressed the group about his interest in starting a Shelby County Young Republicans' Club.

The 14 beat representatives elected were Dr. Jesse Jackson, Dr. Justin Fuller, Wallace Watson, Scott McNellie, S.D. Williamson, Phillip Beasly, Dot Walton, Cherre Alford, Larry Branning, James Dennis, Paula Wills, Laura Willis, Ray Ledbetter, and Mrs. L.W. Kendrick.

At the end of the meeting, Dewey told the Reporter that the turn out was "not very bad" for a first night, and the fact that it was storminng.

The next meeting of the county Republicans will be held Tuesday, Oct. 9, at 7:30, and is tenatively scheduled at Pelham City Hall. The main business of the meeting will be to establish bylaws, candidate recruitment, finance and publicity committees.

UM gets HEW grant to aid special students

Congressman Richara Shelby has announced a grant of $76,918 for the University of Montevallo to be used to assist certain students in postsecondary education.

The money will be used to assist low-income, educationally or culturally deprived, physically handicapped and or students with limited English-speaking ability who are enrolled or accepted for enrollment at Montevallo.

The grant is from the United States Department of Health Education and Welfare's Office of Education.

"It is my pleasure to be able to announce this most worth-while grant for Montevallo," Congressman Shelby said.

"This money will go to help many students who otherwise might not have a chance to continue their education continue to Montevallo."

Walker's $22,000 salary, LEPA officials reported.

The appeal will be heard in either late October or November, Haslam said. But, he pointed out, that meeting is tenative, pending discussions in Congress over the possibility of cutting LEPA appropriations anywhere from 23%-50%.

Haslam indicated that a cut of 50%, which would amount to about $200 million, would leave barely enough money to run LEPA's Washington office, and may cause the program to be dropped completely.

If LEPA grants are available in 1980, he said, they would probably all be less than originally requested.

Walker said that since the appropriations had not yet come from Congress, the bureau would have had to operate through October without any funds even if the grant requests had been awarded.

"If Congress appropriates the money, we'll appeal. Until then we'll just have to operate free-gratis," Walker said.

Writer stresses

Education should consider individuality

Letter to Editor:

This is a reply to the editorial of Marcia Sears in the September 20, 1979 issue of the Shelby County Reporter. I do not wish to take issue with Mrs. Sears' opinion, but simply express an opposinng view point.

I really do not believe that there was or is a great variation in what is taught from one school to another. I know this to be true in the area of required subjects. Each school, not only in this county, but state wide, must teach the required subjects. However, there may be a variance in electives taught. This variation in electives is due largely to the number of teachers employed at each school and the enrollment of said school.

The statement that many teachers teach what they want when they want is not true. At times we are forced to teach subjects at different times because of a shortage of books and materials. This is neither the fault nor the desire of the individual teacher. As far as teacher style is concerned, I am sure it varies. Teachers, just as all people, are individuals. One will not teach in the same manner or style as another. What works for one teacher may not work for another. All the teachers in this county cannot be computerized and programmed to think, speak, and act alike. Not only must the individuality and style of the teacher be considered, but that of the student must also be taken into consideration.

This brings us to the next point. Things cannot be standardized from school to school and community to community. As you well know, the socioeconomic and educational level of communities vary greatly in this county. Students in one area have different problems and needs than do students in other areas. And as you pointed out, we must consider the students first. Not the system, not the county-wide curriculum, but the student. By standardizinng, computerizing, and programming the entire county into one strict set of rules and curriculum you are not meeting the needs of the individual student.

As you said, this problem can be worked out, but both sides must be willing to listen and compromise. This willingness does not exist at this time.

Under The Courthouse Dome

The Shelby County Commission heard budget requests from a few county departments at its meeting Monday, but the bulk of requests will come in at a continued meeting on Thursday.

The Board of Education, represented by Vern Davis and Wylodine Hill asked the county to provide the following assistance;

Utilities: $7560; Telephone, $6000; $1200 office and postage; $3100 janitorial work and supplies.

In addition to the usual county funding education forces asked for several items necessary because of the move of the central offices to the former elementary school. Given first priority was $2,030 for filing cabinets, desk, typewriter and transcriber. Next on their list was $1200 for window coverings, followed by $2800 for floor and radiator coverings. The department would also like $1200 to air condition the cafetorium and $2700 to remodel the entrance.

Mrs. Sue Tedford and Mrs. Mary Farmer represented the Aging and RSVP programs. Mrs. Farmer reported there are 226 volunteers in RSVP providing assistance of all kinds to the public. They maintain volunteers at the hospital, the nursing home, the courthouse and other places.

Bill Tucker, county Civil Defense Director asked that the Commission establish an airport commission to oversee the county airport. He said if they named him, he would ask for no additional salary for the first year.

He reported that the water at the airport is unsafe for drinking. The drinking fountains have been closed, but water is still used for the bathrooms. He said it would take $1,250 for a chlorination and filter system on the well. He also suggested future tying on with the Calera water system when the system expands nearer to the airport.

Tunstall Perry of the Birmingham Bond firm of Berney Perry Company, appeared at the Commission meeting with Columbiana banker J.I. Harrison to formalize the bonding agreements that were made a month ago. The county's major debts were re-funded, enabling the county to realize $200,000 more per year and to allow for the county highway department to match certain federal funds.

Bids for some 31 cases of confiscated beer were read at the Commission meeting. The group accepted the high bid of $173 from Holcombe Shell Handi-Mart of Columbiana. The beer was confiscated by the county when it did not bear a county tax stamp.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

I guess Tag Elliott just has to be the perfect host on a dove hunt. And have you noticed how easy it is to hit 'em in the tail once you have reached seventy. And how many more of them are flying with their hearts shot out now.

It's true that a guy's reflexes slow down somewhere between seventeen and seventy, but nobody tells you when. The same as noon tells you that doves fly about as fast now as they always did, even though, if you are past sixty, you are likely shooting ten yards behind them.

I still say that noon can tell, once the doves are on the table,, which ones were shot flying and which ones sitting in trees.

Did you notice last time how the guy down the field always hollered when one was flying, but few tell you whether he is coming up behind you or in front or on the side. And that little cloud that started out at one minute after twelve about the size of a loaf of bread was, two minutes before sundown, still about the size of a loaf of bread.

That the fellows shooting the field half a quarter away always make twice as much noise as your crowd makes. And usually turn up with less birds.

That nowhere on God's earth is the sun hotter than in a corn field in September with a bright October sky overhead that shouldn't have come along for another month but did.

That there's always a cat-bird seat on every dove hunt, and the empty shells piled around it are usually ankle deep. And that nowhere do men have more fun than men have with men on a dove hunt.

And is it really true that the gun makes the difference. That a guy who never shot at a dove before can kill a sack full if they'll let him shoot the old dove hunter's gun.

But do the guys on the east side of the field, looking into the sun, have an advantage on the guys on the west side; so that a guy, who knows a lick about dove hunting, will always pick out a spot with the sun in his eyes.

It's always easier to hit one flying over a thicket where the grass and stuff is straddle deep to a tall Indian than in an open spot where you could see him fluttering forty feet away. I knew a guy once who killed twelve flying over a thicket and missed twenty flying over an open field. And when it came time to go home he had two doves and seventeen bumps on his noggin where the yellow jackets had popped him.

And if you go, and stay till the end, the chances are you'll see the sun set a bundle of clouds on fire, and it'll probably be the prettiest sight you'll see all fall. At least, until November comes along and paints the leaves outside.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert
Seaman

by Bert Seaman

Trips to the ocean, for me,, have been few and far between. So a couple of weekends ago, I was really looking forward to an outing my daughter had planned for us in Florida.

Guess what happened? If you said Hurricane Frederic, you were right!

Fortunately, the storm didn't damage the cabin where we were going to stay. So, when the next weekend rolled around, we were off.

Half way to our destination it occurred to my daughter that she had forgotten the key to our little house on the beach. But even that didn't dampen our bouyant spirits.

And it's a good thing we hadn't wasted any time worrying because when we arrived we found a window unlocked that we managed to open and crawl through.

After unpakcing and getting a bite to eat, it was bedtime. I thought it would be great to go to sleep with the sound of the ocean roaring in my ears, so I picked out a bed on the enclosed porch.

Despite my daughter's advice to bed down inside, I insisted on staying where I was.

She pointed out that on previous occasions when it had rained, water had been blown through the louvered windows all over the porch. Just to be on the safe side, although I didn't expect a drop of rain to fall, I moved my bed as far away from the windows as possible.

I couldn't get over the lovely roaring sound the ocean made. And in no time at ll, I was lulled off to dreamland.

Sometime during the night, I had the sensation the ocean had crept up to my bed because I could feel spray being blown over me. Suddenly I realized it was storming and that my daughter's prediction of the entire porch being soaked was coming true.

I grabbed my bottom sheet, which was the only thing not completely drenched and gropped my way indoors. The couch seemed to be my best bet so I settled down there for the remainder of the night.

In my dampened state, however, it was a bit difficult to do much moving on that plastic covered piece of furniture. I found myself sticking. So, with my semi damp sheet over me, I lay motionless till dawn.

It took me a while to get used to the idle life of a beach comber. But once I got my teeth into idly making my way up and down the beach looking for shells, I could hardly be coaxed indoors even to eat.

And I looked forward each day to challenging the waves to knock me down. You know, I never realized you could have so much fun in the sea and sun.

But by the time I'd really gotten the hang of how to have a good time, the weekend was over.

As we went out the front door, we hoped no one else would find the window with the broken lock. Then we realized the door wasn't locking.

Although we fiddled with it for 15-20 minutes, it stubbornly refused to do what it was supposed to. Oh well, if the next guests forget the key they won't have any problem getting in. I just hope nobody else tries the door first.

The next time we go there, I want to find everything the same way we left it - even my bed on the porch.

Cattle rustlers strike twice in county

by David Moore

The second incident of cattle rustling in three weeks occured last weekend.

Sheriff's investigator Reed Smith reported that four calves were stolen from the property of James D. Rasco of Four Mile, between 7 p.m. Saturday, and 7 a.m. Sunday. Rasco was not available for a description of cattle.

The first incident of rustling occured between Labor Day and September 8 at the farm of Mrs. C.C. Broadhead of Wilton.

Mrs. Broadhead said five brood cows and five yearlings were stolen from her farm sometime during that period. The cows had no brand markings, but were described as red with white faces.

A $100 reward has been offered by Mrs. Broadhead in connection with the theft. The cows were valued at $5,000, she said.

No arrests have been made in either of the cases, but Smith reports that the Sheriff's department is still checking leads. Smith said that at this time he saw no point in making a connection between the two cases.

Morris Cousins of the Alabama Cattle Theft Department is also working the case.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"The Question of Degrees of Punishment"

Just as there will be degrees of reward to those who go to heaven, those who are so unfortunate to go to eternal destruction in hell will experience degrees of punishment. Of course, this does not minimize the fact that the fires of hell will be terrible for anyone. The rich man lifted up his eyes in hell. (Luke 16) "And death and Hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death, even the lake of fire." (Revelation 20:14)

Christ indicated degrees of punishment when He stated, "But I say unto you, it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon in the day of judgment, than for you." (Matthew 11:22) Christ did His mighty works in Chorazin and Bethsaida, yet they did not repent. Had His works been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented, Christ stated. Christ also taught degrees of punishment in hell in Luke 12:42-48, when He stated that the person who knows the Lord's will and does not obey will be beaten with more stripes than the persons who does not know the Lord's will and does things worthy of stripes.

Just as some will have a greater capacity to enjoy heaven, some experience greater punishment than others because of their memory of opportunities they spurned when they could have responded to the Lord's invitation to become Christians.

Highway worker injured on job near Chelsea

Charles Payne was injured Monday while working with a Shelby County Highway Department crew repairing the Wideman Bridge near New Bethesda Church, south of Chelsea.

Payne suffered injuries involving his head, his eyes and both legs. He was taken to Shelby Memorial Hospital.

The county crew was working on the bridge which was deflected during last spring's floods. The accident involved a pile driving unit.

Wilsonville courts host tennis tourney

Although bad weather delayed the completion of the Wilsonville Boys' Classic Tennis Tournament, the final game was played Monday night.

Everett Scruggs, who was in charge of the event, presented the first place trophy to Don Braxton. Ricky Johnson claimed the second place award.

Other first round winners were Gary Ingram and Lyle Robinson. Competitors also included Steve Halford, Brian Gower and Eddie Haywood.

The tournament was the first to be played on the community's recently repaved court. The laykold surface was put down at a cost of $16,700.

Tennis buffs can also use the courts at night now since the town council had Halide lights put up as part of the renovation project.

Tennis champ

Don Braxton (l) was the winner of Wilsonville's Boys' Classic Tennis Tournament. Everett Scruggs presented a trophy to him and second place finisher Ricky Johnson. Trophies were also presented to first round finishers Gary Ingram and Lyle Robinson.

New librarian hired

Shelby County Library has a new assistant director. Erin Kellen, 25, of Mobile began her duties in Columbiana Monday morning.

Ms. Kellen is employed on a federal grant from the Library Service and Construction Act, which will pay her salary through January. Library director Pam Williams says she hopes the county commission will pick up Ms. Kellen's salary after January.

Ms. Kellen's duties include planning and programs for the community libraries, community services, publicity and a survey of reader interest in the county.

"One of my main objectives as assistant director will be to make the residents of Shelby County aware of what this library can do for them, and to encourage them to make use of it," she told the Reporter.

Ms. Kellen comes to Shelby County from the Fairhope Library near Mobile. She did her undergraduate work at the University of South Alabama, and graduated with a Masters of Library Services from the University of Alabama in August.

DID YOU KNOW?

Today's residential customer is using almost one and a half times more electricity than in 1969.

Because of increased usage, the power bill is taking a bigger chunk out of the average family income in Alabama. In 1969, 1.88% of the family income was used to pay for electricity. In 1978, it rose to 2.67%. That's because you are using more electricity. For example, in 1969, our average residential customer used 7,967 kilowatt-hours. In 1978, that same customer used 10,939 kilowatt-hours.

President asks Sarrises to White House event

The people who live in the White House aren't much different from the "folks next door."

At least that was the observation of a Shelby County couple who met President Jimmy Carter and his wife last week.

John and Catherine Sarris were invited to attend a reception at the White House Sept. 18, to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the enthronement of the Archbishop of the Greek Orthodox Church in North and South America.

The invitation to attend the event where the Most Reverend Iakovos was honored, was extended to the Sarrises by an old friend, Lt. Governor George McMillan.

According to Sarris, the Lt. Governor had been asked by Washington to submit the names of several people he knew in Alabama who were of Greek ancestry.

Sarris and his wife, along with another couple from their church, Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Cathedral in Birmingham, were among the approximately 600 people who attended the affair.

Most of the ground floor of the White House was open during the event, they reported and musical entertainment was provided in several of the rooms.

Following his introduction of the Archbishop, the President and Mrs. Carter greeted guests in a receiving line.

Vice President Walter Mondale was also there.

During their five days in the nation's capital, the Sarrises visited friends, toured the State Department, the new FBI Building and the Air and Space Center at the Smithsonian Institute.

Sarris raises orchids for the commercial market and he hopes to present one to Mrs. Carter if she comes to Birmingham next month as planned.

His home and business are on Hwy. 119, between Alabaster and Montevallo.

Valley budget tops $94,000

The main topic of discussion at Valley Elementary's first PTO meeting of the year was the budget.

Valley principal Dr. Norma Rogers revealed that the school's budget for the year is an estimated $94,000.

Of that amount, she said $22,974.50 would come from the PTO. Fifteen thousand and nine hundred dollars for janitorial services is expected from the county, and $4,000 for personnel is expected from the state.

The rest of the money, Dr. Rogers said, will come from parents' donations, the City of Pelham and sale of Valley T-shirts left over from last year.

Dr. Rogers reported that Valley enrollment for the year is 1100 students.

PTO president Emily Fulmer explained that the $11,974.50 budget would cover such articles for the school as shades for windows facing east, a projector for the library, duplicating machine, water fountain, art and library supplies and the news letter.

Seven thousand, five hundred dollars was budgeted for workbooks to be provided to each student.

Mrs. Fulmer urged those in attendance to support the one cent sales tax which will come up for a vote in March. The tax, she said, would help support the schools.

Dr. Rogers introduced staff and teachers to the parents who attended the meeting. Attendance was reported to be mediocre.

The PTO's fund raising candle sale is currently underway at the school, and a carnival is planned for October.

Rochesters entertain at after rehearsal party

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Rochester were hosts at the after-rehearsal party Friday night, honoring their son Joel, and his fiancee Jerrie Creed, who were married the following day at Oak Mountain Baptist Church in Pelham.

The party was held at the Rochesters' home on Crestview Drive in Montevallo.

Alabaster group spoofs fashions

Everyone knows that mini skirts are out. But just to have a little fun at their meeting last Tuesday, members of Epsilon Rho Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority held an unfashionable fashion show.

Mini skirts and other unstylish garments were modeled by members of the sorority. Then Carol Weaver of Weavers Fabrics in Alabaster, talked about the latest styles on the fashion scene.

A potluck supper, which served as a birthday celebration for members born during the months of June, July and August, preceded the program.

The meeting was held at the Alabaster home of Toula Greenwood and Roberta Stephens was in charge of the program.

DON'T OVERLOOK OCCASIONAL FURNITURE

There are times when rooms are furnished nicely but they lack "something special", some special pieces of furniture that not only make a room look outstanding but also serve a needed purpose.

That's what so-called occasional furniture can do for you. And by occasional furniture we mean things like curios, etageres, bookcases, secretaries, consoles, portable bars, cabinets, odd chests and any number of other pieces.

This kind of furniture can be a wonderful addition to a room from both a beauty and a practical standpoint.

On the beauty side, such a piece can bring a decorator touch to a room and provide attractive variety.

On the practical side, a piece of occasional furniture can work hard for you, serving a useful function.

One other advantage of occasional furniture is that no matter what kind of basic furniture you have, a piece of occasional furniture in any style can not only fit in, but enhance the overall appearance.

The choice of occasional furniture is practically limitless, and we invite you to come in and browse--and see a wonderful selection of furniture here.

Kiwanians hear program on Hall of Fame Bowl

"We're in there trying for an SEC team," John Woods, Jr. of the Hall of Fame Bowl told North Shelby Kiwanis at their Tuesday meeting.

Woods, who lives in Inverness and is a member of that area's Lions Club, gave a brief talk on the bowl game, followed by a 17 minute film showing what goes on behind the scenes in bringing a post season bowl game to Legion Field in Birmingham.

This year's game will be played December 29. The earliest time selection of teams can be made is November 17, Wood said.

Wood indicated to the group that the new game date should increase the attendance of the game which for the past two years has been in the mid-30,000's. This year's advance sale of 20,000 tickets is up 7500 from last year.

Eleven North Shelby Kiwanians and two guests attended the Tuesday morning breakfast meeting at the Double LL Restaurant in Riverchase. Eight members were recognized for perfect attendance during the past month.

Patrons air condition school

When students returned to school in Wilsonville this year, they found that their formerly hot classrooms were cool and comfortable.

Every room in the elementary school is now air conditioned due to a community fund raising effort.

Jim Lomenick served as chairman of the drive which succeeded in raising $7,000.

During the past year, members of the PTA, and other groups in the community have held donut sales, rummage sales and other events to raise funds. Donations were also received from merchants and residents of surrounding communities.

School principal Rosemary Liveoak noted that several businesses and organizations had contributed time and labor in getting the equipment installed.

She named the PTA, Civitan Club, King Electrical Contracting Company of Columbiana and Ingram Construction Company of Wilsonville.

School patrons are now trying to raise funds for a dishwasher in the school cafeteria. A flea market and trade day will be held at the school this Saturday from 8 a.m.-10 p.m.

Entertainment will include hot air balloon rides, disco dancing, horse rides and bicycle races.

Catfish hunter

John Fitts (l) and Sherrie Young hold up the giant catfish Fitts caught September 20, fishing from the right bank of the Coosa just above Lay Dam, using shad for bait. Fitts, who was accompanied by fishing buddies, Gene Stoudemire, Percy Postell and Frankie Chapell, estimated the fish's weight at 40 lbs. after it overloaded his 25-lb. scale. Needless to say, Fitts claims to have caught much bigger fish on as little as 20 lb. test line. "It's all in knowing how to set the drag," he said.

Wilsonville to update laws

Ordinances for the town need updating, Mayor Austin Mitchell told members of the Wilsonville town council Monday night.

But the work won't be done by the town's longtime attorney Karl Harrison. Instead, it will be Pelham attorney and councilman John Tanner who attends to the matter.

At the third meeting after he spoke with the panel, the recent law school graduate was selected as the town's new attorney. There had been some dissatisfaction among council members with the length of time it usually took Harrison to handle their legal work.

The only vote for the Columbiana attorney was registered by Sherell McClure who commended Harrison for being "thorough." Councilwomen Scruggs and Mildred Jobe voted for Tanner and Councilman J. E. Bryant abstained.

Tanner's resume was read at the last council meeting but no action was taken as two members were absent. It was suggested that the vote be put off again Monday due to the absence of Bill Bob Ray. However, Scruggs urged a vote be taken saying the matter had been put off long enough.

Besides updating ordinances, the town is also planning to update their schedule of business license fees. At the last meeting, schedules from Vincent, Columbiana, Alabaster and Pelham were handed out for members to study. Another list was given out Monday; it was from Childersburg.

Ad valorem taxes were mentioned and the panel agreed it would be a good idea for Tax Assesor Bobbie Reynolds to attend a meeting next July and explain the situation as it would affect the town then.

"It will cost us so much more to operate," noted the Mayor, "since taxes have been going up." A one cent sales tax was levied in the town several years ago and residents now pay a total of five cents.

Cheerleading fundamentals will be taught at MHS on Wednesdays at 3 p.m.

Slimnastics classes will be held on Tuesdays beginnning at 5:30, in the new recreation building in Orr Park, Knight reported.

Those who would like to play dominoes or bridge or who would like to take up quilting are asked to call the rec. building, 665-7143 or Montevallo City Hall, 665-2555, and a time will be arranged. Between 10 and 12 persons are needed in order for a class to be held.

So far, Knight said, 12 people have signed up to take karate which will be taught Monday and Wednesday at 7 p.m. But at least 18 must enroll, he said, in order for the class to be put on.

A small fee is being charged for the class, Knight noted. If enough interest is shown, the class will be held in the new rec building.

To register for any of these activities, Knight says to call either the rec building or city hall.

Restaurants now rated on point system

If you are one of the many people in Shelby County who eat out very often you may notice something different in your favorite restaurant soon. The Health Department is no longer rating the restaurants and cafes with A, B, or C's.

The Alabama State Board of Health has adopted new Food Regulations which went into effect on August 14. Adoption of these regulations brings Alabama more in line with other states in respect to health requirements for restaurants and other food service facilities.

The biggest change the public will see is the new inspection sheet. The new sheet is smaller and the grading system is no longer based on A, B, or C. From now on the scores will be based on 100 points. The higher the score, the better the establishment. One-hundred would be a perfect score.

Under the new regulations, emphasis has been placed more on crucial items such as food protection and sanitizing procedures rather than items of appearance. For example, violations of food protection practices carries a 5 point demerit while unclean floors and walls carry only one demerit.

For those who wish to compare the old method with the new, the scores relate in this manner: 100-95 was an "A", 94-88 was a "B" and 87-70 was a "C". Under the new regulations, letters cannot be posted as grades. Score received by the establishments will be written in the upper right hand corner of the new sheet and also will be written in a large print across face of the sheet. The inspection sheets will be posted in a conspicuous place as before.

Continuous violations or a score of less than 70 will result in the establishment's being placed on legal notice. Immediate action is required to correct those items endangering the public health. Failure of the establishment to correct those items will result in the loss of the establishment's permit to operate.

The Shelby County Health Department received many favorable comments on the previous grading system and hopes this new system of grading will be as well accepted. It will be several weeks before all the restaurants will have been inspected under the new regulations.

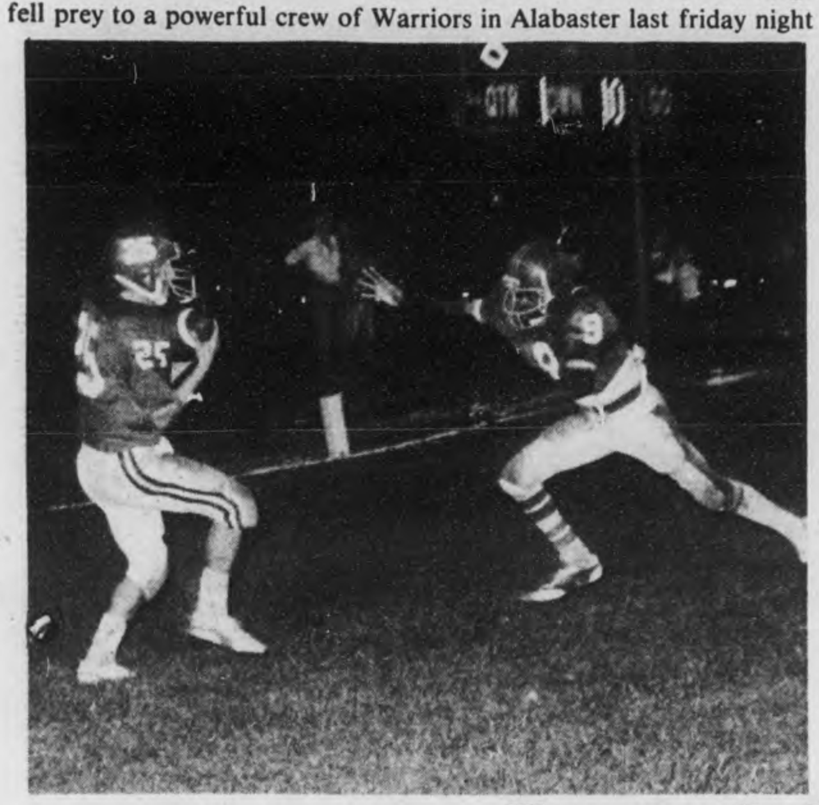
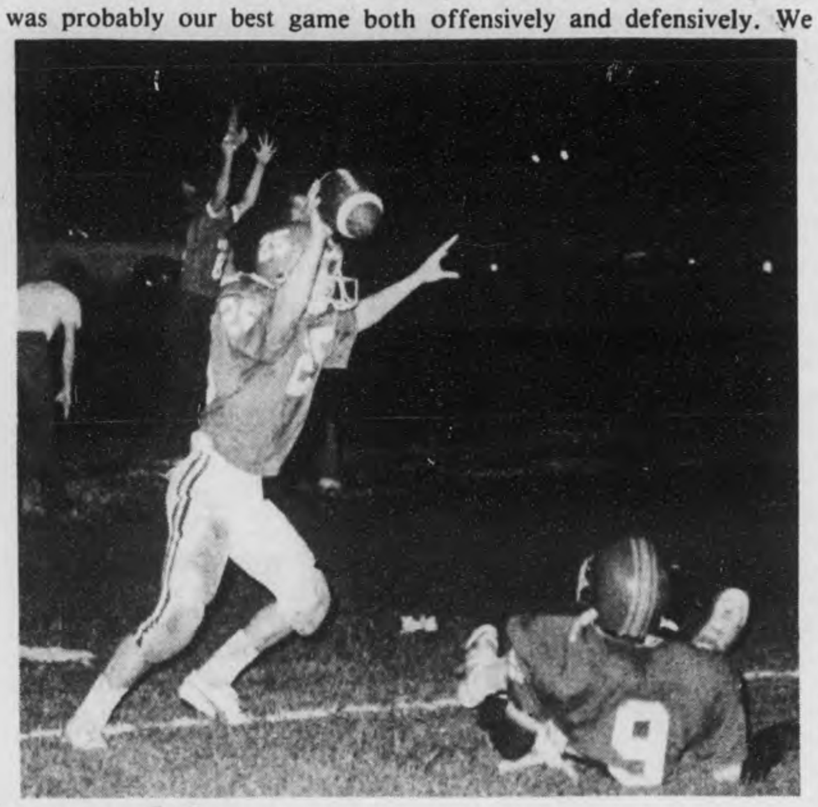
Thompson nails Montevallo 35 to 0

by Richard Crosby

Thompson's Warriors remain undefeated. The Montevallo Bulldogs fell prey to a powerful crew of Warriors in Alabaster last friday night by a score of 35 to 0.

"We played consistent" coach Larry Simmons said of his team. "It was probably our best game both offensively and defensively. We blocked better on the offensive line and our backs ran the ball better than they have.





The game clinching touchdown

Thompson's Steve Cutler (24) brings down quarterback David Cofer's pass in the third quarter while Montevallo defender Rance gaddis helplessly dives to knock the ball away. In the sequence above, Cutler wraps his arms around the ball as Gaddis dives, and then holds the ball aloft to the officials signal of a touchdown as Gaddis hits the ground. (photos by Crosby)

"This game kind of got us over the hump" the Warrior coach stated. "Two of the last three games we had to score late to win and I think last week's game kind of got us over that."

Thompson combined a wall-like defense with a great VEER offense in downing the Bulldogs.

In the first quarter, the Warriors drove 72 yards in 8 plays for the first touchdown. Senior quarterback David Cofer sprinted the final five yards for the score. Steve Smitherman kicked his first of five PATs making the score 7-0.

Middle ways through the second quarter the Warriors again ground out a drive to the endzone. This time, Rod McDade bulled his way into the endzone with a five yard burst. The drive covered 74 yards and included 12 plays. Smitherman added the PAT with 7:15 remaining in the half to make the score 14 to 0.

The Warriors returned from the dressing room with even more fire in their eyes. After receiving the kickoff, Thompson put the ball in play at its own 26 yard line. On the first play, Randy Anderson scampered 64 yards for a touchdown. Smitherman's PAT made the score 21 to 0 with only 34 seconds of the second half gone.

Montevallo pulled together and started a drive of its own. Using the VEER and getting some key blocks, the bulldogs moved the ball to within striking distance on the nine yard line. On the option play, quarterback Steve Melsoni was hit as he pitched the ball. Fullback Clay Cardone tipped the high pitch up in the air where defensive end Pete Lint for Thompson picked off the airborne pigskin and raced 91 yards for a touchdown. Smitherman again toed true.

Downcast but still spirited Montevallo High cheerleader.

Montevallo still had fight left but another fumble ended any chance of a comeback. On the last play of the third quarter, the Bulldogs fumbled on a Statue of liberty play on the Thompson 14 yard line. On Thompson's first play, Cofer passed to Steve Cutler for the touchdown. Smitherman added his fifth PAT of the night.

Coach Richard Gilliam said of the game, "Several areas of our offense showed much improvement. We switched nine of 11 starters.

"I don't believe our players are down on themselves and I'm not either. Our first Area game is this week and we still have a very good chance of making a respectable showing."

Montevallo faces Chelsea this Friday night in Montevallo while Thompson hosts Shelby County in Alabaster.

Wildcats remain undefeated

by Richard Crosby

Those Columbiana Wildcats are alive and still undefeated. The crew of Mark Bradley scored its third win of the year last Friday against B.B. Comer 27 to 18.

"I feel better about out offense" coach Bradley said. "We spent a lot of time on fundamentals for our offensive line and started doing a few things right instead of a lot of things not so well."

The Wildcats scored their first touchdown in the first quarter. After holding the Comer Tigers on Shelby County's 34 yard line, Goy Mitchell broke for a 64 yard run on the first offensive play of the game for the Wildcats. Two plays later, Daron Burns burst into the endzone after a two yard run. Dan Head booted the PAT making the score 7-0.

In the second quarter, Comer marched right back for a score of its own, but missed the conversion. Shelby County took the kickoff and marched 65 yards iun four plays for its next score. Freshman Arthur Johnson raced 43 yards for the score on his first rushing attempt of the night. Head added the PAT.

Comer was ready for the half to end though. The Tigers put together a drive of 50 yards that was sparked by a 36 yard pass to the two yard line. It took three plays for the visitors to finally break through the Wildcat defense for the score. Again the conversion failed as the half ended 14 to 12.

The start of the third quarter signaled another touchdown for the Wildcats. This time a 52 yard drive in seven plays added up for a touchdown. Guy Mitchell got his first score of the night with a two yard run. Head toed true for the PAT.

Comer fought back early in the fourth quarter with a touchdown that made the score 21 to 18, but Shelby County took advantage of field position and drove 38 yards for the game-clinching score. Arthur Johnson recorded his second score of the night with a one yard run. The PAT was blocked but the win was secure.

Turning in their best offensive performance of the year were: Steve Buchanan, Joe Tidmore, Billy Hughes, Donald Avery, Andy Upton, Garland Mitchell and Jamie Benson.

Guy Mitchell rushed for 134 yards to lead the offensive running. Johnson had 116, Burns 63 and Head 12.

This week the Wildcats travel to Thompson for the game of the unbeatens. (see separate story)

Thompson to host battle of unbeatens

by Richard Crosby

The battle of the year will be played in Alabaster this Friday night as the Thompson Warriors face the Shelby County High School Wildcats.

The game of the unbeatens will attract one of the largest crowds in modern history for a prep football game and you can be that if tickets were sold on a per-seat basis, the scalpers would be out in force.

Shelby County offers its 3-0 season record as proof of its prowness while the Warriors lay their 4-0 record on the line. The title bout for county supremency may well turn out as a game talked about for years.

Last season the Warriors barely excaped a Wildcat trap in Columbiana, winning 14 to 7. Wildcat fans still remember that late fourth quarter drive to the goal line that ended on the three yard line when James Kidd fumbled while fighting for that extra yard.

Columbiana fans say that fumbles won't enter into this year's game but, if they don't, the Wildcats may be in even deeper trouble.

Though the offensive line has improved greatly, they're not yet ready to meet a defense like the Warrior's. And, on the other side of the coin, Thompson has yet to meet a defense like that of Shelby County's.

Quarterbacks for both teams will have their hands full and both may well be the best in the county.

If Columbiana has an edge in the game, it comes from the offensive backfield. Three quality athletes handle the running chores for Shelby County and each is a threat in himself.

For Thompson, Randy Anderson and David Cofer team up as a great combination. Cofer has the mind and ability for running the VEER, while Anderson has the speed which will burn an opponent.

The worst part of the game will be that one team has to lose. Personnally, it appears as though Shelby County will have the silent bus ride home while the Warriors are whooping it up in Alabaster.

Vincent rips Cordova

by Richard Crosby

Vincent put the wood to Cordova last Friday night 34 to 0. The Jackets recorded their second straight win of the year as the defense played one of its best games.

"Our defense got stronger as the game went on" coach Gary Garrett said. The Jackets gave up 63 yards rushing the first quarter but held Cordova to minus one yard rushing in the third.

Vincent scoring started in the first period as Sidney Yowe galloped 25 yards for paydirt. Rodney Driggers added the PAT with 7:27 left in first quarter.

With 2:52 left in the half, Vincent capitalized on Cordova's bad snap for a punt. Putting the ball in play on the 25 yard line, Vincent required only three plays to make the touchdown. Dwight Spradley scored with an eight yard burst.

Driggers added the PAT making the score 14 to 0. Just ll seconds later, Vincent was in the endzone again, this time quarterback James Oden passed 30 yards to Tony Abbott. Driggers was again successful making the halftime score 21 to 0.

The third quarter opened with Vincent marching 70 yards for its fourth touchdown. Oden passed nine yards to Driggers for the six points. The conversion attempt was wide.

The final points of the game were recorded in the third quarter as Dexter McCrimmon intercepted a Cordova pass. Eric Kelley carried for the touchdown several plays later with a 15 yard run. Driggers added his fourth PAT of the night making the final score 34 to 0.

Individually, Sidney Yowe had 90 yards rushing on seven attempts. Dwight Spradley collected 43 yards and James Oden 45 yards. In pass receptions, Driggers caught three Oden passes for 25 yards and one touchdown.

Defensive leaders for the Yellowjackets were Dexter McCrimmon, David Brasher, Bobby Howard and David Abernathy.

This week is homecoming for Vincent with Munford as the football opponent. Last year Munford for the game 21 to 19.

Lions goose egg

Westminster 27-0

Briarwood Christian School boasts one of the most potent offensives an stingiest defensives in the county. The Lions posted their third consecutive win of the year last Saturday night and the defense has yet allowed an opponent to score.

The final count showed the Lion's with 27 points in the shutout.

Three apparent touchdowns were called back on penalties, a break which kept Westminster from being totally crushed. A 50 yard run by Mike Schor and 85 and 72 yard pass interceptions by Jim Nelson and Pat Trammell all were called back.

The scoring for points started in the first quarter as Jim Nelson recovered a fumble on the 33 yard line. Three plays later, Schor got six points on a nine yard run. In the second quarter, Peter Wright raced 94 yards up the middle of the field for the second touchdown.

Jim Bradford got the call for the third score with a four yard run. The scoring play was set up by an 80 yard drive.

The final touchdown of the night was scored by Schor making runs of 36, 23 and 8 yards. Jim Bradford crossed the goal line for the two-point conversion.

"I'm especially proud of our defense" coach Gary Fleming told the Reporter. They showed a lot of class when Westminster was about to score." The Lion defense held the visitors out of the endzone with a thrilling goasl line stand at the one foot line.

Outstanding defensive players for Briarwood were Steve Chambers, David Caradine, Jim Nelson, and Pat Trammell.

This week Briarwood travels to Mobile to play Independent Methodist. The game will be played at 1 p.m. Saturday afternoon due to the effects of the recent hurricane that swept the Gulf coast.

Cardone runs into Warriors

Fall to T.C.T.S.

Hornets still winless

by Richard Crosby

Chelsea's Hornets are still winless after three outings. Last Friday night, the Tigers from T.C.T.S. claimed a 14 to 0 win over the Shelby County team.

"I've never been as disappointed over a game in my life," coach Richard Conkle told the Reporter. "We're going to have to make a stand somewhere."

The Hornets have yet to put any points on the board this season, collecting three goose eggs the past three weeks.

Against Talladega, Chelsea's bad breaks started in the first quarter. The first time the Hornets got the ball, they drove inside the Tigers 20 yard line only to loose the ball on a fumble.

That set the stage for the night's game as Chelsea fumbled 12 times and lost nine of them. Four fumbles occurred on the center-quarterback exchange.

Talladega scored in the third quarter on a two yard run for paydirt that was set up by a 40 yard pass. In the fourth quarter, The Hornets fumbled a screen pass that was picked up and run back for a touchdown.

Statistic wise, Chelsea did everything to win the game except get points on the board. The Hornets totaled 220 yards offense to the Tigers 68. Chelsea also earned 14 first downs while allowing only four. Another note of interest is that Chelsea never punted.

This week the Hornets travel to Montevallo. Both Chelsea and Montevallo have yet to win this year and Montevallo has only posted six points on the board.

"They're tough" Conkle said of the Bulldogs. "I'ld rather coach against anybody but him (Gilliam). You have to prepare for everything."

Last year Montevallo whipped the Hornets 36 to 0 .

The best pick of the bunch this week had 10 correct games and won in the tiebreaker. She was the only one of the top finishers to pick Winterboro over pelham.

This week's entry blank is on page B-12. You'll note that we have started adding more college games and only chosen a few high school games to be picked.

Good luck and maybe you'll get that lucky call this weekend.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY CARRIES THIS MUCH LUMBER 174 MILES ON A GALLON OF FUEL.

"Guess how far a truck could carry it."
L. Stanley Crane, President,
Southern Railway System, Washington, D.C. 20013

The railroad is the most efficient user of fuel in the transportation industry. Bar none.

And the Southern Railway is one of the most efficient railroads in the country.

For instance, on the Southern, this 2,511-lb. load of lumber can travel 174 miles on one gallon of fuel. How far could a truck carry it on the same amount of fuel? Well, the railroad is four times more efficient than trucks, 60 times more efficient than planes, and even more efficient than barges. So it's easy to see that trucks can't carry freight anywhere near as far as railroads can per gallon of fuel.

What does this mean for the future? Well, it means that trucks will be used less and less for long hauls. More and more products will ride on the Southern, and trucks will be used for distribution at the other end of the line. Because, in the coming years, only the railroad will have the energy-efficiency for long hauls.

We have the energy for the long haul.

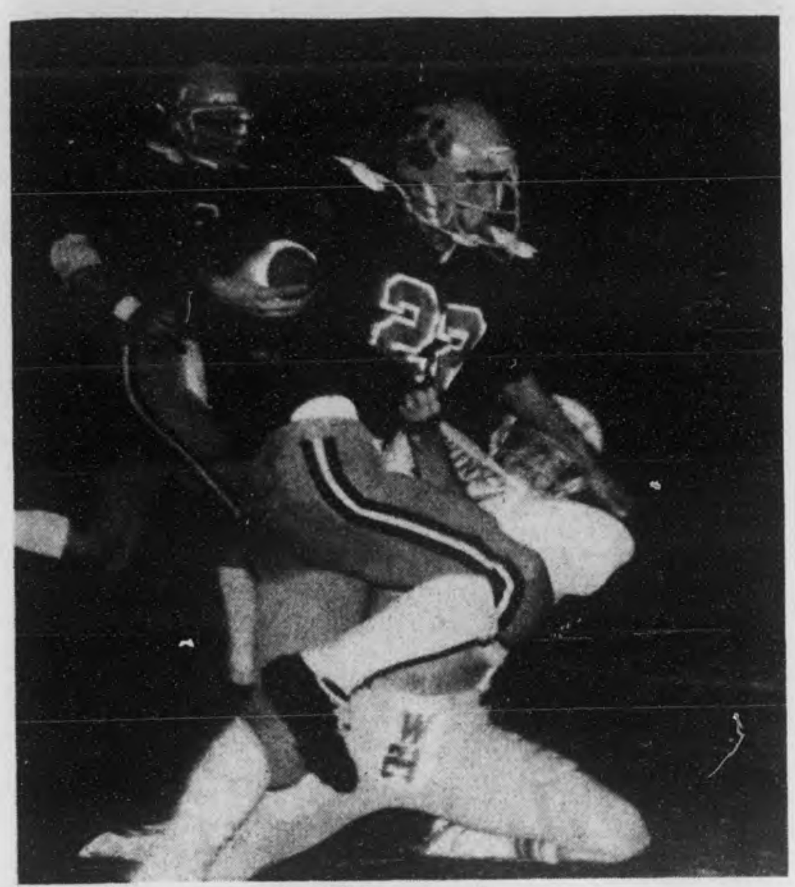
Panthers edged by Winterboro 6 to 0



Panther gets bulldogged

Pelham's Dale Busby stretches for more yardage as a Winterboro defender vainly tries to pull him to the groiund. The senior tailback for Pelham is the leading ground gainer. (photo by Gardner)

By Richard Crosby

Tough breaks in Pelham Friday night cost the Panthers their third win of the year. The Winterboro Bulldogs scored late in the first half and then held on to the 6-0 edge for the win.

"We played well enough to win" coach Steve Rivers said, "We just made too many mistakes. We're going to work this week on eliminating our mistakes."

Pelham took the opening kickoff and marched downfield 65 yards to the Winterboro five yard line, but a pass was bobled and picked off by the Bulldogs. Another opportunity in the fourth quarter was also dashed by an interception, this one on Winterboro's 12 yard line.

"We're moving the ball up and down the field between the 20's, but not putting it into the endzone" Rivers commented. "We had our chances but didn't take advantage of them."

The visitor's score came with 53 seconds remaining in the half on a 38 yard touchdown pass. The PAT was wide.

This week the Panthers face a tough Oak Grove team which just scored its first win last week. "They're improving and so are we" Rivers said of the upcoming game which will be played in Pelham.

Dale Busby led the rushing attack for the Panthers with 98 yards on 19 carries. Barry Faulkner collected 51 yards on nine carries. Tim Chambless had his best game of the year against Winterboro. Defensively, Chris Cutcliff and Gerard Johnson were the stalwarts for Pelham.

Pelham, now 2-2 for the season, looks to get a third win of the year. Last year the Panthers only won two ballgames.

Richard's Picks

by Richard Crosby

Despite protests from various parts of the county, I'm still permitted to do my weekly forecast. So, all you folks with grudges will have to bear with me until the crystal ball works as advertised.

Pelham-Oak Grove - The Panthers are after win number three and by all odds they should get this week against the Oak Grove Tigers or Grovers as they used to be called. Prediction: Pelham 26, Grovers 6.

Vincent-Munford - The Yellowjackets don't want to be embarrassed at homecoming and they won't. Chalk up another win for Vincent as Munford gets murdered. Prediction: Vincent 33, Murdered 0.

Chelsea-Montevallo - This game is the do or die one for both teams as neither havewon a game this season and both have yet to prove anything offensively. I'ld pick the game a tie, but because this is an Area contest, the game will go into overtime if necessary to decide the winner.

the Area game must be decided. So, while fans may have to wait to midnight to know the outcome, Montevallo will reign. Prediction: Montevallo (after three overtime periods) 6, Chelsea 0.

Thompson-Shelby County - Another potential overtime contest that could well be decided in the final minutes of the game. If one team starts making mistakes it'll be a runaway. Just look for some hard knocking football. Prediction: Thompson 3, Shelby County 0.

Calera-Jemison - The Panthers may seem to be an improved team but when the Eagles come to town, folks will wonder why they didn't have the team caged. Prediction: Calera Cagers 25, Jemison 8.

Briarwood-Independent - The Lions have everything going for themselves and there's no reason this forecaster can think of why that should change. Prediction—Lions 29, Independents 0.

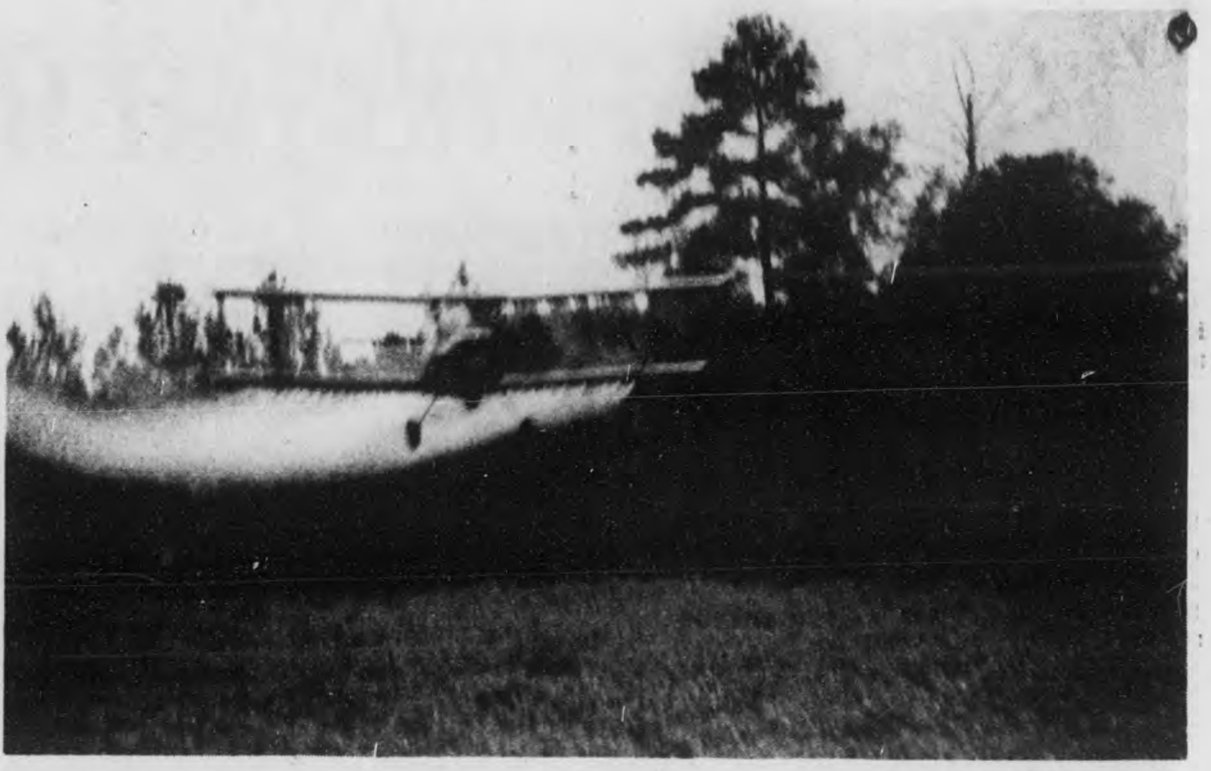
Revving up

Herman Muller climbs into his plane preparatory to dusting the cotton fields in northeast Shelby County.



Flying in low

With its 450 hp. engine roaring, the Grumman AgCat flies in low over a Harpersville cotton field, spraying a cotton defoliant. The plane's speed is 90 mph. Altitude is about seven feet. (Photos by Moore)

Moments of panic part of "fun" job for pilot

by David Moore

The biplane drones low over the trees. Just as it clears the woods, it takes a sudden plunge. A crack-up appears inevitable.

But at the last second, it levels off. There is no explosion, only the throaty roar of the engine as the plane skims so low over the field the pilot can almost reach out the open cockpit and grab a handful of cotton.

The trailing edges of the plane's lower wings spray a fine white mist which floats lightly to the field, leaving a sweet smell of poison on the air.

The spray, of course, is what crop dusting is all about. That, and staying alive.

Fifty feet from the trees at the end of the field the plane pulls up sharply, perhaps snatching up a few leaves in the landing gear. It is often that close.

"Well, a miss is as good as a mile," grins Herman Muller.

Muller is one of five pilots for Coosa Flying Service, a crop dusting company out of Gadsden which frequently works in eastern Shelby County. He flew from Navy carriers for 20 years and has been crop dusting for the past five.

Muller says he enjoys the work and the type of plane he flies, and knowing he's done a good, low job on a field. But, he points out, any romantic notions about crop dusting are overshadowed by the long hours, dirty engine oil and working with poison.

"If you didn't like flying a lot, it's a job you'd hate," says Bill Collins, owner of Coosa Flying Service.

Crop dusting is a seasonal job. During April and May the demand is for fertilizing. From July through September crop dusters wage aerial warfare against boll weevils and worms, and encroaching grass in soy bean fields. Octobers are spent seeding rye and spraying defoliants on cotton fields to make harvesting easier.

During summers the company sprays for mosquitoes along the Coosa for Alabama Power and the Corps of Engineers.

To spray a field, Collins explains, the pilot tries to work across it length-wise, flying upwind to keep the chemicals from blowing back on the plane. For optimum coverage, the pilot flies at an altitude of three to seven feet and a speed of 90 mph.

Collins and Muller usually dust with a Grumman AgCat, a rugged biplane powered by a radial nine cylinder Pratt and Whitney powerplant which develops 450 hp. The plane can out manuever most anything around, claims Collins.

On a given swath, or spray run, the AgCats carry from 150-225 gallons of chemical. It takes about 20 minutes to spray a load.

Watching the crop dusters work, as many people from Wilsonville, Harpersville and Vincent often do, it is like going to an air show for free. The low flying biplane manuevers like a World War I plane in a dogfight.

Collins explains that 25 years ago, crop dusting was done by daredevil pilots, but today it is taken as a serious business.

"I try to hire pilots who aren't the daredevil type," he says. "This is hard work and can be dangerous."

Muller notes that 25-30 crop dusting accidents occur in the U.S. each month. About 30 percent of them are fatal.

"But the good ol' American way is that it will always happen to the other guy," Muller rationalizes.

To keep the job as safe as possible, Collins and his crew spend a good ideal of time on maintenance. The other key to safety is keeping alert and knowing the area you fly, he says.

The general procedure for a run is to come in as low as possible over the field, pull up at the end of the row, do a half-stall at 200 feet and roll back for the next run.

"Your worst problem is where your engine fails at stall and you don't have time to do anything but land immediately," explains Muller. "The other experience is when you go into a small field and the trees are coming up and you get a down draft right about the time you want to go over the trees. You usually come back with some leaves."

Collins says he crop dusts because he likes to do his own flying and enjoys working with farm people. His company spends four out of five days flying in Shelby County for people like Terry Wyatt, Herschell Lansford, and Don Davis.

Speaking about the people of both Shelby and Talladega Counties, Collins says, "They're sincerely nicer than anyone else in Alabama or Georgia."

Asked for a brief description of crop dusting, Collins says an old duster from Mississippi best summed it up when he said, "Crop dusting is hours and hours of boredom interupted by moments of stark fear."

Muller says, "Crop dusting is fun, with moments of sheer panic. Towards the end of the season you're ready for it to be over."

Mountain road takes toll on "Dead Man's Curve"

(History of the construction of Highway 25 over Coosa Mountain in Northeast Shelby County)

Part II by David Moore

I.B. Rutledge, an engineer for the state highway department, conducted a survey of the land and decided to use the ox cart trail up the Vandiver side of the mountain.

According to Grady Isbell, who once lived near the top of the mountain, the original survey called for the road to follow the old trail. It would have branched west at the present hairpin where Isbell once grew corn, and crossed the crest about a mile from where it does today. The road would have then dropped down the mountain to Possey Junction on Shoal Creek west of Dunnavant.

Shelby County engineer James Ray, who once knew the now deceased surveyor Rutledge, says that the state did not want to build the road to begin with, and therefore, following a second survey, made it as crooked as possible near the bottom of the Dunnavant side.

Earl Bowden, who runs the grocery in Dunnavant refers to the sharp curve coming down into Dunnavant as "Dead Man's Curve," and says he can recall 11 people being killed on it since 1932.

Bowden says he was 12 years old when work started on the highway over the mountain. In those days the state would summon the men of a community out to work on roads and pay their poll taxes for the services rendered.

Since his father was sick at the time, Bowden says he joined the other men of the community and helped in clearing the right-of-way. Using axes and cross-cut saws, it took about 50 men two and a half days to cut the right-of-way.

Ray says that road building in those days entailed the use of mule pulled slipscreens, horses and wagons, and backbreaking picking and shoveling. He says it is possible that a horse pulled road grader was used like the one mounted in front of the county's road department.

Y gymnasts to compete

Gymnastics is off to a flying start at the Shelby County YMCA this year with 52 youngsters enrolled in the program. And there's still room for more.

This year there will be an added incentive to excell in the sport because instructor Mary Byrun says that her students will be competing against other Y groups and elementary schools that have gymnastics programs.

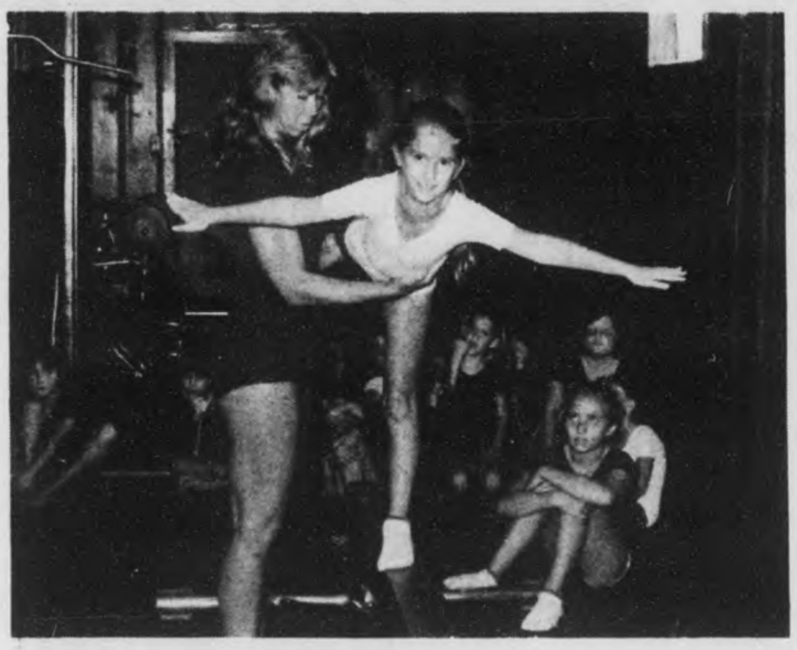
In addition to the balance beam, budding gymnasts can also work out on the Y's uneven parallel bars which are new this year.

Classes are held Monday, Wednesday and Friday and students can choose to come all three days, just Monday and Wednesday or Friday only.

Another program that is expected to be popular is disco dancing.

Five weeks of classes will begin Oct. 2 and be held every Tuesday from 7:30-9 p.m.

Instructors will be Louise and Richard Jones from Caro-Mar Dance Studio in Pelham.



Program underway

Both boys and girls are enrolled in the gymnastics program at the Shelby County YMCA which will compete with other groups this year. Instructor Mary Byrun works with Kim Kirby on the balance beam.

Abex executive aids United Way

James D. Huffman, foreman trainer with the Abex Corporation of Calera, is serving as a sponsored executive with the current United Way program.

The United Way serves Shelby, Jefferson and Walker Counties.

Sponsored executives are loaned from private business and industry to work for 10 weeks during the annual fund raising campaign. During this time they are relived of their regular job responsibilities.

Huffman's efforts will help fund 47 United Way agencies which provide a wide variety of services to the more than 3/4 million people who live in the three counties.

JAMES D. HUFFMAN

Loehmann's opens store

The first of some 40 stores and shops comprising Loehmann's Village opened with a flourish at 9:30 Monday morning when more than 300 shoppers poured into Loehmann's during the first nine minutes after the store officially opened its doors.

Loehmann's, the first of three "anchor tenants" to open its doors, has some 15,000 square feet of selling space and sells designer merchandise including furs, dresses, coats, sportswear and rainwear at reduced prices.

Loehmann's, a 55 year old business, has a network of nearly 60 stores on the East Coast, Atlanta, Los Angeles, Chicago, Texas and other states. Loehmann's in Riverchase is the first to be located in Alabama.

The other two "anchor stores" to be located in the 200,000 square foot open air shopping mall will open in the near future. They are Service Merchandise Company and T.P. Corckmier's.

Service Merchandise, a Nashville based operation, is one of the nation's largest catalog showroom merchandising firms with nearly 100 stores in 19 states. The company is engaged in the sale of a broad line of jewelry, diamonds and nationally advertised hardgoods. When open, Service Merchandise will occupy a store with 52,000 square feet of retail space.

The third "anchor store", T.P. Crockmier's, will be an 8,000 square foot restuarant and lounge. It will be the firm's second facility in the Birmingham area.

Developed by Johnson-Rast and Hays, Loehmann's Village open air shopping mall is located on the Jefferson County side of the Cahaba River just east of U.S. Highway 31.

Attracting industry is conference theme

Locally elected officials as well as industrial development individuals and other citizens interested in the economic growth of Shelby are reminded that the 14th Annual Industrial Development Conference is set for September 25 and 26 at the Plaza Hotel South in Birmingham.

This year's conference has been planned with small towns and rural areas in mind. The program scheduled has been set up to help these small areas achieve economic growth through the acquisition of manufacturing payrolls.

Many of the speakers and panelists on the program are people who have been successful in attracting industry to their particular areas. In addition, they are people who recognize the special problems of small towns and rural communities and have the know-how of changing them into opportunities.

The conference is sponsored by the University of Alabama Graduate School of Business, supported by numerous groups throughout the state.

Registration fee is $20 and should be sent to C. E. Adams, director of Conference Activities, P. O. Box 2967, University, Alabama 35486.

The South's forest industry planted a record 629,370,682 pine and hardwood trees during the 1978-79 planting season, but that's not enough to meet the double-demand for wood and paper products projected for the year 2020, says Southern Forest Institute.

"Here is a fabulous Chippendale mahogany bookcase cabinet--dated 1800. Look at the sheen--this antique piece is in top condition...do I hear bids for this beauty?

The auctioneer's voice booms out persuasively and the highest bidder takes home a valuable period bookcase.

Antique enthusiasts from all over the South are on hand at bimonthly auctions at Pelham Mall's Auction Gallery.

Licensed auctioneers, Col. Charles W. Clements, Col. Dave Patterson, Col. Bob Byrum, and Col Charles W. Clements, Jr. call the event which is usually on the first and third Friday nights of every month beginning at 6:30.

The antiques offered at the Auction Gallery include everything from tremendous china breakfronts to sterling silver services and antique porcelain china.

Valuable antiques

Howard Bonds, manager of the Auction Gallery, stands beside a valuable antique lamp and a beautiful inlaid oriental folding screen. Auctions are held the first and third Friday night of every month.

The items, all top quality, are purchased from individuals, antique dealers, and often from estate sales.

Oriental pieces, which are the rage in today's decorating circles, are commonplace at an Auction Gallery auction. Japanese screens, urns, paintings, and even china cabinets are usually among items offered.

Plush oriental rugs, in small sizes as wel as wall-to-wall sizes are among the valuable antiques in stock.

Among the beautiful furniture you see as you wander through the gallery (the gallery is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. - 6 p.m.), you'll see brilliantly polished brass beds, solid pine grandfather clocks, American paintings, crystal Vic-

Because so many items are sold at each auction, new pieces are brought in after every sale. Every auction offers a brand new line of articles to choose from.

Pieces from historical decades in the history of America as well as France, China, and England fill the gallery's chambers.

Desks, chests, dining suits, tea services, portraits, candlesticks, lamps, mirrorss, even vases and planters are among the many interesting antiques you'll see at the Auction Gallery.

Reserved seats for the auctions can be obtained by calling Howard Bonds at 663-1994, or better yet, drive out to the gallery, located in Pelham Mall, 2842 Montgomery Hwy. and pick out the antiques you want to bid for at the next sale.

Refreshments are served at the auctions and even if you don't find that prized piece you've been looking for, it's fun to hear that auctioneer do what he does best.

"Going once, going twice...sold, and this highest bidder is now the proud owner of a genuine Chippendale cabinet. It' all your's sir!"

Goof department

In the hurry of putting together last week's newspaper on the problems connected with Hurricane Frederic, the Reporter mislabeled a church in one of the photographs.

The church with the downed oak tree was Lester's Chapel United Methodist Church rather than Liberty Baptist Church.

Reports from Lester's Chapel this week indicate the tree was quickly removed and church services were not disturbed.

History comes alive in Shelby

Students who attend Shelby Elementary School are just a stone's throw from the iron ore mine that made their area prosper in the early days of settlement.

And students in social studies classes will be visiting the site of the old Shelby Iron Company as they study about their community both past and present.

Learning all they can about the background of the company where people in Shelby made their living for so many years will be just one of the projects students will be involved with as they go through the study.
